Sentence to state penal system improper. — Defendant's third conviction within five years for driving under the influence was classified as a high and aggravated misdemeanor; therefore, the defendant could not be sentenced to imprisonment in the state penal system.

When a defendant is found guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for a maximum term of ten years or less, the judge may, in his discretion, impose punishment as for a misdemeanor.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Only punishment reduced, not crime. — General Assembly apparently intends that only the punishment, and not the class of crime, is subject to reduction by the court. Thus, the judge will not reduce a felony conviction to a misdemeanor, but will merely punish as for a misdemeanor. Ramsey v. Powell, 244 Ga. 745, 262 S.E.2d 61 (1979).

Punishment that may be imposed characterizes crime. — It is not the punishment imposed in a given case but the punishment that may be imposed that characterizes the crime. Ramsey v. Powell, 244 Ga. 745, 262 S.E.2d 61 (1979).

Determining punishment in honoring recommendation for misdemeanor punishment. — Determination of what punishment is to be imposed in honoring a recommendation that punishment as for a misdemeanor in connection with a felony conviction is exclusively for the court and is not within the province of the jury. Webb v. State, 136 Ga. App. 90, 220 S.E.2d 27 (1975).

Judge need not charge that jury can recommend misdemeanor punishment. — There is no error in a trial court's failure to charge a jury that the jury might recommend a misdemeanor punishment. Boatright v. State, 150 Ga. App. 283, 257 S.E.2d 314 (1979).

Judge does not have to charge section. — Since the jury no longer determines the sentence, it is not necessary that the trial judge charge this section. Stanley v. State, 136 Ga. App. 385, 221 S.E.2d 242 (1975).

Defendant failed to show deportable status and ineffective assistance. — Judgment finding that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for counsel's alleged failure to advise of deportation consequences for a destruction of property offense was reversed because the defendant's date of admission was not within five years of the date of the commission of the crime in 2002; thus, the defendant failed to prove that the defendant was deportable by virtue of having committed a crime of moral turpitude. State v. Addaquay, 302 Ga. 412, 807 S.E.2d 413 (2017).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Applicability of statutory restrictions on misdemeanor sentences. — Any active sentence imposed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-5 would necessarily fall within any statutory restrictions on misdemeanor sentences. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U82-47.

Mandatory language of former O.C.G.A. § 42-5-100(d), which governed the crediting of earned time to misdemeanants confined to county correctional facilities, applied when a felon was sentenced to confinement in a county jail as a condition of probation. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U82-47 (decided prior to 1983 amendment of § 42-5-100).

17-10-6.1. Punishment for serious violent offenders; authorization for reduction in mandatory minimum sentencing.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "serious violent felony" means:

(1) Murder or felony murder, as defined in Code Section 16-5-1;

(2) Armed robbery, as defined in Code Section 16-8-41;

(3) Kidnapping, as defined in Code Section 16-5-40;

(4) Rape, as defined in Code Section 16-6-1;

(5) Aggravated child molestation, as defined in subsection (c) of Code Section 16-6-4, unless subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of Code Section 16-6-4;

(6) Aggravated sodomy, as defined in Code Section 16-6-2; or

(7) Aggravated sexual battery, as defined in Code Section 16-6-22.2.

(b)(1) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this Code section, any person convicted of the serious violent felony of kidnapping involving a victim who is 14 years of age or older or armed robbery shall be sentenced to a mandatory minimum term of imprisonment of ten years, and no portion of the mandatory minimum sentence imposed shall be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld by the sentencing court.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this Code section, the sentence of any person convicted of the serious violent felony of:

(A) Kidnapping involving a victim who is less than 14 years of age;

(B) Rape;

(C) Aggravated child molestation, as defined in subsection (c) of Code Section 16-6-4, unless subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of Code Section 16-6-4;

(D) Aggravated sodomy, as defined in Code Section 16-6-2; or shall, unless sentenced to life imprisonment, be a split sentence which shall include a mandatory minimum term of imprisonment of 25 years, followed by probation for life, and no portion of the mandatory minimum sentence imposed shall be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld by the sentencing court.

(3) No person convicted of a serious violent felony shall be sentenced as a first offender pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, relating to probation for first offenders, or any other provision of Georgia law relating to the sentencing of first offenders. The State of Georgia shall have the right to appeal any sentence which is imposed by the superior court which does not conform to the provisions of this subsection in the same manner as is provided for other appeals by the state in accordance with Chapter 7 of Title 5, relating to appeals or certiorari by the state.

(c)(1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of Code Section 42-9-39, for a first conviction of a serious violent felony in which the accused has been sentenced to life imprisonment, that person shall not be eligible for any form of parole or early release administered by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles until that person has served a minimum of 30 years in prison. The minimum term of imprisonment shall not be reduced by any earned time, early release, work release, leave, or other sentence-reducing measures under programs administered by the Department of Corrections.

(2) For a first conviction of a serious violent felony in which the accused has been sentenced to death but the sentence of death has been commuted to life imprisonment, that person shall not be eligible for any form of parole or early release administered by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles until that person has served a minimum of 30 years in prison. The minimum term of imprisonment shall not be reduced by any earned time, early release, work release, leave, or other sentence-reducing measures under programs administered by the Department of Corrections.

(3) For a first conviction of a serious violent felony in which the accused has been sentenced to imprisonment for life without parole, that person shall not be eligible for any form of parole or early release administered by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles or for any earned time, early release, work release, leave, or other sentence-reducing measures under programs administered by the Department of Corrections.

(4) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, any sentence imposed for the first conviction of any serious violent felony shall be served in its entirety as imposed by the sentencing court and shall not be reduced by any form of parole or early release administered by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles or by any earned time, early release, work release, leave, or other sentence-reducing measures under programs administered by the Department of Corrections, the effect of which would be to reduce the period of incarceration ordered by the sentencing court; provided, however, that during the final year of incarceration an offender so sentenced shall be eligible to be considered for participation in a department administered transitional center or work release program.

(d) For purposes of this Code section, a first conviction of any serious violent felony means that the person has never been convicted of a serious violent felony under the laws of this state or of an offense under the laws of any other state or of the United States, which offense if committed in this state would be a serious violent felony. Conviction of two or more crimes charged on separate counts of one indictment or accusation, or in two or more indictments or accusations consolidated for trial, shall be deemed to be only one conviction.

(e) In the court's discretion, the judge may depart from the mandatory minimum sentence specified in this Code section for a person who is convicted of a serious violent felony when the prosecuting attorney and the defendant have agreed to a sentence that is below such mandatory minimum.

(f) Any sentence imposed pursuant to this Code section shall not be reduced by any earned time, early release, work release, leave, or other sentence-reducing measures under programs administered by the Department of Corrections, the effect of which would be to reduce the period of incarceration ordered by the sentencing court or any form of pardon, parole, or commutation of sentence by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles; provided, however, that during the final year of incarceration, a defendant so sentenced shall be eligible to be considered for participation in a Department of Corrections administered transitional center or work release program.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994.'"

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly declares and finds:

"(1) That persons who are convicted of certain serious violent felonies shall serve minimum terms of imprisonment which shall not be suspended, probated, stayed, deferred, or otherwise withheld by the sentencing judge; and

"(2) That sentences ordered by courts in cases of certain serious violent felonies shall be served in their entirety and shall not be reduced by parole or by any earned time, early release, work release, or other such sentence-reducing measures administered by the Department of Corrections."

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 16, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed on or after the effective date of this Act; provided, however, that any conviction occurring prior to, on, or after the effective date of this Act shall be deemed a 'conviction' for the purposes of this Act and shall be counted in determining the appropriate sentence to be imposed for any offense committed on or after the effective date of this Act." This Act became effective January 1, 1995.

Ga. L. 1998, p. 180, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly declares and finds: (1) That the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994,' approved April 20, 1994 (Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959), provided that persons convicted of one of seven serious violent felonies shall serve minimum mandatory terms of imprisonment which shall not otherwise be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld by the sentencing court; (2) That in State v. Allmond, 225 Ga. App. 509 (1997), the Georgia Court of Appeals held, notwithstanding the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994,' that the provisions of the First Offender Act would still be available to the sentencing court, which would mean that a person who committed a serious violent felony could be sentenced to less than the minimum mandatory ten-year sentence; and (3) That, contrary to the decision in State v. Allmond, it is the expressed intent of the General Assembly that persons who commit a serious violent felony specified in the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994' shall be sentenced to a mandatory term of imprisonment of not less than ten years and shall not be eligible for first offender treatment."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 1/HB 1059, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 30(c)/HB 1059, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment." This Act became effective July 1, 2006.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 8/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, an accused whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act, provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached or (2) the accused has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking prosecution after the remand."

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 9/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in Section 8 of this Act, the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act." This Act became effective April 29, 2009.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 10/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "A person may be sentenced to life without parole without the prosecutor seeking the death penalty under the laws of this state." Ga. L. 2011, p. 752, § 17(3)/HB 142 codified these provisions at Code Section 17-10-16.1.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(a)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the law as set forth in this Code section as it existed prior to April 29, 2009, shall apply to all offenses committed on and before April 29, 2009, and the amendments by this Act shall apply to all crimes committed on and after April 29, 2009.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(b)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

Ga. L. 2011, p. 752, § 17(2)/HB 142, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that the amendment to paragraph (b)(2) was made to conform with Merritt v. State, 286 Ga. 650 (2010).

Ga. L. 2013, p. 222, § 21/HB 349, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2013, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2013, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense."

Analysis

General Consideration
Specific Crimes
Sentencing

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 does not impose unconstitutionally excessive punishment and the fact that defendants were 18 years old at the time of sentencing and may have been first offenders did not render the statute unconstitutional as applied to the defendants. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185 (1997).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, which dictates the punishment for serious violent offenders, in conjunction with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the sentencing statute applicable to recidivist armed robbers, does not violate either the federal or the state constitutions. State v. Vanburen, 210 Vt. 293, 214 A.3d 791 (2019).

Statute governing the punishment for serious violent offenders does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution. State v. Vanburen, 210 Vt. 293, 214 A.3d 791 (2019).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(c)(1) and (c)(3) are not unconstitutional on the basis that, when taken together, they render defense counsel ineffective by presenting counsel with an impossible conundrum regarding the representation of a convicted client -- having to choose between seeking a term of years without parole, or a life sentence with a possibility of parole after fourteen years. Guyton v. State, 272 Ga. 529, 531 S.E.2d 94 (2000).

Statutory scheme governing punishment for a first-time rape conviction, O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-1(b) and 17-10-6.1, gave a defendant fair notice that the defendant could be sentenced either to life imprisonment, eligible for parole after 30 years, or a minimum of 25 years without parole, with any additional years likewise not subject to any possibility of parole. Therefore, the statutes were not unconstitutionally vague and allowed the defendant to intelligently plea bargain. Merritt v. State, 286 Ga. 650, 690 S.E.2d 835 (2010).

Eighth Amendment not violated by service of mandatory minimum sentences. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to assert that the state's statutory and constitutional provisions requiring the service of mandatory minimum sentences before consideration for parole regardless of age constituted cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution because any consideration for Eighth Amendment purposes of incomplete brain maturation due solely to age was inappropriate since the defendant was 20 years old at the time the defendant committed the crime and was sentenced to a term of years rather than death. Gandy v. State, 290 Ga. 166, 718 S.E.2d 287 (2011).

Legislative intent and authority. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 does not violate the separation of powers doctrine in that the legislature acted within constitutional bounds in establishing minimum and maximum punishment and in eliminating judicial discretion in sentencing certain violent offenders. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185 (1997).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 does not violate equal protection because the legislation bears a reasonable relationship to the legitimate legislative concern of deterring crime and ensuring that a court imposed sentence will be served in the sentence's entirety. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185 (1997).

Legislature's choice of sentence for a conviction on the charge of aggravated sexual battery, a ten year mandatory minimum prison sentence, was not so wholly irrational or grossly disproportionate to the severity of the crime that the sentence constituted cruel and unusual punishment; thus, that sentence imposed in the defendant's case was affirmed. Taylor v. State, 259 Ga. App. 457, 576 S.E.2d 916 (2003).

Hearsay statement of prosecutor establishing fact for sentencing. — Defendant's sentence was vacated because although the fact that the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist did not appear on the face of the sentencing sheet, the trial court did indicate that the court was following the state's recommendation in sentencing the defendant, and that recommendation included that the defendant be sentenced as a recidivist; a trial court cannot rely upon the hearsay statement of a prosecutor to establish a fact for purposes of sentencing. Thomas v. State, 310 Ga. App. 404, 714 S.E.2d 37 (2011).

Application. — State's claim that defendant's sentence was not subject to review because the sentence followed a probation revocation was rejected as the defendant initially was sentenced as a first offender; the first offender sentence was revoked, and a sentence of 12 or more years was imposed. State v. Swartz, 277 Ga. App. 241, 626 S.E.2d 210 (2006).

Applicability to offenses committed before 1998. — Defendant found guilty of a serious violent felony under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 could apply for first offender status prior to the 1998 amendments to that section and the First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq. Fleming v. State, 271 Ga. 587, 523 S.E.2d 315 (1999), reversing Fleming v. State, 233 Ga. App. 483, 504 S.E.2d 542 (1998); Horton v. State, 241 Ga. App. 605, 527 S.E.2d 254 (1999); Griffin v. State, 244 Ga. App. 447, 535 S.E.2d 783 (2000).

Since the defendants committed the crimes charged prior to the March 29, 1998, amendment to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 and enactment of the provision in O.C.G.A. § 42-8-66, stating that a defendant who is convicted of a serious violent felony as defined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a) is not eligible for first offender treatment, the trial court erred in determining that the defendants were not eligible for first offender status. Riley v. State, 243 Ga. App. 697, 534 S.E.2d 437 (2000).

Prior to the 1998 amendments to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 and to the First Offender Act (O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq.), a defendant found guilty of a serious violent felony under that section was not barred from requesting and obtaining first offender treatment. Burns v. State, 241 Ga. App. 886, 528 S.E.2d 547 (2000).

Applying the Georgia Supreme Court's holding from Fleming v. State, 271 Ga. 587 (523 S.E.2d 315) (1999), resentencing was required because, prior to the 1998 amendments to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.1 and 42-8-60 et seq., a defendant found guilty of a serious violent felony under § 17-10-6.1 was not precluded from requesting and obtaining first offender treatment. Burleson v. State, 242 Ga. App. 217, 529 S.E.2d 228 overruling State v. Allmond, 225 Ga. App. 509, 484 S.E.2d 306 (1997).

Since the serious violent felonies committed by the defendant occurred prior to the March 29, 1998, amendment to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 and enactment of the provision in O.C.G.A. § 42-8-66, stating that a defendant who is convicted of a serious violent felony as defined in § 17-10-6.1(a) is not eligible for first offender treatment, then the prohibition of the latter section had no retroactive application to the defendant to limit the discretion of the trial judge in what sentence to impose. Camaron v. State, 246 Ga. App. 80, 539 S.E.2d 577 (2000).

Person convicted of serious violent felony cannot be sentenced as first offender. — Allowing the defendant who was sentenced to ten years for armed robbery, eleven years for aggravated assault, and five years on a firearms charge, all to be served concurrently, to serve the remainder of the sentence on probation after serving ten years, the mandatory minimum sentence for armed robbery was illegal and therefore completely void. State v. Hamilton, 238 Ga. App. 40, 517 S.E.2d 583 (1999).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel in entering the defendant's guilty plea even though the defendant asserted, in part, that trial counsel misled the defendant about the applicability of first offender treatment; the defendant was properly informed that first offender treatment was not available under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 as the defendant committed felony murder. Shaheed v. State, 276 Ga. 291, 578 S.E.2d 119 (2003).

Defendant was not eligible to be sentenced as a first offender because such treatment was not available for a conviction for armed robbery. Johnson v. State, 274 Ga. App. 848, 619 S.E.2d 488 (2005).

There was no error in the trial court's failure to convict the defendant of kidnapping and armed robbery, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-40 and 16-8-41, respectively, under the First Offender Act as O.C.G.A. § 42-8-66 specifically stated that the Act did not apply to sentences for violent felonies outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, and those two crimes were listed as serious violent felonies. Isaac v. State, 275 Ga. App. 254, 620 S.E.2d 483 (2005).

Due process. — Defendants were not deprived of due process of law on the basis that the constraints upon the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 denied the defendants meaningful allocution. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185 (1997).

Construction with § 17-10-1. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(b) does not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 and, thus, the trial court has no discretion to alter or to allow the parole board to alter the mandatory minimum sentence of ten years for any serious violent felony, including armed robbery. Taylor v. State, 241 Ga. App. 439, 526 S.E.2d 910 (1999).

Since the defendant pled guilty to aggravated child molestation, the trial court did not err in ruling that the court lacked discretion to sentence the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(b). Rolader v. State, 249 Ga. App. 213, 547 S.E.2d 778 (2001).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(g)(1), the trial court lacked the authority to probate or suspend sentences imposed against two defendants in unrelated criminal actions, and neither the 2004 nor the 2006 amendments to the general sentencing provisions under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1) were relevant; moreover, because O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-6.2 were statutes that defined certain categories of crimes and provided the sentencing guidelines for those categories, it did not appear that the list of these two exceptions normally would have included § 16-13-31 or any other specific criminal statute, and any omission would be significant only with regard to a statute that defined classes or categories of crimes. Gillen v. State, 286 Ga. App. 616, 649 S.E.2d 832 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1780, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 809 (Ga. 2007).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 49-4A-9(e). — Discretion given to sentencing courts for reviewing the sentences of juveniles turning 17 in O.C.G.A. § 49-4A-9(e) was limited by the mandatory minimum sentence requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1; therefore, in reviewing a juvenile's prison sentence for armed robbery, the superior court erred by reducing the juvenile's original five-year prison sentence to which the state had agreed. State v. Hudson, 303 Ga. 348, 812 S.E.2d 270 (2018).

Specific Crimes

Sentence for burglary and aggravated assault. — Defendant's 20-year sentences without parole for burglary and aggravated assault were not improper merely because the defendant was eligible for parole on the murder conviction after 14 years, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(c)(1); O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c) mandated the maximum sentences for burglary and aggravated assault without parole, and did not require probation or suspension of any part. Clark v. State, 279 Ga. 243, 611 S.E.2d 38 (2005).

Application to kidnapping. — Defendant was incorrect in arguing that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 reduced the applicable sentence in a kidnapping case to a minimum of ten years with life being discretionary as the statute established a mandatory minimum sentence for certain violent felonies, including kidnapping. Fulcher v. State, 259 Ga. App. 648, 578 S.E.2d 264 (2003).

There is no requirement that a kidnapping victim receive bodily injury when sentencing is pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1; moreover, as the defendant had also been convicted of armed robbery, the trial court correctly imposed a mandatory life without parole sentence for either of the defendant's second serious violent felonies: kidnapping and armed robbery. Moorer v. State, 286 Ga. App. 395, 649 S.E.2d 537 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1910, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 806 (Ga. 2007).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to raise the constitutionality of the defendant's mandatory minimum sentence of 25 years imprisonment without parole, as codified in O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-40(d)(2) and 17-10-6.1(b)(2), because the defendant's concurrent 25-year sentences for child kidnapping did not raise a threshold inference of gross disproportionality; after beating the mother in the young children's presence so severely as to break her jaw and cause other injuries, the defendant ordered all three of the victims to enter a car, drove the victims away, and left the victims in a location where the victims were isolated and unprotected. Jones v. State, 290 Ga. 670, 725 S.E.2d 236 (2012).

O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-40(d)(2) and 17-10-6.1(b)(2), as applied to the defendant, did not violate due process because an earlier indictment charged regular kidnapping and, only after plea negotiations failed, the more severe sentence was included in a re-indictment because such circumstances did not raise a presumption of prosecutorial vindictiveness in the absence of actual evidence thereof. Jones v. State, 290 Ga. 670, 725 S.E.2d 236 (2012).

Different sentences for kidnapping based on victim's age. — O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-40(d)(2) and 17-10-6.1(b)(2) do not violate equal protection by punishing a person differently depending on the age of the victim because that classification is not arbitrarily drawn and, instead, is rationally related to the legitimate governmental interest in protecting children. Jones v. State, 290 Ga. 670, 725 S.E.2d 236 (2012).

Application to child molestation. — Defendant's sentence to life imprisonment without parole for the defendant's conviction of aggravated child molestation was not illegal as it was the defendant's second "serious violent felony" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a)(5), and accordingly, the trial court had no discretion but to impose that sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2); it was noted that the defendant's motion to vacate, modify, correct, or set aside the sentence was made four and a half years after the defendant's sentencing, at which point the trial court no longer had jurisdiction because it was past the court's term. Gosnell v. State, 262 Ga. App. 641, 586 S.E.2d 350 (2003).

Mandatory sentence for aggravated child molestation of ten years without parole pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-4(d)(1) and 17-10-6.1 was not cruel and unusual punishment as applied to the defendant, despite the fact that the defendant was 18 years old at the time of the act and the victim was only four years younger. Widner v. State, 280 Ga. 675, 631 S.E.2d 675 (2006).

Sentence cruel and unusual when defendant 17 and victim 15. — Habeas court properly ruled that an inmate's sentence of ten years in prison for having consensual oral sex with a 15-year-old when the inmate was only 17 years old constituted cruel and unusual punishment in light of the 2006 amendments to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-4 and 42-1-12. Humphrey v. Wilson, 282 Ga. 520, 652 S.E.2d 501 (2007).

Defendant failed to establish that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to a guilty plea to aggravated child molestation and other crimes as the defendant failed to show that the defendant indicated any time prior to sentencing that the defendant wanted to withdraw the guilty plea. Further, although the defendant established that defense counsel improperly advised the defendant that parole was possible, since the defense strategy in seeking the plea agreement was not to ensure parole eligibility but to minimize the defendant's exposure to sentencing as a recidivist, no ineffectiveness was established. Floyd v. State, 293 Ga. App. 235, 666 S.E.2d 611 (2008).

Application to incest. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a defendant's post-conviction motion for deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) testing because the defendant was barred from requesting DNA testing under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-41(c)(3) since the defendant's conviction for the crime of incest in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22(a)(3) was not defined as a serious violent felony under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a). Hunter v. State, 294 Ga. App. 583, 669 S.E.2d 533 (2008).

Rape sentences proper. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a) defined both rape and aggravated sodomy as "serious violent felonies"; thus, in light of a prior aggravated sodomy conviction, a trial court would have been required to sentence the defendant to life without parole for subsequent violent rape felonies under the sentencing statutes either as the statutes existed at the time of the rapes, 1996, or at the time of the defendant's trial, 1998. Thompson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 657, 632 S.E.2d 407 (2006).

Scrutiny of rape sentence not prohibited. — Fairness of a defendant's sentence of life imprisonment for being a party to rape was not examined because, contrary to the defendant's claims, the plain terms of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a)(5) did not prohibit the defendant from applying for scrutiny of the sentence by the Georgia Sentence Review Panel; as the defendant conceded, the sentence fell within the statutory limits under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-2-21 and 16-6-1, and as a rule, sentences that fell within such limits were not reviewed for legal error. Johnson v. State, 283 Ga. App. 99, 640 S.E.2d 644 (2006).

Misinformation about review of rape charge. — Misinformation about review from the Sentence Review Panel came after the defendant pled guilty to the rape charge and thus could not have contributed to the defendant's decision to enter a guilty plea. Askew v. State, 318 Ga. App. 454, 734 S.E.2d 222 (2012).

Sentencing

Sentence not grossly out of proportion. — Claim by the defendant that a sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-22.2(b) and 17-10-6.1(b)(2) constituted cruel and unusual punishment because the sentence was grossly out of proportion to the severity of the crime, and that the sentence was overly severe under the circumstances, was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Georgia Supreme Court when the claim challenged the constitutionality of the statutes themselves; as the sentence was legally authorized and within statutory limits, the sentence was upheld. Colton v. State, 297 Ga. App. 795, 678 S.E.2d 521 (2009).

Plea bargains. — Since the defendant entered a negotiated guilty plea and received the sentences for which the defendant had bargained, the defendant's argument that the defendant's attorney did not inform the defendant of the defendant's possible parole eligibility and that the court did not tell the defendant that the defendant would not be eligible for parole did not alter the voluntariness of the defendant's plea since parole eligibility is not so much a direct consequence of a trial court's acceptance of a plea bargain as it is a collateral legislative consequence of the defendant's own decision to accept a certain sentence in exchange for the defendant's plea, and the court is entitled to presume that a defendant has apprised oneself of such collateral consequences before agreeing to accept that plea bargain. Wilcox v. State, 236 Ga. App. 235, 511 S.E.2d 597 (1999).

Defendant was not entitled to relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2254; the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by counsel's failure to inform the defendant that the defendant faced a mandatory life sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 because the evidence showed that the defendant likely would not have accepted a plea bargain that included a 15 to 25-year sentence because the victim's whereabouts were unknown, and the defendant felt that the aggravated assault and armed robbery case against the defendant was weak without the victim's testimony. Carson v. Thompson, No. 06-12691, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 9692 (11th Cir. Apr. 27, 2007) (Unpublished).

When the defendant entered a negotiated guilty plea to malice murder, and the state nol prossed the remaining charges, the defendant's plea counsel was not ineffective as the defendant was correctly advised in numerous ways about the defendant's parole eligibility because the plea offer cited O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(c)(1) and stated that the defendant had to serve 30 years before being eligible for parole; the defendant signed the offer to show the defendant's acceptance of its terms; and, at the plea hearing, the trial court asked the defendant if the defendant understood how the possibility of parole worked; the defendant answered yes; and the defendant stated that it would be 30 years under the plea. Stokes v. State, 299 Ga. 37, 785 S.E.2d 883 (2016).

Mandated minimum not excessive. — Mandated minimum ten year prison term under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 was not unconstitutionally excessive. Carter v. State, 257 Ga. App. 620, 571 S.E.2d 831 (2002).

Resentencing did not violate double jeopardy. — Because the defendant's original sentence upon conviction for aggravated sexual battery was not in compliance with the minimum sentence requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, resentencing did not violate double jeopardy. Bryant v. State, 229 Ga. App. 534, 494 S.E.2d 353 (1998).

Trial court was without jurisdiction to resentence the defendant after expiration of the term during which the sentence was entered since the sentence was not void. Shaw v. State, 233 Ga. App. 232, 504 S.E.2d 18 (1998).

Sentencing according to guidelines at time of crime. — Defendant convicted of rape was required to be sentenced in accordance with the sentencing provisions that existed at the time of the defendant's crime, and the court's failure to sentence the defendant according to guidelines in effect at the time rendered the sentence void ab initio, requiring resentencing. Lockhart v. State, 227 Ga. App. 481, 489 S.E.2d 594 (1997).

Split sentences. — Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to vacate sentences for child molestation, aggravated child molestation, and incest was upheld because to apply the split-sentencing provisions to pre-2006 law would require the court to re-write applicable statutes to make them subject to statutory provisions that did not even exist at the time the statutes were enacted, which the court was prohibited to do without contravening the plain meaning of the statutory text. Bryson v. State, 350 Ga. App. 206, 828 S.E.2d 450 (2019).

Parole. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(c)(1) gives a defendant no affirmative right to parole. Howard v. State, 233 Ga. App. 724, 505 S.E.2d 768 (1998), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669 (2003).

Trial court's failure to advise defendants of the "no parole" policy of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 did not constitute manifest injustice mandating reversal. Bess v. State, 235 Ga. App. 372, 508 S.E.2d 664 (1998).

Counsel not ineffective in advising on sentence. — Trial counsel's performance was not deficient for not informing the defendant that the defendant would not be eligible for parole for 30 years because the offenses of trafficking a person for sexual servitude that the defendant was convicted of did not constitute serious violent felonies; and no other authority or competent evidence supported the defendant's claim that the defendant would not be eligible for parole until the defendant served 30 years in prison; thus, trial counsel did not misinform the defendant as to the defendant's parole eligibility if the defendant rejected the plea deal, was convicted at trial, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Byrd v. State, 344 Ga. App. 780, 811 S.E.2d 85 (2018), overruled on other grounds by Thomas v. State, 352 Ga. App. 640, 835 S.E.2d 640 (2019).

Counsel ineffective for failing to inform defendant of ineligibility for parole. — Habeas court erred by holding that a petitioner was not affirmatively misinformed by petitioner's counsel regarding petitioner's parole eligibility on a 20-year sentence for armed robbery because, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, the petitioner was required to serve the entire 20 years. Remand to the habeas court was required to determine whether, but for counsel's deficiency, the petitioner would have proceeded to trial rather than plead guilty. Johnson v. Roberts, 287 Ga. 112, 694 S.E.2d 661 (2010).

Ignorance of parole eligibility was a collateral consequence that did not render defendant's guilty plea involuntary. — Defendant's claimed lack of knowledge that, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(c)(1), the defendant would be ineligible for parole until the defendant had served 30 years, did not render the guilty plea to felony murder and other crimes involuntary, because the knowledge of parole ineligibility was a collateral consequence. Stinson v. State, 286 Ga. 499, 689 S.E.2d 323 (2010).

Sentence violating minimum sentencing requirements. — In sentencing a defendant who was convicted on three counts of aggravated child molestation and nine counts of child molestation, the trial court erred as a matter of law in merging the three aggravated child molestation convictions into the child molestation convictions, thereby violating the minimum sentencing requirements under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a). Graham v. State, 239 Ga. App. 429, 521 S.E.2d 249 (1999).

Trial court's imposition of a ten year probated sentence on a count of aggravated child molestation was null and void; O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(d)(1) imposed a ten year minimum sentence for the offense, and under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(b), because the offense was a serious violent felony, no portion of the ten year sentence was to be probated. Priest v. State, 281 Ga. App. 89, 635 S.E.2d 377 (2006).

Prior out of state convictions. — There was no merit to the defendant's contention that the trial court erred in sentencing the defendant to life in prison without parole under the recidivist provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2) since the defendant was convicted of a serious violent felony, armed robbery, and the state produced evidence that the defendant had previously been convicted in Florida of the offense of armed robbery, which, if committed in Georgia, would also have been a serious violent felony as defined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a). Cordy v. State, 257 Ga. App. 726, 572 S.E.2d 73 (2002).

Habeas court properly found that an inmate's prior West Virginia conviction for second-degree murder was a "serious violent felony" under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1. Although the language of the West Virginia indictment, charging that the inmate did "feloniously, willfully, maliciously, deliberately and unlawfully slay, kill and murder" the victim, did not directly track the language of Georgia's murder statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1, the indictment was sufficient to show that the same offense, if committed in Georgia, would be a serious violent felony. Walker v. Hale, 283 Ga. 131, 657 S.E.2d 227, cert. denied, 555 U.S. 911, 129 S. Ct. 255, 172 L.Ed.2d 192 (2008).

Illegal sentence. — Although the evidence was sufficient to find the defendant guilty of murder beyond a reasonable doubt, because the defendant was convicted of capital murder, the defendant could not be sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a), the recidivist statute; the illegal sentence could not be waived. Funderburk v. State, 276 Ga. 554, 580 S.E.2d 234 (2003).

Void sentence. — Because the defendant's questions and discovery claims were speculative, the defendant failed to show error in their exclusion or denial; however, because none of the prior offenses on which the recidivist sentencing was based was a serious violent felony as defined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, the sentence of life imprisonment without parole for capital murder was void. Dempsey v. State, 279 Ga. 546, 615 S.E.2d 522 (2005).

Construing O.C.G.A. § 16-10-94(c), and in order to avoid rendering the terms "and involving another person" meaningless, the court had to interpret that language as imposing felony punishment when the person committed the tampering offense involving the prosecution or defense of a third person; hence, because the state did not present any allegations or evidence indicating that the defendant committed the tampering offense to prevent the apprehension or prosecution of anyone other than the defendant, the felony sentence imposed was void, and had to be vacated. English v. State, 282 Ga. App. 552, 639 S.E.2d 551 (2006).

Life sentence properly imposed. — Because the state introduced certified copies of the defendant's prior serious violent felonies convictions, the trial court correctly imposed a sentence of life imprisonment without parole for murder under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(b). Henry v. State, 279 Ga. 615, 619 S.E.2d 609 (2005).

Motion to be removed from sex offender registry properly denied and first offender treatment inappropriate. — Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion to remove the defendant from the sex offender registry, or in the alternative to be resentenced as a first offender, as the United States Supreme Court had already determined that retroactive registration of sex offenders was nonpunitive and did not constitute an ex post facto law, and to resentence the defendant as a first offender would be in direct contravention of the plain language of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.1 and 42-1-12 since the defendant pled guilty but mentally ill to kidnaping a child under the age of 14, which was a serious violent felony. Finnicum v. State, 296 Ga. App. 86, 673 S.E.2d 604 (2009).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Constitutional limitations on power to parole. — As of January 1, 1995, there have been placed additional constitutional limitations on the power of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to parole. The limitations include the inability to parole during the mandatory minimum sentence for the seven serious violent felonies set out in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, the inability to parole for sentences of life without parole as set out in O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-7(b)(2) and 17-10-16, and the inability to parole for felony recidivists who are convicted for a fourth or subsequent such offense. Other felons and misdemeanants are required to serve the minimum time prescribed in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-45(b), subject to the authority reserved by statute to the board in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-46 to consider for clemency upon complying with certain notice procedures. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-4.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "sexual offense" means:

(1) Aggravated assault with the intent to rape, in violation of Code Section 16-5-21;

(2) False imprisonment, in violation of Code Section 16-5-41, if the victim is not the child of the defendant and the victim is less than 14 years of age;

(3) Sodomy, in violation of Code Section 16-6-2, unless subject to the provisions of subsection (d) of Code Section 16-6-2;

(4) Statutory rape, in violation of Code Section 16-6-3, if the person convicted of the crime is 21 years of age or older;

(5) Child molestation, in violation of subsection (a) of Code Section 16-6-4, unless subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of Code Section 16-6-4;

(6) Enticing a child for indecent purposes, in violation of Code Section 16-6-5, unless subject to the provisions of subsection (c) of Code Section 16-6-5;

(7) Improper sexual contact by employee or agent, as provided in Code Section 16-6-5.1;

(8) Incest, in violation of Code Section 16-6-22;

(9) A second or subsequent conviction for sexual battery, in violation of Code Section 16-6-22.1; or

(10) Sexual exploitation of children, in violation of Code Section 16-12-100, unless subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (f) of Code Section 16-12-100.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, and notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary, any person convicted of a sexual offense shall be sentenced to a split sentence which shall include the minimum term of imprisonment specified in the Code section applicable to such sexual offense. No portion of the mandatory minimum sentence imposed shall be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld by the court. Any such sentence shall include, in addition to the mandatory term of imprisonment, an additional probated sentence of at least one year; provided, however, that when a court imposes consecutive sentences for sexual offenses, the requirement that the court impose a probated sentence of at least one year shall only apply to the final consecutive sentence imposed. No person convicted of a sexual offense shall be sentenced as a first offender pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42 or any other provision of Georgia law relating to the sentencing of first offenders.

(c)(1) In the court's discretion, the court may deviate from the mandatory minimum sentence as set forth in subsection (b) of this Code section, or any portion thereof, when the prosecuting attorney and the defendant have agreed to a sentence that is below such mandatory minimum or provided that:

(A) The defendant has no prior conviction of an offense prohibited by Chapter 6 of Title 16 or Part 2 of Article 3 of Chapter 12 of Title 16, nor a prior conviction for any offense under federal law or the laws of another state or territory of the United States which consists of the same or similar elements of offenses prohibited by Chapter 6 of Title 16 or Part 2 of Article 3 of Chapter 12 of Title 16;

(B) The defendant did not use a deadly weapon or any object, device, or instrument which when used offensively against a person would be likely to or actually did result in serious bodily injury during the commission of the offense;

(C) The court has not found evidence of a relevant similar transaction;

(D) The victim did not suffer any intentional physical harm during the commission of the offense;

(E) The offense did not involve the transportation of the victim; and

(F) The victim was not physically restrained during the commission of the offense.

(2) If the court deviates in sentencing pursuant to this subsection, the judge shall issue a written order setting forth the judge's reasons. Any such order shall be appealable by the defendant pursuant to Code Section 5-6-34, or by the State of Georgia pursuant to Code Section 5-7-1, unless the sentence imposed was pursuant to an agreement by the prosecuting attorney and the defendant.

(d) If the court imposes a probated sentence, the defendant shall submit to review by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board for purposes of risk assessment classification within ten days of being sentenced and shall otherwise comply with Article 2 of Chapter 1 of Title 42.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, rewrote paragraph (a)(7), which formerly read: "Sexual assault against persons in custody, in violation of Code Section 16-6-5.1;".

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 1/HB 1059, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 30(c)/HB 1059, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

Ga. L. 2013, p. 222, § 21/HB 349, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2013, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2013, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction with § 17-10-1. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(g)(1), the trial court lacked the authority to probate or suspend sentences imposed against two defendants in unrelated criminal actions, and neither the 2004 nor the 2006 amendments to the general sentencing provisions under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1) were relevant; moreover, because O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-6.2 were statutes that defined certain categories of crimes and provided the sentencing guidelines for those categories, it did not appear that the list of these two exceptions normally would have included § 16-13-31 or any other specific criminal statute, and any omission would be significant only with regard to a statute that defined classes or categories of crimes. Gillen v. State, 286 Ga. App. 616, 649 S.E.2d 832 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1780, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 809 (Ga. 2007).

"Sexual offense" applies only to section. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2 does not explain when registration as a sex offender is required but rather proscribes the mandatory minimum sentence for individuals convicted of a "sexual offense" and sets forth circumstances under which the trial court may depart from that sentence. The definition of "sexual offense" in § 17-10-6.2 has no application beyond that Code section. Phillips v. State, 298 Ga. App. 520, 680 S.E.2d 424 (2009).

Interpretation of "any portion thereof" in sentencing. — Defendant's sentence for statutory rape was affirmed because the "any portion thereof" language in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1) indicated that the legislature's intent was not to allow the trial court to deviate from the entirety of § 17-10-6.2(b), but rather to grant the trial court discretion to deviate only from the mandatory minimum sentence guidelines. Tew v. State, 320 Ga. App. 127, 739 S.E.2d 423 (2013).

Not applicable to crime committed before effective date. — Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2 was not in effect when the defendant committed the charged crime, the trial court committed no error in failing to apply its provisions when resentencing the defendant. Richardson v. State, 334 Ga. App. 344, 779 S.E.2d 406 (2015).

Intentional physical harm explained. — Term intentional physical harm as used in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(D) refers to conduct by the defendant involving the intentional infliction of physical pain or injury upon the victim and that, consequently, evidence that the underlying sexual offense involved offensive and unwanted touching of the victim did not, standing alone, create a presumption of intentional physical harm that precluded a defendant from satisfying the criteria for release under the statute. State v. Randle, 331 Ga. App. 1, 769 S.E.2d 724 (2015).

Phrase "intentional physical harm," as it was used in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(D), providing conditions for release from the sex offender registry, meant intentional physical contact that caused actual physical damage, injury, or hurt to the victim; a sex offender registrant was entitled to release from registration because the registrant's unwanted touching of a ten-year-old boy's penis did not constitute such physical damage, injury, or hurt. State v. Randle, 298 Ga. 375, 781 S.E.2d 781 (2016).

Following the interpretation of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(D) set forth by the Georgia Supreme Court in Randle II, the Georgia Court of Appeals concludes that the phrase intentional physical harm as used in the statute means a specific intent to commit the act that causes the physical damage, injury, or hurt to the victim. Strickland v. State, 347 Ga. App. 216, 818 S.E.2d 675 (2018).

Denial of petition for release from requirement to register. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's petition for release from the requirement to register as a sexual offender for life as the defendant failed to make a prima facie showing that the defendant was no longer a substantial risk of reoffending since an agency abuse case was pending against the defendant, which required a child of the defendant to not bring any children around the defendant, and the defendant characterized the conduct involving the child molestation of the defendant's three children as a mistake, which everyone makes. Miller v. State, 291 Ga. App. 478, 662 S.E.2d 261 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a defendant's petition seeking relief from the sexual offender registration requirements, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 42-1-12(g)(1), because the defendant failed to provide a report from a licensed psychiatrist that allegedly set forth an opinion that the defendant posed no threat whatsoever of reoffending. Further, the defendant failed to provide any additional information regarding the underlying conduct for the out-of-state conviction that required the registration. In re Baucom, 297 Ga. App. 661, 678 S.E.2d 118 (2009).

Defendant's confinement in a probation detention center was not equivalent to confinement in prison for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 42-1-12(g) and therefore the ten year waiting period for release from sex offender registration requirements did not begin running upon the defendant's release from the center, but from the date the defendant was released from probation. The trial court did not err in finding that the defendant was sentenced pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c), although that section was not enacted until after the defendant's conviction. In re White, 306 Ga. App. 365, 702 S.E.2d 694 (2010).

Trial court erred when the court denied the defendant's petition for release from the requirement to register as a sex offender and failed to determine whether the defendant ever touched a woman who testified at the criminal trial without the woman's consent, thereby committing a sexual offense; thus, since neither the verdict nor the evidentiary ruling in the defendant's case conclusively established that the encounter was a "relevant similar transaction," further proceedings were necessary. Yelverton v. State of Georgia, 300 Ga. 312, 794 S.E.2d 613 (2016).

Motion to be removed from sex offender registry properly denied. — Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion to remove the defendant from the sex offender registry, or in the alternative to be resentenced as a first offender, as the United States Supreme Court had already determined that retroactive registration of sex offenders was nonpunitive and did not constitute an ex post facto law, and to resentence the defendant as a first offender would be in direct contravention of the plain language of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.1 and 42-1-12 since the defendant pled guilty but mentally ill to kidnaping a child under the age of 14, which was a serious violent felony. Finnicum v. State, 296 Ga. App. 86, 673 S.E.2d 604 (2009).

Release from registration requirements proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in releasing the defendant from the sex offender registration requirements because under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(D) there was evidence that the underlying child molestation offense consisted of the defendant touching the genitals of the child victim with the defendant's hands, thus, the sexual offense did not rise to the level of intentional physical harm so as to preclude release from the registration requirements. State v. Randle, 331 Ga. App. 1, 769 S.E.2d 724 (2015).

Considering relevant similar transaction when sentencing. — Trial court properly refused to deviate from the mandatory minimum sentence for child molestation under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(C) because the court found the defendant's conviction for sexual exploitation of children was a relevant similar transaction and the phrase relevant similar transaction under § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(C) included a conviction for a sexual offense charged within the same indictment as the offense for which a deviation from the mandatory minimum sentence was considered. Evans v. State, 334 Ga. App. 104, 778 S.E.2d 360 (2015), aff'd, 300 Ga. 271, 794 S.E.2d 40 (Ga. 2016).

When the trial court considers sentencing on any specific count, a similar act not included in that count is independent to it such that, even if it is charged in the same indictment, it can be a "relevant similar transaction" so as to preclude a downward modification of sentencing; thus, the phrase "relevant similar transaction" used in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2 includes sexual offenses charged in the same indictment as the crime for which sentence is imposed. Therefore, the commission of multiple separate sexual offenses may, or may not, be prosecuted as one action, but the presence of such relevant similar transactions prevents a downward modification of the sentence to be afforded such an offender, regardless of the specifics of the prosecution. Evans v. State, 300 Ga. 271, 794 S.E.2d 40 (2016).

When the defendant was indicted on one count of child molestation, that was alleged to have occurred between January 1, 2009 and August 31, 2009, and two counts of sexual exploitation of children, that were alleged to have occurred on or about January 21, 2010, because the acts that the defendant was convicted of committing were well separated in time and were not part of one sequence of events, the trial court was correct to consider the act of sexual exploitation of a child to be a relevant similar transaction that precluded a downward modification of sentencing for the crime of child molestation. Evans v. State, 300 Ga. 271, 794 S.E.2d 40 (2016).

When the defendant was indicted on one count of child molestation and two counts of sexual exploitation of children, the trial court did not err in opining that the court could not sentence the defendant to less than the mandatory minimum of five years to serve in prison for the child molestation conviction because the conviction for sexual exploitation of children was a relevant similar transaction, which precluded a downward deviation under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2; and the trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to 20 years, with five years to be served in prison, on the child molestation charge, and a concurrent sentence of five years to be served in prison for the sexual exploitation conviction. Evans v. State, 300 Ga. 271, 794 S.E.2d 40 (2016).

First offender consideration appropriate for rapist. — Based on the plain language of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.2(a)(4) and 42-8-60(d)(2), a defendant who commits statutory rape is excluded from first offender consideration only if the defendant was 21 years of age or older. Thus, a defendant who was 18 at the time of the offense and 19 at the time of the conviction was eligible for first offender consideration. Planas v. State, 296 Ga. App. 51, 673 S.E.2d 566 (2009).

First offender consideration not appropriate. — Because the defendant was not entitled to first offender treatment for the crimes of child molestation and enticing a child for indecent purposes, to which the defendant pled guilty, the defendant's claims that trial counsel was deficient for misinforming the defendant about the defendant's eligibility for and failing to request first offender treatment were without merit. Harris v. State, 325 Ga. App. 568, 754 S.E.2d 148 (2014), recons. denied, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 30410 (11th Cir. Ga. 2019), overruled on other grounds by Collier v. State, 834 S.E.2d 769, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 708 (Ga. 2019).

Sentencing discretion. — Trial court erred in determining that the court was without discretion to deviate from the minimum sentencing requirements of

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(b), and the court of appeals erred in affirming that ruling because the defendants were charged with possession of material in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-12-100(b)(8) and, therefore, it would have to be shown that the child victims in the images that were stored in the defendants' computers were physically restrained at the same time that the defendants possessed the offending material in order for O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(F) to exclude the trial court from having the sentencing discretion set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1), but no such evidence existed; O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(F) precludes the trial court from exercising sentencing discretion when the victim was physically restrained during the commission of the offense, and the use of the words "during the commission of the offense" in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(c)(1)(F) must be given effect. Hedden v. State, 288 Ga. 871, 708 S.E.2d 287 (2011).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant on each of the defendant's three convictions for child molestation to a term of confinement rather than exercising the court's discretion and imposing split sentences of confinement and probation because the defendant had no prior conviction for child molestation. Watkins v. State, 336 Ga. App. 145, 784 S.E.2d 11 (2016).

Defendant's sentence on Count 2 of six years, to serve five, fell within the applicable statutory range of sentencing, according to the provisions of the law existing in 2003 and 2004, for a first offense of child molestation; thus, the defendant's sentence was legally authorized and not subject to review. Wilder v. State, 343 Ga. App. 110, 806 S.E.2d 200 (2017).

Sentencing errors. — Resentencing on defendant's convictions for child molestation and statutory rape was necessary because the trial court failed to impose split sentences for child molestation, and the probation only sentences for statutory rape were void because the trial court was precluded from probating any portion of the sentence for statutory rape. Daniels v. State, 344 Ga. App. 190, 809 S.E.2d 473 (2018).

Defendant's sentences on four incest counts were void because the sentences did not each include a split sentence of incarceration and probation as required by the former version of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(b) applicable at the time the defendant committed those offenses. Torres v. State, 353 Ga. App. 470, 838 S.E.2d 137 (2020).

Imposition of hybrid sentence. — Discretion afforded to trial courts at sentencing included the authority to impose partially consecutive and partially concurrent sentences, such that the probationary component of a split sentence could be served concurrently with a period of confinement imposed by the sentence on another count. State v. Riggs, 301 Ga. 63, 799 S.E.2d 770 (2017).

Sentence violated minimum sentencing requirements. — In a child molestation case, the trial court erred in sentencing the defendant to ten years to serve on Count 1 and probation on the remaining four counts, with the first 10 years to be served in confinement and the remainder to be served on probation, and the defendant's sentence was void because the defendant was not properly sentenced under the sexual offenders punishment statute as the sentence did not consist of a minimum term of imprisonment for child molestation, followed by an additional probated sentence of at least one year on each offense; no portion of the mandatory minimum sentence imposed could be suspended, stayed, or probated; and the trial court did not enter written findings necessary to deviate from the mandatory minimum. Brown v. State, 345 Ga. App. 622, 814 S.E.2d 738 (2018).

Application of split-sentence requirement. — Split-sentence requirement applied to each sexual offense count, not to the overall sentence as alleged by the state. State v. Riggs, 301 Ga. 63, 799 S.E.2d 770 (2017).

Failure to impose a "split sentence". — Because the trial court sentenced the defendant on each count of child molestation to twenty years imprisonment, and did not impose a "split sentence" including probation as required, the sentences were void. Spargo v. State, 332 Ga. App. 410, 773 S.E.2d 35 (2015).

Defendant's sentences were void because the trial court failed to impose split sentences on the defendant's child molestation convictions, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(b), which required a total sentence that included at least a mandatory-minimum five-year prison sentence and one year of probation. Jackson v. State, 338 Ga. App. 509, 790 S.E.2d 295 (2016).

Trial court was required to impose a sentence for the defendant's child molestation conviction that included at least the mandatory minimum of five years to serve in prison plus at least one year of probation, or to issue a written order setting forth its reasons for imposing a sentence below the statutory minimum, but the defendant was sentenced only to probation on the child molestation count, and no written findings were made by the trial court to support the deviation from the mandatory minimum term of imprisonment; thus, the defendant raised a colorable claim that the defendant's sentence was void in the defendant's motion to vacate void sentence. Hood v. State, 343 Ga. App. 230, 807 S.E.2d 10 (2017).

Trial court committed error requiring that the defendant's sentence be vacated when the court sentenced the defendant to 20 years in prison but failed to include at least one year of probation as required by statute. Hughes v. State, 341 Ga. App. 594, 802 S.E.2d 30 (2017).

Defendant's sentence for child molestation was improper because the sentence failed to include a split sentence. Underwood v. State, 344 Ga. App. 403, 810 S.E.2d 315 (2018).

Defendants convicted of the rape and molestation of one defendant's step-daughters failed to show their separate counsel were ineffective; however, their sentences failed to include a split sentence as required by former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2 and failed to include the five-year statutory minimum for child molestation under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(b)(1). The 2017 amendments to § 17-10-6.2 did not apply retroactively. Hardin v. State, 344 Ga. App. 378, 810 S.E.2d 602 (2018).

Trial court erred when the court sentenced the defendant on the first count to ten years in prison with no probation because a split sentence was required. Cobb v. State, 843 S.E.2d 912, No. A19A2170, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 297 (2020).

Resentencing on the sodomy counts was required because the trial court failed to impose a split sentence. Jones v. State, 354 Ga. App. 568, 841 S.E.2d 112 (2020).

Corrected sentence remained void because the trial court failed to impose a split sentence on the statutory rape and child molestation charges because those offenses were subject to the split sentence requirements, which required split sentences for each count. When the trial court resentenced the defendant in 2018, the court was still required to impose a split sentence on each count as required by the statute in effect at the time the defendant committed the crimes. Martinez-Chavez v. State, 352 Ga. App. 142, 834 S.E.2d 139 (2019).

Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to vacate sentences for child molestation, aggravated child molestation, and incest was upheld because to apply the split-sentencing provisions to pre-2006 law would require the court to re-write applicable statutes to make them subject to statutory provisions that did not even exist at the time the statutes were enacted, which the court was prohibited to do without contravening the plain meaning of the statutory text. Bryson v. State, 350 Ga. App. 206, 828 S.E.2d 450 (2019).

Downward departure proper. — State's contention that the defendant's previous acts of viewing pornography on a cell phone app should have been treated as relevant similar transactions so as to divest the trial court of the court's discretion to downwardly deviate from the mandatory minimum sentence was rejected because the state presented scant evidence about the defendant's previous conduct other than to show when the defendant first started using the app and the trial court gave sound reasons why the court rejected the state's assertion. State v. McCauley, 353 Ga. App. 94, 834 S.E.2d 567 (2019).

Denial of downward departure proper. — Because the acts that the defendant was convicted of committing were separated in time and were not part of one sequence of events, the trial court was correct to consider one act of child molestation to be a "relevant similar transaction" that precluded a downward modification of sentencing for the other crime of child molestation. Koroma v. State, 350 Ga. App. 530, 827 S.E.2d 903 (2019), cert. denied, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 35 (Ga. 2020).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2(a) provided that the term "sexual offense" included the crime of child molestation, but did not include aggravated child molestation or cruelty to children; thus, the trial court did not err in failing to apply the split sentence provision in § 17-10-6.2(b) to the defendant's sentences for aggravated child molestation and cruelty to children; however, the 20-year sentence imposed for child molestation did not include at least one year of probation and was void. Whitelock v. State, 349 Ga. App. 28, 825 S.E.2d 426 (2019).

Resentencing on rape charge appropriate. — Because the defendant could have been convicted of statutory rape based on acts committed both before or after the change in the law, the defendant's sentence for statutory rape was vacated and the case was remanded for resentencing pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2. Bryson v. State, 350 Ga. App. 206, 828 S.E.2d 450 (2019).

No application to attempted crimes. — With regard to the defendant's conviction for criminal attempt to commit child molestation and related crimes, the trial court did not err by refusing to follow the guidelines set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.2 for sexual offenses because the statute only applied to completed crimes, not to attempted crimes. Castaneira v. State, 321 Ga. App. 418, 740 S.E.2d 400 (2013).

17-10-6.3. Disposition of cases currently under review by three-judge panel; duties and responsibilities of the president of The Council of Superior Court Judges of Georgia with respect to abolishing the three-judge panel.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "three-judge panel" means the three-judge panel that was created and existed pursuant to the former provisions of Code Section 17-10-6 as it existed on June 30, 2007, which reviewed certain sentences to determine if a sentence was excessively harsh and what relief, if any, should be given.

(b) The right of a defendant to have a sentence reviewed by a three-judge panel shall be terminated for sentences imposed by a trial or appellate court on or after July 1, 2007. No new application for review of a sentence shall be transmitted to the three-judge panel on or after July 1, 2007, except for cases in which a sentence was imposed prior to July 1, 2007.

(c) No new application for review of a sentence shall be accepted by the three-judge panel unless such application has been received by the three-judge panel on or before September 1, 2007. Any sentence that has an application for review with the three-judge panel pending on September 1, 2007, shall have such review completed by the three-judge panel by November 1, 2008.

(d) It shall be the duty of the president of The Council of Superior Court Judges of Georgia to cause all administrative measures which may be necessary to conclude the business of the three-judge panel to be completed no later than January 1, 2009. Such administrative, clerical, or secretarial personnel as may be assigned to provide support for the three-judge panel may continue to be employed for the purpose of providing support to the president of The Council of Superior Court Judges of Georgia until January 1, 2009.

(e) No later than January 1, 2009, all records and documents relating to the activities of the three-judge panels during the period July 1, 1974, through November 1, 2008, shall be transmitted to the Division of Archives and History for retention in accordance with Article 5 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, the "Georgia Records Act." All equipment, supplies, and materials which the president of The Council of Superior Court Judges of Georgia determines are excess or surplus shall be distributed by the president to the judges of the superior courts for use in the performance of their official duties. Any fees or expenses due to any clerk, superior court judge, or other person as a result of the three-judge panel shall be paid out of such funds as are appropriated for the operation of the superior courts during fiscal year 2009.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2007, p. 595, § 5/HB 197, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Code section shall apply to all trials which occur on or after July 1, 2007.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Former § 17-10-6. — Trial court properly ruled that former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6, which authorized the Georgia Sentence Review Panel to review and reduce sentences, was unconstitutional as the Georgia General Assembly did not have the constitutional authority to divest the trial courts of Georgia of their traditional jurisdiction over sentencing by creating a quasi-appellate tribunal (such as the Panel) to review and alter the otherwise lawful sentences imposed by those trial courts. Sentence Review Panel v. Moseley, 284 Ga. 128, 663 S.E.2d 679 (2008).

Out of time sentence review granted under former § 17-10-6. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to hold judgment void and reinstating the defendant's 20-year sentence for voluntary manslaughter because the defendant's application for an out-of-time sentence review was granted under former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6(a), thus, the trial court's reinvested subject matter jurisdiction over the question of the sentencing was improper. McClendon v. State, 318 Ga. App. 676, 734 S.E.2d 505 (2012).

Former § 17-10-6 not to be applied retroactively. — Trial court erred by holding that the unconstitutionality of former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6 applied retroactively to an inmate whose sentence for voluntary manslaughter was reduced by the Georgia Sentence Review Panel and to other defendants similarly situated as the trial court should have applied the ruling prospectively only. Sentence Review Panel v. Moseley, 284 Ga. 128, 663 S.E.2d 679 (2008).

Denial of motion to withdraw guilty plea proper. — Denial of the defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 33.12(A) was proper because the defendant failed to establish that but for defense counsel's failure to inform the defendant of the repeal of former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6, which allowed for a sentence review, the defendant would have insisted on a trial; further, the defendant was aware of the maximum sentence, and the availability of a sentence review did not alter the possibility that the defendant could have potentially been required to serve up to 66 years in prison. The record supported a finding that the defendant entered the plea knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily. Vaughn v. State, 298 Ga. App. 669, 680 S.E.2d 680 (2009).

17-10-7. Punishment of repeat offenders; punishment and eligibility for parole of persons convicted of fourth felony offense.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) or (b.1) of this Code section, any person who, after having been convicted of a felony offense in this state or having been convicted under the laws of any other state or of the United States of a crime which if committed within this state would be a felony and sentenced to confinement in a penal institution, commits a felony punishable by confinement in a penal institution shall be sentenced to undergo the longest period of time prescribed for the punishment of the subsequent offense of which he or she stands convicted, provided that, unless otherwise provided by law, the trial judge may, in his or her discretion, probate or suspend the maximum sentence prescribed for the offense.

(b)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "serious violent felony" means a serious violent felony as defined in subsection (a) of Code Section 17-10-6.1.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (e) of Code Section 17-10-6.1, any person who has been convicted of a serious violent felony in this state or who has been convicted under the laws of any other state or of the United States of a crime which if committed in this state would be a serious violent felony and who after such first conviction subsequently commits and is convicted of a serious violent felony for which such person is not sentenced to death shall be sentenced to imprisonment for life without parole. Any such sentence of life without parole shall not be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld, and any such person sentenced pursuant to this paragraph shall not be eligible for any form of pardon, parole, or early release administered by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles or for any earned time, early release, work release, leave, or any other sentence-reducing measures under programs administered by the Department of Corrections, the effect of which would be to reduce the sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole, except as may be authorized by any existing or future provisions of the Constitution.

(b.1) Subsections (a) and (c) of this Code section shall not apply to a second or any subsequent conviction for any violation of subsection (a), paragraph (1) of subsection (i), or subsection (j) of Code Section 16-13-30.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) or (b.1) of this Code section and subsection (b) of Code Section 42-9-45, any person who, after having been convicted under the laws of this state for three felonies or having been convicted under the laws of any other state or of the United States of three crimes which if committed within this state would be felonies, commits a felony within this state shall, upon conviction for such fourth offense or for subsequent offenses, serve the maximum time provided in the sentence of the judge based upon such conviction and shall not be eligible for parole until the maximum sentence has been served.

(d) For the purpose of this Code section, conviction of two or more crimes charged on separate counts of one indictment or accusation, or in two or more indictments or accusations consolidated for trial, shall be deemed to be only one conviction.

(e) This Code section is supplemental to other provisions relating to recidivous offenders.

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly declares and finds:

"(1) That persons who are convicted of certain serious violent felonies shall serve minimum terms of imprisonment which shall not be suspended, probated, stayed, deferred, or otherwise withheld by the sentencing judge; and time, early release, work release, or other such sentence-reducing measures administered by the Department of Corrections."

"(2) That sentences ordered by courts in cases of certain serious violent felonies shall be served in their entirety and shall not be reduced by parole or by any earned

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 16, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed on or after the effective date of this Act; provided, however, that any conviction occurring prior to, on, or after the effective date of this Act shall be deemed a 'conviction' for the purposes of this Act and shall be counted in determining the appropriate sentence to be imposed for any offense committed on or after the effective date of this Act." This Act became effective January 1, 1995.

Ga. L. 1998, p. 180, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly declares and finds: (1) That the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994,' approved April 20, 1994 (Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959), provided that persons convicted of one of seven serious violent felonies shall serve minimum mandatory terms of imprisonment which shall not otherwise be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld by the sentencing court; (2) That in State v. Allmond, 225 Ga. App. 509 (1997), the Georgia Court of Appeals held, notwithstanding the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994,' that the provisions of the First Offender Act would still be available to the sentencing court, which would mean that a person who committed a serious violent felony could be sentenced to less than the minimum mandatory ten-year sentence; and (3) That, contrary to the decision in State v. Allmond, it is the expressed intent of the General Assembly that persons who commit a serious violent felony specified in the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994' shall be sentenced to a mandatory term of imprisonment of not less than ten years and shall not be eligible for first offender treatment."

Ga. L. 2012, p. 899, § 9-1(a)/HB 1176, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2012, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2012, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior conviction for the purpose of imposing a sentence that provides for a different penalty for a subsequent conviction for the same type of offense, of whatever degree or level, pursuant to this Act."

Ga. L. 2013, p. 222, § 21/HB 349, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2013, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2013, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense."

Ga. L. 2015, p. 519, § 9-1/HB 328, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that: "The provisions of Part II of this Act shall be given retroactive effect to those sentences imposed before the effective date of Part II of this Act." The effective date of this Act is May 5, 2015.

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — Many of the cases noted below were decided prior to the 1994 amendment of this Code section.

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment under the federal or state constitutions and does not violate an individual's due process or equal protection rights. Ortiz v. State, 266 Ga. 752, 470 S.E.2d 874 (1996); Gibson v. State, 233 Ga. App. 838, 505 S.E.2d 63 (1998); Worthy v. State, 237 Ga. App. 565, 515 S.E.2d 869 (1999); Brabham v. State, 240 Ga. App. 506, 524 S.E.2d 1 (1999); Shuman v. State, 244 Ga. App. 335, 535 S.E.2d 526 (2000).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not violate the constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment or deprive defendants of due process. Hindman v. State, 234 Ga. App. 758, 507 S.E.2d 862 (1998).

Application of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) to defendant did not constitute application of an ex post facto law; enactment of an effective date provision in the Sentence Reform Act had no effect on the applicability of former subsection (b) (now subsection (c)) to sentences imposed prior to the effective date. Moore v. Ray, 269 Ga. 457, 499 S.E.2d 636 (1998).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, which dictates the punishment for serious violent offenders, in conjunction with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the sentencing statute applicable to recidivist armed robbers, does not violate either the federal or the state constitutions. State v. Vanburen, 210 Vt. 293, 214 A.3d 791 (2019).

Imposition of a mandatory life sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not violate the Eighth Amendment proscription against cruel and unusual punishment. Howard v. State, 233 Ga. App. 724, 505 S.E.2d 768 (1998), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669 (2003).

Trial court did not unfairly enhance the defendant's sentence for armed robbery based on a previous aggravated child molestation conviction committed when the defendant was 13 years old as: (1) under O.C.G.A. § 16-3-1, the legislature made the age of 13 the age of criminal responsibility in Georgia; (2) the legislature did not elect to carve out an exception that would exempt youthful offenders from the sentencing provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2); and (3) the Georgia Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the "two violent felonies" statute, § 17-10-7(b)(2). Lee v. State, 267 Ga. App. 834, 600 S.E.2d 825 (2004).

Conviction for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon could not stand because the same prior conviction could not support both recidivist sentencing and a conviction of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, and also a nolo contendere plea could not serve as proof of a prior conviction for charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon; prior conviction remained available to support enhanced sentencing as a recidivist, however. Wyche v. State, 291 Ga. App. 165, 661 S.E.2d 226 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1413, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 914 (Ga. 2008).

Effect of 2012 amendment. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 was amended in 2012 to make subsection (c) no longer applicable to a sentence imposed for simple possession of a controlled substance in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 (a). Barber v. State, 350 Ga. App. 309, 827 S.E.2d 733 (2019).

Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is to see that persons with at least three prior felony convictions serve the maximum time imposed in a sentence for a subsequent felony conviction. Aldridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 719, 282 S.E.2d 189 (1981).

Defendant's sentence of 30 years without parole for trafficking in cocaine was a sentence allowed under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), and hence, not illegal or void. Defendant could not have been sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), or the defendant's sentence would have been 40 years. Because the sentence was not void, it was not subject to modification under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f). State v. Blue, 304 Ga. App. 471, 696 S.E.2d 692 (2010).

Separation of powers. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution. Brabham v. State, 240 Ga. App. 506, 524 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Ex post facto clause not violated. — Because the offense for which the defendant was sentenced occurred after the effective date of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, there was no violation of the ex post facto clause even though the defendant's previous conviction occurred before that date. Johnson v. State, 229 Ga. App. 400, 493 S.E.2d 926 (1997).

Decision of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to eliminate the plaintiff's parole eligibility which constituted a change in the policy of the Board to grant parole to persons convicted under the recidivist statute did not violate the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution. Metheny v. Hammonds, 216 F.3d 1307 (11th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1196, 121 S. Ct. 1200, 149 L. Ed. 2d 114 (2001).

When it was clear from the record that the defendant was sentenced on two separate accusations in 2001 that were not consolidated for trial, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d), the trial court properly refused to treat the two charges as one offense for purposes of recidivism. Although trial counsel testified that at the time it was the policy of the district attorney's office to encourage defendants to plead on multiple accusations on the same day and to represent to them that those pleas would only count as one offense for purposes of recidivism, it was the law as provided in the applicable statutes rather than local practices that governed. Thomas v. State, 291 Ga. App. 795, 662 S.E.2d 849 (2008).

Decision limiting the parole board's authority to grant parole. — Decision in Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181 (1994)--limiting the parole board's authority of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant parole--and ultimately resulting in the Board's elimination of plaintiffs' parole eligibility did not violate the due process clause of the United States Constitution. Metheny v. Hammonds, 216 F.3d 1307 (11th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1196, 121 S. Ct. 1200, 149 L. Ed. 2d 114 (2001).

Construed with § 42-7-1 et seq. — Youthful Offender Act (O.C.G.A. § 42-7-1 et seq.), unlike the First Offender Act (O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq.), does not authorize the discharge of a felony conviction and a conviction under the Youthful Offender Act may serve as a predicate for sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Lazenby v. State, 221 Ga. App. 148, 470 S.E.2d 526 (1996).

Construed with § 16-13-30. — Both O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(d) and 17-10-7 give direction as to the imposition of punishment under specified aggravated circumstances; however, § 16-13-30(d) increases the maximum from 15 years to life for the subsequent offense, whereas O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not increase the maximum but adds weight in favor of its imposition. Wainwright v. State, 208 Ga. App. 777, 432 S.E.2d 555 (1993).

Prior conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-32.5(b) should be viewed the same as a prior conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 for purposes of sentencing under the recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Mikell v. State, 231 Ga. App. 85, 498 S.E.2d 531 (1998).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d) is interpreted as providing that, although the court may not sentence second time offenders under both O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(d) and 17-10-7(a), the court may sentence second time offenders under both § 16-13-30(d) and any remaining provisions of § 17-10-7. Blackwell v. State, 237 Ga. App. 896, 516 S.E.2d 787 (1999).

Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is the only recidivist provision that governs the situation when a defendant who has a prior felony conviction for armed robbery and who is subsequently convicted of a felony for selling cocaine, the trial court correctly applied that section in sentencing the defendant. Harden v. State, 239 Ga. App. 700, 521 S.E.2d 829 (1999).

In a prosecution for the sale of cocaine, the court was not required to impose a life sentence upon the defendant who had five previous drug convictions. The court retained the discretion either to impose any sentence within the statutory mandatory minimum and maximum sentence range or to impose a life sentence. Scott v. State, 248 Ga. App. 542, 545 S.E.2d 709 (2001).

Because the defendant was found guilty of possessing cocaine with the intent to distribute, defendant's third conviction for the possession of a controlled substance with the intent to distribute and the defendant's ninth felony conviction, the sentencing judge had the discretion to sentence the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d) to "any sentence within the statutory mandatory minimum and maximum sentence range or to impose a life sentence" and was not required to sentence the defendant to life imprisonment under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). Mann v. State, 273 Ga. 366, 541 S.E.2d 645 (2001).

Because the defendant entered a guilty plea to possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, and the state introduced copies of a prior out-of-state drug conviction and a prior federal drug conviction, the trial court erred in sentencing the defendant to 30 years under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(d) and 17-10-7(a). Papadoupalos v. State, 249 Ga. App. 300, 548 S.E.2d 59 (2001).

Trial court's decision to probate a portion of the sentence imposed on the defendant for the defendant's second conviction for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, requiring the defendant to serve only seven years, was in direct contravention to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which stated specifically that a second time offender was to have been imprisoned for not less than ten years; by the plain reading of § 16-13-30(d), a defendant must have served at least ten years in prison, and O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), which applied to a second offense under § 16-13-30(b), required that the time have been served without parole. State v. Jones, 265 Ga. App. 493, 594 S.E.2d 706 (2004).

Trial court did not err in stacking two recidivist sentencing provisions by first sentencing the defendant to life in prison under former O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which at the time of the defendant's crime and sentencing required a life sentence for repeat offenders of § 16-13-30(b), and by then sentencing the defendant to life without parole under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), which required that upon conviction of a fourth felony, the defendant was not eligible for parole. Butler v. State, 277 Ga. App. 57, 625 S.E.2d 458 (2005).

Court of Appeals properly affirmed the imposition of a life sentence without parole against the defendant as a recidivist, under both O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(d) and 17-10-7(c), as the defendant was convicted and sentenced before the effective date of the 1996 amendment to § 16-13-30(d), thus making a life sentence the only sentence that the trial court could impose; further, because the instant felony conviction was the defendant's fourth, § 17-10-7(c) applied to the sentence by operation of subsection (e) of that statute, as enacted in 1994, so as to require the defendant to serve the sentence imposed by the trial court without the possibility of parole. Butler v. State, 281 Ga. 310, 637 S.E.2d 688 (2006).

Upon conviction for the sale of cocaine, the trial court properly sentenced the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) and not O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1), to the minimum sentence of ten years imprisonment under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), without the possibility of parole, as the defendant had three prior felony convictions. Fortson v. State, 283 Ga. App. 120, 640 S.E.2d 693 (2006).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's plea withdrawal motion as the court fully informed the defendant that the sentence the court intended on imposing would be without parole, despite failing to advise the defendant of that fact prior to the acceptance of the plea; moreover, as methamphetamine was a Schedule II non-narcotic drug, the more general provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(e) and 17-10-7, and not O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(c), applied. Thomas v. State, 287 Ga. App. 500, 651 S.E.2d 801 (2007).

Construed with § 16-13-31. — Recidivist sentence imposed upon the defendant was upheld on appeal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-31(a)(1)(A) and (h) and 17-10-7(a), based on evidence of the defendant's 1993 convictions; hence, the defendant was properly sentenced to the longest period of time prescribed for the punishment of the offense and ordered to serve the mandatory minimum of ten years. Smith v. State, 282 Ga. App. 317,

638 S.E.2d 440 (2006).

Section should be construed with § 40-5-75. — Because O.C.G.A. § 40-5-75 is a recidivist statute and not an habitual traffic offense violator statute, that statute should be construed together with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, such that multiple counts of a single indictment are deemed as a single conviction. Bowman v. Griffith, 204 Ga. App. 851, 420 S.E.2d 795 (1992).

Construed with § 17-10-2(b). — Because sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) is a matter of discretion, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(b) requires a felony defendant be given "unmistakable advance warning" that prior convictions will be used in aggravation of punishment. Armstrong v. State, 209 Ga. App. 796, 434 S.E.2d 560 (1993).

Although the state's original notice to the defendant's counsel of the state's intention to admit prior felony convictions as aggravators for sentencing purposes was amended on the day of trial to include new convictions that were not previously listed, the court found that defendant's counsel was timely served with notice of the prior convictions, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2(a) and 17-10-7(b), because the defendant had time to review the convictions prior to the commencement of the trial; it was accordingly proper that the trial court considered the convictions in determining the appropriate sentence. Howard v. State, 262 Ga. App. 198, 585 S.E.2d 164 (2003).

Construed with § 16-7-1. — Because O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b) provides a specific sentencing scheme for defendants convicted more than once of burglary, the general recidivist scheme of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not apply. Norwood v. State, 249 Ga. App. 507, 548 S.E.2d 478 (2001).

Since the defendant pled guilty to burglary and had a prior felony conviction for forgery in addition to a prior burglary conviction, the defendant was, for sentencing purposes, a three-time felony offender under the general recidivist provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) rather than a mere two-time burglary offender under the specific recidivist provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b); accordingly, the trial court properly found that the court was required to sentence the defendant as a recidivist under § 17-10-7 to the maximum period of confinement allowed for burglary, which was 20 years. Stephens v. State, 259 Ga. App. 564, 578 S.E.2d 179 (2003).

Because the defendant had multiple prior convictions in addition to burglary convictions, the existence of the prior convictions in addition to those for burglary removed the case from the purview of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b); thus, the defendant was properly sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Goldberg v. State, 280 Ga. App. 600, 634 S.E.2d 419 (2006), aff'd, 282 Ga. 542, 651 S.E.2d 667 (2007).

When O.C.G.A. §§ 16-7-1(b) and 17-10-7(a) are harmonized, the former specific recidivist statute applies when the defendant is a habitual burglar having only prior convictions for burglary, whereas the latter general recidivist statute applies when the defendant is a habitual felon with prior convictions for other crimes; § 17-10-7(e) provides that the general recidivist sentencing statute for habitual felons is supplemental to other recidivist sentencing statutes, such as § 16-7-1(b), and when the Georgia General Assembly enacted § 16-7-1(b), the General Assembly did not provide that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 would not be applicable to subsequent convictions for burglary. Goldberg v. State, 282 Ga. 542, 651 S.E.2d 667 (2007), cert. denied, 554 U.S. 905, 128 S. Ct. 2932, 171 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2008).

Construing O.C.G.A. §§ 16-7-1(b) and 17-10-7(a) together, the Georgia General Assembly intends that a habitual burglar be given the benefit of the trial court's sentencing discretion, but it further intends that a habitual burglar who is also a habitual felon be subject to the imposition of the longest sentence prescribed for the subsequent offense for which he or she was convicted; because Mikell v. State, 270 Ga. 467 (510 SE2d 523) (1999) failed to consider O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(e) and its effect on other recidivist sentencing provisions, it reached an erroneous result and is therefore overruled. Goldberg v. State, 282 Ga. 542, 651 S.E.2d 667 (2007), cert. denied, 554 U.S. 905, 128 S. Ct. 2932, 171 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in sentencing a defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the trial court imposed a modified sentence of 20 years to serve ten upon the defendant; the sentence, as modified, was proper under O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b), the specific sentencing scheme applicable to a defendant convicted of burglary having two prior burglary convictions. Williams v. State, 297 Ga. App. 723, 678 S.E.2d 95 (2009).

Construed with § 16-8-14. — Because there was no language within O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(c) which specifically governed fourth-time shoplifting offenders or that blocked the application of the general recidivist provisions set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), the trial court's imposition of a recidivist's sentence under § 17-10-7(c), as opposed to the specific provision for shoplifting contained in O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C), was upheld. Patrick v. State, 284 Ga. App. 472, 644 S.E.2d 309 (2007).

Defendant was wrongfully sentenced as a recidivist under the state's general recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), rather than the specific recidivist statute applicable to shoplifting offenses, O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C) because the record showed that the defendant had three prior felony shoplifting convictions and one prior misdemeanor shoplifting conviction at the time of trial, but there was no evidence of felony convictions for other crimes. Wester v. State, 294 Ga. App. 263, 668 S.E.2d 862 (2008).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41. — Trial court did not err by imposing the maximum sentence, which was life imprisonment, upon the defendant's conviction for armed robbery as the court lacked the authority to probate or suspend any part of that sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 based on the defendant's prior felony conviction. Bryant v. State, 286 Ga. App. 493, 649 S.E.2d 597 (2007).

Recidivist punishment under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d) not precluded by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). — Imposition of mandatory life sentences as recidivist punishment for convictions under each count of an indictment charging six separate offenses of selling cocaine was not precluded by provisions of the statute placing limitations on the use of prior convictions as the basis for imposing enhanced recidivist punishment. McCoy v. State, 210 Ga. App. 672, 437 S.E.2d 366 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) does not apply to capital felonies. — Defendant was convicted of murder and sentenced to life without possibility of parole which was a void sentence as a matter of law, even if the issue was not raised at trial. Funderburk v. State, 276 Ga. 554, 580 S.E.2d 234 (2003).

Recidivist punishment. — Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist after considering O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c) together. Reason v. State, 353 Ga. App. 266, 836 S.E.2d 223 (2019).

Life without parole could not be imposed upon conviction of malice murder. — Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) expressly excluded capital felonies from the statute's coverage, and malice murder was a capital felony, a sentence of life imprisonment without parole could not be imposed upon a malice murder conviction. Miller v. State, 283 Ga. 412, 658 S.E.2d 765 (2008).

Inclusion of prior convictions in indictment read to jury is not unconstitutional. — Procedure under former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7), whereby the defendant's prior convictions are placed in the indictment and read to a jury before guilt or innocence is determined, does not violate any constitutional rights of the defendant. Landers v. Smith, 226 Ga. 274, 174 S.E.2d 427 (1970), but see 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 519.

Submission to jury of prior conviction not unconstitutional. — Statute authorized submission to a jury of proof of a prior conviction during the trial and before determination of a defendant's guilt. This procedure is not a violation of the constitutional rights of the accused. Cook v. Smith, 303 F. Supp. 90 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970).

Trial court properly sentenced a defendant as a recidivist for 20 years imprisonment, to serve 15 years, pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, as a result of the defendant's arson conviction, because the defendant chose to proceed with a jury trial instead of pleading guilty, which would have involved only a three-year sentence as indicated by the trial judge during a pretrial hearing. Moore v. State, 283 Ga. App. 533, 642 S.E.2d 163 (2007).

Statute did not violate the double jeopardy clause of the constitution. Tribble v. State, 168 Ga. 699, 148 S.E. 593 (1929).

No double jeopardy violation. — Statute did not violate Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. VIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII). Reid v. State, 49 Ga. App. 429, 176 S.E. 100 (1934).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not violate the due process clause of the constitution. Getty v. State, 207 Ga. App. 736, 429 S.E.2d 100 (1993).

Section does not violate right to impartial trial. — Statute did not violate Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI) which guaranteed to one accused of a crime an impartial trial. Tribble v. State, 168 Ga. 699, 148 S.E. 593 (1929).

Statute did not violate Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI) which guarantees to one accused of a crime an impartial trial. The general rule is that, in a prosecution for a particular crime, proof and allegations of another crime wholly independent from that for which the defendant is on trial, even though it is a crime of the same nature, are irrelevant and inadmissible; but there are exceptions to this rule. One of these exceptions is when the grade or punishment of the second offense is made by statute different from that of a first offense but the fact of a former conviction and sentence must be charged in the indictment, since a second conviction would affect the grade of the offense or require the imposition of a different punishment. McNabb v. State, 69 Ga. App. 885, 27 S.E.2d 246 (1943).

Statute related only to procedure in the trial of a criminal case and does not affect any vested privilege or constitutional right of the defendant. Kryder v. State, 212 Ga. 272, 91 S.E.2d 612, cert. denied, 352 U.S. 850, 77 S. Ct. 71, 1 L. Ed. 2d 61 (1956).

Prior convictions obtained in violation of indigent defendant's right to appointed counsel cannot be introduced for the purpose of imposing a recidivist sentence or other collateral use in subsequent trials. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339 (1975).

Gideon v. Wainwright has a retroactive effect if the records of prior convictions obtained in violation of its standards are introduced for collateral use in subsequent trials. Convictions obtained in violation of an indigent's right to counsel, even though obtained prior to Gideon v. Wainwright, cannot be used for the purpose of imposing a recidivist sentence. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339 (1975).

Purpose of the increased punishment doctrine is to serve as a warning to first offenders so as to afford first offenders an opportunity to reform, and to penalize first offenders upon subsequent infractions for failure to do so. Curtis v. State, 102 Ga. App. 790, 118 S.E.2d 264 (1960).

State's burden of proof. — When the defendant collaterally attacked the defendant's prior guilty pleas, which the state proposed using to seek defendant's sentencing as a recidivist, the state's burden was to prove the existence of the prior guilty pleas and the defendant's representation by counsel if the pleas involved a felony, and, upon that showing, it was the defendant's burden to present evidence of a constitutional infirmity in the prior plea hearings, and, if the defendant made such a showing, it was then the state's burden to prove the constitutionality of the pleas. Smith v. State, 260 Ga. App. 785, 581 S.E.2d 349 (2003).

State interpretation binding on federal court. — Georgia Court of Appeals' interpretation of the distinctions between O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (b) was binding upon the United States Court of Appeals. McCoy v. Newsome, 953 F.2d 1252 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 944, 112 S. Ct. 2283, 119 L. Ed. 2d 208 (1992).

Correction of scrivener's error. — Because the final disposition form indicated that the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist under one subsection, when the trial court's oral pronouncement indicated the defendant would be sentenced under a different subsection, the scrivener's error was ordered to be corrected. Cooper v. State, 352 Ga. App. 783, 835 S.E.2d 724 (2019).

Construed with U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual. — By committing a new crime, the defendant lost the benefit of first offender status, and the unadjudicated guilt in connection with the prior state offense was properly considered a prior conviction for purposes of sentencing under the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual, which pursuant to U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 4A1.2, mandated the imposition of criminal history points, even if doing so undermined the purpose of the Georgia's First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq. United States v. Barner, 572 F.3d 1239 (11th Cir. 2009).

Informing on punishment. — There is no requirement in recidivist cases sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 that the court inform the defendant that the custodial portion of any sentence is non-parolable but that the trial court need not impose the maximum custodial sentence. State v. Hayes, 301 Ga. 342, 801 S.E.2d 50 (2017).

When the defendant appeared for a calendar call and made unusual assertions and demands, with no basis in law, to the trial court, the trial court responded appropriately and informed the defendant that the defendant's trial was imminent, and that it was necessary for the defendant to make a decision whether to go to trial or to enter a plea. The court's explanation of the potential maximum sentence was carefully expressed in conditional language, avoiding any positive statement of what sentence might be imposed after a trial or plea; and in informing the defendant of the potential maximum sentence, the trial court was attempting to communicate to the defendant the gravity of the decision the defendant faced as well as the potential consequences of that decision. State v. Hayes, 301 Ga. 342, 801 S.E.2d 50 (2017).

Hearing not required to correct final disposition order. — Trial court did not err in entering the corrected final disposition order when the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist without first conducting a hearing in the defendant's presence because the entry of the final disposition order merely corrected the written sentence to conform to the sentence pronounced orally. Barber v. State, 350 Ga. App. 309, 827 S.E.2d 733 (2019).

Conviction must be final before a conviction can be included in the pre-trial notice given by the state pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). Mitchell v. State, 202 Ga. App. 100, 413 S.E.2d 517 (1991); Stephenson v. State, 218 Ga. App. 613, 462 S.E.2d 767 (1995).

Even though the court erred in allowing reference in a recidivist indictment to a conviction which was not yet final, there was no harm since there were two other valid felonies for the court's consideration. Stephenson v. State, 218 Ga. App. 613, 462 S.E.2d 767 (1995).

Although an out-of-time appeal was pending at the time a trial court dismissed a defendant's motion to vacate an allegedly void sentence that was based on prior felony convictions, one of which was subject to a pending "out-of-time" appeal, an appeals court found that the conviction was final within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the defendant was not successful in the appeal; thus, the appeal was no longer pending. Dykes v. State, 272 Ga. App. 203, 612 S.E.2d 53 (2005).

Correction of sentence required. — Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant by failing to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) as the trial court was required to impose a 20 year sentence for each burglary count, the longest sentence prescribed in the burglary statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b), which the court did not do since the court sentenced the defendant merely to 10 years on Count 1. Barney v. State, 333 Ga. App. 807, 777 S.E.2d 490 (2015).

Trial court did not err in considering the defendant's federal conviction for counterfeiting when the court resentenced the defendant as a recidivist because the provisions of both 18 U.S.C. § 472 and Georgia's statute criminalizing forgery in the second degree would criminalize the conduct to which the defendant pled guilty in federal court. Loveless v. State, 344 Ga. App. 716, 812 S.E.2d 42 (2018).

Exception to finality of conviction rule. — In an escape case, the defendant's prior aggravated assault, robbery, battery, and theft convictions were available to sentence the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) because any of the defendant's armed robbery convictions, which were pending at the time the defendant escaped, would support the defendant's being sentenced as a convicted felon under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-52(b). Allen v. State, 292 Ga. App. 133, 663 S.E.2d 370 (2008), aff'd, 286 Ga. 273, 687 S.E.2d 417 (2009).

Conviction which was on appeal is not a conviction within the meaning of this section. The conviction must be final before the conviction can be included in an indictment. Croker v. Smith, 225 Ga. 529, 169 S.E.2d 787 (1969).

Section inapplicable to prior conviction in another state. — This section was not applicable in a case when the defendant was convicted of a crime punishable by confinement in a penal institution, but when the defendant had previously been convicted in another state of an offense and sentenced to confinement in a penal institution of that state. Lowe v. State, 179 Ga. 742, 177 S.E. 240 (1934), answer conformed to, 50 Ga. App. 369, 178 S.E. 203 (1935).

It must be presumed that the General Assembly used the words employed in their ordinary, everyday, common-sense meaning, and that in referring to the previous conviction the General Assembly had no reference to convictions in courts of states beyond the jurisdiction of this state. The courts of this state do not take judicial cognizance of the laws of these foreign jurisdictions, and therefore there cannot be attributed to the General Assembly an intention to give equal dignity to proof of a conviction in another jurisdiction to that which properly inheres in those of the state, when it may be that in many of these states important rules of procedure, in criminal trials, are entirely different from those which the General Assembly has adopted. Lowe v. State, 179 Ga. 742, 177 S.E. 240 (1934), answer conformed to, 50 Ga. App. 369, 178 S.E. 203 (1935).

Required proof of felony status to use foreign conviction. — Before a defendant can be sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) based upon a foreign conviction, the state was required to prove that the conviction was for conduct that would also constitute a felony in Georgia; since it was possible that the defendant was convicted under Tenn. Code Ann. § 39-13-102(b), and this conduct may not have constituted a felony in Georgia, the state failed to sustain the state's burden under § 17-10-7(a), and the defendant's recidivist sentence was vacated. Lewis v. State, 263 Ga. App. 98, 587 S.E.2d 245 (2003), overruled on other grounds by Washington v. State, 310 Ga. App. 775, 714 S.E.2d 364 (2011).

Prior offense qualified even though mistakenly treated as misdemeanor. — Prior offense of possession of tools for the commission of crime was "punishable" for confinement by up to five years, and was therefore a felony, qualifying so as to invoke the recidivist statute, even though the court had mistakenly sentenced defendant for a misdemeanor and probated confinement. State v. Temple, 189 Ga. App. 284, 375 S.E.2d 300 (1988).

Improper consideration of prior arrests. — Although prior arrests are not properly considered in imposing recidivist punishment, there is a presumption that a trial judge does not consider improper matters in imposing sentences. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

This section was not applicable in capital cases; the statute was applicable only in felony cases that are not capital because the statute requires that the recidivist shall be sentenced to undergo the longest period of time and labor prescribed for the punishment of the offense of which the defendant stands convicted. Clemmons v. State, 233 Ga. 187, 210 S.E.2d 657 (1974).

Indictment not under section for capital crime after March 28, 1973. — If a capital crime occurred after March 28, 1973, the effective date of former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30), the accused should not be indicted under former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7). Clemmons v. State, 233 Ga. 187, 210 S.E.2d 657 (1974).

Applicability when capital and noncapital counts combined. — When capital felonies and noncapital felonies are included in separate counts of an indictment, the fact that this section was not applicable to the capital felony count in no way affects its applicability to the remaining counts. Thornton v. State, 144 Ga. App. 595, 241 S.E.2d 478 (1978).

Lack of any allegation as to defendant's recidivism in an indictment would be no impediment to the imposition of recidivist sentences pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Mitchell v. State, 202 Ga. App. 100, 413 S.E.2d 517 (1991); State v. Willis, 218 Ga. App. 402, 461 S.E.2d 576 (1995).

Defendant properly sentenced as recidivist. — Defendant's challenge to the recidivist sentences failed because the certified copy of the defendant's prior burglary conviction showed that the defendant was sentenced to a term of probation to be served at a halfway house; it did not indicate, as the defendant claimed, that the sentence was entered pursuant to the First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60. Robbins v. State, 326 Ga. App. 812, 757 S.E.2d 452 (2014).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a four-time recidivist because the defendant waived any challenge to the validity of the prior felony conviction for financial transaction credit card fraud as the defendant never challenged the validity of the defendant's prior felony conviction for financial transaction credit card fraud at the sentencing hearing, in the defendant's motion for new trial as twice amended, or in the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial; and a claim that one of the predicate felonies used in aggravation of punishment was invalid did not raise a cognizable claim that the recidivist sentence was void. Barber v. State, 350 Ga. App. 309, 827 S.E.2d 733 (2019).

Failure to object to procedural irregularity. — Since certified copies of the plea revealed that the defendant was represented by counsel and signed defendant's own name to the plea documents, the state was entitled to a presumption of regularity and the burden shifted to the defendant to show an infringement of the defendant's rights or a procedural irregularity in the plea; since the defendant failed to do so, the trial court properly sentenced the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). Reedman v. State, 265 Ga. App. 162, 593 S.E.2d 46 (2003).

Failure to indict as recidivist. — Trial court could impose recidivist punishment even though the defendant had not been indicted under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Jefferson v. State, 205 Ga. App. 687, 423 S.E.2d 425 (1992).

Trial court could not sentence defendant as recidivist after already serving prior oral sentence. — Trial court improperly increased the defendant's sentence by imposing a recidivist sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, making the defendant ineligible for parole, when the defendant had already begun to serve the trial court's prior oral sentence; although the length of the sentence was not changed, the recidivist designation constituted added punishment. Caldwell v. State, No. A20A0747, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 356 (June 18, 2020).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 as O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b) was inapplicable since the defendant was convicted of attempted burglary, which was subject to sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 16-4-6; further, the defendant had been convicted of two other burglaries and two other felonies so the defendant was a four-time felony offender subject to the general recidivist sentencing scheme in § 17-10-7. Smith v. State, 273 Ga. App. 107, 614 S.E.2d 219 (2005).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist as there was no proof presented that the defendant had begun to serve the non-recidivist sentence immediately after the sentence was pronounced, but before the judge set the sentence aside, and despite a claim that the state failed to provide certified copies of the earlier convictions prior to trial.

Trial court properly dismissed the defendant's petition to correct a void sentence, which challenged the imposition of a 60-year recidivist sentence imposed against the defendant for burglary and arson, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-7-1(a) and 16-7-60(c), respectively, as the state gave notice to the state's intent to have the defendant sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c) and no abuse of the trial court's discretion was shown. Marshall v. State, 294 Ga. App. 282, 668 S.E.2d 892 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c) because the defendant had been convicted of at least three prior felonies and, thus, the defendant was required to be sentenced to the longest period of time prescribed for the punishment of the subsequent armed robbery offense and was required to serve the maximum time provided in the sentence of the trial court based upon the defendant's conviction of armed robbery and would not be eligible for parole until the maximum sentence had been served; because life imprisonment was an authorized punishment for a conviction of armed robbery under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(b), and because the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist under § 17-10-7(a) and (c), the trial court lacked the discretion to sentence the defendant to a lesser sentence, and it was presumed that the trial court exercised the court's discretion in sentencing the defendant to a period of incarceration, rather than probation, when no evidence to the contrary appeared. Lester v. State, 309 Ga. App. 1, 710 S.E.2d 161 (2011).

Trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the trial court was required to sentence the defendant to life imprisonment without eligibility for parole since the state introduced certified records of the defendant's six prior felony convictions; O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c) must be read together. Smith v. State, 312 Ga. App. 174, 718 S.E.2d 43 (2011).

Trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant to life without parole as a recidivist because although the trial court failed to mention O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 when the court orally pronounced sentence, but included § 17-10-7 in the written final disposition, the defendant's sentence did not change; the defendant was still sentenced to life in prison without parole. Smith v. State, 312 Ga. App. 174, 718 S.E.2d 43 (2011).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist sentencing was served on defense counsel on the first day of trial prior to the jury being sworn, and certified copies of the convictions were admitted without objection; therefore, any defects or untimeliness in the notice under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5) were waived. Ross v. State, 313 Ga. App. 695, 722 S.E.2d 411 (2012).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to life without parole as the state served the defendant with notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment and the state introduced evidence of the defendant's three prior felony convictions. Wynn v. State, 332 Ga. App. 429, 773 S.E.2d 393 (2015).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant under the general recidivist statute, which applied when the defendant was a habitual felon with prior convictions for crimes other than just burglary, rather than the specific recidivist statute, which applied only to prior convictions for burglary, because the defendant's federal conviction for conspiracy to transport stolen goods did not constitute a burglary conviction; thus, the defendant's conviction in the current case represented not only the defendant's third burglary conviction but also the defendant's fourth felony conviction, and the defendant fell squarely within the ambit of the general recidivist statute. Nordahl v. State, 344 Ga. App. 686, 811 S.E.2d 465 (2018), aff'd, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist based on the defendant's New York burglary conviction, New Jersey burglary conviction, and federal conviction for conspiracy to transport stolen goods because the state met the state's statutory burden of proving that the defendant was convicted of conduct which would be considered felonious under the laws of Georgia. Nordahl v. State, 344 Ga. App. 686, 811 S.E.2d 465 (2018), aff'd, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Trial court did not err in imposing maximum and consecutive sentences on the defendant for the burglary and theft by taking convictions as the defendant's prior convictions for three or more felonies qualified the defendant to be sentenced as a recidivist, requiring the defendant to be sentenced to the maximum time allowed; the sentences were within the statutory ranges; and the trial court had the authority to require that the sentences run consecutively. Hamlett v. State, 350 Ga. App. 93, 828 S.E.2d 132 (2019), cert. denied, No. S19C1274, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 860 (Ga. 2019), cert. denied, No. A19C1275, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 890 (Ga. 2019).

Recidivist sentencing appropriate when offenses not consolidated. — Trial court did not err either in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the record showed that each of the offenses which resulted in the convictions at issue were committed at different times, each was indicted separately by different grand juries, and the trial court entered separate sentencing orders in each of the three cases; the offenses were not considered consolidated under § 17-10-7 even after being entered on the same day and ordered to run concurrently. Becoats v. State, 318 Ga. App. 262, 733 S.E.2d 795 (2012).

Recidivist sentence was erroneous. — Trial court erred by sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because the defendant's one prior conviction could not serve as the basis for both the failure of a registered sex offender to report a change in residence count and the recidivist sentence. Pardon v. State, 322 Ga. App. 393, 745 S.E.2d 658 (2013).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b.1), a defendant who has been convicted previously of violating either subsections (a), (i)(1), or (j) of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 may not be sentenced as a recidivist for a second or any subsequent conviction for violating any of those code sections even if the defendant had never been convicted previously of violating the exact subsection for which the defendant is being sentenced. Mathis v. State, 336 Ga. App. 257, 784 S.E.2d 98 (2016).

Defendant could not be sentenced for possession of cocaine as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because one of the three prior felony convictions used in aggravation was also a conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(a). Johnson v. State, 335 Ga. App. 796, 783 S.E.2d 156 (2016).

Trial court erred by sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because the defendant had not been convicted of a felony prior to the commission of the rape. Cook v. State, 338 Ga. App. 489, 790 S.E.2d 283 (2016).

Nolo contendere plea could not be used as proof of prior conviction under recidivist statute. — Trial court erred in considering the defendant's nolo contendere plea as proof of a prior conviction under the recidivist statute because the plain language of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-95 and 17-10-7(c) indicated that such a plea could not be used against the defendant in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist. Miller v. State, 353 Ga. App. 518, 838 S.E.2d 602 (2020).

Counsel was effective in advising on recidivism. — Defendant failed to prove that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on the defendant's allegation that trial counsel failed to inform the defendant that the state intended to prosecute the defendant as a recidivist as, while the record reflected that trial counsel was confused about the issue and that trial counsel did not know the state intended to prosecute the defendant as a recidivist, trial counsel testified that there was always a possibility of a life sentence for rape and that trial counsel discussed that possibility with the defendant. Mora v. State, 295 Ga. App. 641, 673 S.E.2d 23 (2009).

Counsel's failure to inform defendant of the consequences of recidivist punishment and of proceeding to trial rather than accepting a guilty plea cannot rise to the level of constitutionally ineffective assistance of counsel. Taylor v. State, 239 Ga. App. 329, 521 S.E.2d 375 (1999).

Defendant's trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to inform the defendant that the defendant would receive a mandatory recidivist sentence of life without parole if the defendant rejected a plea offer; prejudice could only be shown by some indication that, when the defendant rejected the plea, the defendant was amenable to the plea offer. Defendant's rejection of the plea was part of an effort to stall the trial on the hope that the victim, who was the state's key witness, would die and would be unavailable for trial. Carson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 763, 592 S.E.2d 161 (2003).

Defendant was not entitled to relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2254 because the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by counsel's failure to inform the defendant that the defendant faced a mandatory life sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 since the evidence showed that the defendant likely would not have accepted a plea bargain that included a 15 to 25-year sentence because the victim's whereabouts were unknown, and the defendant felt that the aggravated assault and armed robbery case against defendant was weak without the victim's testimony. Carson v. Thompson, No. 06-12691, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 9692 (11th Cir. Apr. 27, 2007) (Unpublished).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for new trial on the grounds of ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to the defendant's drug-related convictions based on defense counsel failing to advise the defendant that the state intended to prosecute defendant as a recidivist since the defendant did not testify that the defendant would have accepted a plea offer had the defendant known that the defendant was facing the prospect of being sentenced as a recidivist; thus, the defendant failed to show that counsel's alleged deficiency affected the end result of the case. Furthermore, the defendant did not show in the record that the state made or was amenable to any plea negotiations. Heard v. State, 291 Ga. App. 550, 662 S.E.2d 310 (2008).

Trial counsel's performance was constitutionally deficient because counsel did not advise the defendant during plea negotiations that the defendant faced a mandatory sentence as a recidivist and would be ineligible for parole if the defendant was convicted at trial. Because counsel's performance was deficient, and the defendant made a showing that the defendant was amenable to the state's plea offer of 15 years with six to serve, the case was remanded to the trial court to make the necessary factual determinations concerning the remaining elements of the prejudice analysis regarding whether the prosecution would have withdrawn the offer and whether the trial court would have accepted the plea. Daniel v. State, 342 Ga. App. 448, 803 S.E.2d 603 (2017).

Ineffective assistance for failing to challenge sufficiency of notice. — Defendant failed to show trial counsel's performance was deficient for failing to challenge the sufficiency of the state's notice of intent to seek punishment as a recidivist because there was no evidence in the record that the state failed to provide a copy of the criminal history report, nor was there any evidence that the defendant and counsel were unaware of the specific felony convictions listed in the criminal history record. Williams v. State, 326 Ga. App. 784, 757 S.E.2d 448 (2014).

No ineffective assistance due to failure to challenge sentence. — Even if counsel was professionally deficient in failing to challenge the defendant's sentences for armed robberies, burglary, and aggravated assault based on post-King cases, the defendant could not show Strickland prejudice as the defendant's sentences under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) were legally proper as a prior felony conviction was not an element of those crimes. Hillman v. Johnson, 297 Ga. 609, 774 S.E.2d 615 (2015).

Effect of counsel's inaccurate advice. — Inmate, charged with kidnapping, was facing the possibility of 20 years prison time, except that the sentence could have been enhanced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2) to life without parole; thus, the inmate accepted the advice of counsel to plead guilty to avoid a second trial in another county since the kidnapping offense occurred in two counties. However, the inmate was granted habeas relief as the advice of counsel was incorrect as a second trial was prohibited under double jeopardy principles. Upton v. Johnson, 282 Ga. 600, 652 S.E.2d 516 (2007).

Defendant was properly allowed to withdraw a guilty plea to armed robbery, and the probation revocation that this plea triggered was properly reversed as counsel had been ineffective in misadvising the defendant that the defendant would be eligible for parole if a guilty plea was entered. Instead, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2), the defendant's second conviction for a serious violent felony mandated a sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. Tillman v. Gee, 284 Ga. 416, 667 S.E.2d 600 (2008).

No ineffective assistance of counsel for failure to object to admission of prior convictions. — With regard to the defendant's conviction for distributing cocaine, the defendant failed to establish that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on trial counsel failing to adequately challenge the admission of prior convictions at the sentencing hearing as the evidence established that the state gave the defendant pre-trial notice that the state intended to introduce the convictions at sentencing. Therefore, any objection in that regard would have been futile. Beck v. State, 292 Ga. App. 472, 665 S.E.2d 701 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 922 (Ga. 2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion to withdraw the guilty plea because the defendant did not identify any specific prior guilty pleas that counsel should have objected to as improper considerations for recidivist sentencing.

Effect of recidivism on voluntariness of guilty plea. — Defendant was not entitled to withdraw the defendant's guilty pleas on the ground that trial counsel had failed to inform the defendant that the defendant would be ineligible for parole since the record revealed that trial counsel had informed the defendant of the ramifications of a guilty plea and that the defendant qualified as a recidivist, and the defendant had stated in open court that the defendant was entering the defendant's pleas freely and voluntarily and that the defendant understood, as a recidivist, the defendant would serve the entire sentence in prison. State v. Abel, 210 Vt. 1, 210 A.3d 439 (2019).

Because the defendant failed to show sufficient evidence of a psychological impairment, due in part by ceasing to take needed medication, sleep deprivation, racing thoughts or other psychological turmoil, or that trial counsel was ineffective as to counsel's advice regarding sentencing as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the appeals court agreed that a guilty plea was intelligently and voluntarily entered; thus, the trial court properly denied a motion to withdraw the plea. Frost v. State, 286 Ga. App. 694, 649 S.E.2d 878 (2007).

State met the state's burden of showing that the defendant's plea was freely and voluntarily entered, that the defendant understood the nature of the charges, and that the defendant was aware of the consequences of a guilty plea because the possibility of a nonrecidivist sentence never was presented to or considered by the court; the defendant's response showed that the defendant understood that a nonrecidivist sentence was not a possibility; and trial counsel testified that the defendant and counsel had discussed what the term recidivism meant, and that counsel had explained to the defendant the difference between recidivist and nonrecidivist sentencing several times. Ranger v. State, 330 Ga. App. 578, 768 S.E.2d 768 (2015).

After entering a non-negotiated guilty plea to influencing a witness and being sentenced to the maximum sentence of ten years, with the possibility of parole under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), the defendant's motion to withdraw the plea was properly denied because the defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective in failing to contact the defendant or explain the plea. Coleman v. State, 337 Ga. App. 732, 788 S.E.2d 826 (2016).

Split sentences. — Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to vacate sentences for child molestation, aggravated child molestation, and incest was upheld because to apply the split-sentencing provisions to pre-2006 law would require the court to re-write applicable statutes to make them subject to statutory provisions that did not even exist at the time the statutes were enacted, which the court was prohibited to do without contravening the plain meaning of the statutory text. Bryson v. State, 350 Ga. App. 206, 828 S.E.2d 450 (2019).

Appeals. — Claims that the defendant's sentence under the recidivist statute was invalid were waived as the defendant did not raise the claims of error regarding the defendant's sentence when the defendant appealed the defendant's conviction; thus, having already invoked the appellate process, the defendant was not entitled to raise those claims when the defendant appealed a second time. Taylor v. State, 261 Ga. App. 248, 582 S.E.2d 209 (2003).

Because the defendant's argument that the trial court erred in sentencing the defendant under the recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, was not raised before the trial court, the defendant waived the right to argue it on appeal. Boyd v. State, 302 Ga. App. 455, 691 S.E.2d 325 (2010).

Duty to charge as to section. — It was the duty of the court to charge the jury relative to the provisions of this section in order that the jury's findings with respect to such former offense and sentence might be given effect in the punishment imposed. Winston v. State, 186 Ga. 573, 198 S.E. 667 (1938).

Since former conviction is jury question. — When a former offense and conviction are alleged in the indictment, it is for the jury and not for the court to determine the truth of such allegation. Winston v. State, 186 Ga. 573, 198 S.E. 667 (1938).

Error in recidivist sentence was benefit to defendant. — Defendant cannot complain that the defendant received one year less than the law required since the judge pronounced a 14-year sentence for burglary and a consecutive 5-year sentence for recidivism, yet the court entered a single 19-year sentence. Murphy v. State, 203 Ga. App. 152, 416 S.E.2d 376 (1992).

Since the defendant was sentenced to a shorter term of confinement than that required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the error was a benefit and the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to correct an illegal sentence. O'Neal v. State, 238 Ga. App. 446, 519 S.E.2d 244 (1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1039, 120 S. Ct. 1535, 146 L. Ed. 2d 349 (2000).

Discretion in imposition of sentence. — Trial court's failure to exercise the court's discretion in sentencing the defendant to the maximum was error requiring remand for resentencing. Bradshaw v. State, 237 Ga. App. 627, 516 S.E.2d 333 (1999).

When the defendant was convicted of possession of cocaine with the intent to distribute, the trial court did not err in concluding that the court lacked the discretion to suspend or probate any portion of the defendant's mandatory ten-year minimum sentence because, at sentencing, the state presented evidence that the defendant had three prior felony convictions, including one for possession of cocaine with the intent to distribute; in such cases, the court of appeals had held that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) required the trial court to impose a mandatory minimum ten-year sentence, no part of which could be probated. Thomas v. State, 321 Ga. App. 214, 741 S.E.2d 298 (2013).

Resentencing required. — Although the trial court was required to impose the maximum penalty, the court had discretion to probate or suspend the penalty, and because the court's remarks did not indicate a recognition of this discretion, the court of appeals was required to vacate the sentence and remand the case for resentencing. Minter v. State, 245 Ga. App. 327, 537 S.E.2d 769 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Miller v. State, 285 Ga. 285, 676 S.E.2d 173 (2009).

Ten year sentence for shoplifting inappropriate. — Trial court erred in failing to exercise the sentencing discretion provided under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14 for the shoplifting conviction because the court erroneously concluded that the court was required to impose the maximum sentence of ten years with no eligibility for parole because nothing in the specific sentencing scheme in § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C) permitted application of conflicting provisions in the general recidivist sentencing scheme in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a); instead, the specific scheme controlled. Williams v. State, 261 Ga. App. 176, 582 S.E.2d 141 (2003).

Remand for resentencing required. — Because the trial court retained discretion to sentence a defendant within the minimum and maximum sentence provided for the crime charged, the trial judge erred in stating otherwise when sentencing the defendant to the maximum time to serve for each convicted count, requiring a remand for resentencing. Johnson v. State, 285 Ga. App. 590, 646 S.E.2d 760 (2007).

Even if a trial court improperly constrained the court's own discretion in applying the recidivist statute, any procedural error did not void a defendant's resulting sentence of life imprisonment for armed robbery; thus, the defendant's only remedy was to apply for a writ of habeas corpus. Brown v. State, 295 Ga. App. 66, 670 S.E.2d 867 (2008).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist to ten years imprisonment under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 for theft by shoplifting in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14 because the defendant demonstrated that the trial court did not exercise the court's discretion to consider probating or suspending a portion of the sentence after the defendant served one year pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C). Holland v. State, 310 Ga. App. 623, 714 S.E.2d 126 (2011).

Although a defendant's trial counsel incorrectly stated that the trial court was required to sentence the defendant to ten years to serve for receiving stolen property, given the defendant's three prior felony convictions, the trial court was presumed to have exercised the court's discretion in imposing the sentence. Reese v. State, 313 Ga. App. 746, 722 S.E.2d 441 (2012).

Trial court's failure to exercise the court's discretion as to the three misdemeanor crimes, instead stating that the court was imposing the maximum sentence on each count as required by the recidivism statute, was error that was not harmless as such sentences were only required for subsequent felonies and, thus, remand was necessary. Hobbs v. State, 334 Ga. App. 241, 779 S.E.2d 15 (2015).

Court must impose maximum sentence. — Once the jury finds the defendant to be a multiple offender, the court is required to impose the maximum sentence authorized by law for the offense of which the defendant had been found guilty. Hammond v. State, 139 Ga. App. 820, 229 S.E.2d 685 (1976).

Life without parole was required sentence. — Defendant was required to be sentenced to life without parole for the conviction of murder in light of the defendant's prior kidnapping conviction, and it was not required that the state had been seeking the death penalty for that sentence to be imposed. Kimbrough v. State, 300 Ga. 516, 796 S.E.2d 694 (2017).

Life sentence for murder upheld. — In the defendant's trial for murder, the trial court properly exercised the court's discretion to sentence the defendant to life in prison with the possibility of parole under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-1(e)(1), 17-9-2, and 17-10-7(a), rather than life without the possibility of parole, because parole did not extend the duration of the sentence. Blackwell v. State, 302 Ga. 820, 809 S.E.2d 727 (2018).

Life without parole appropriate sentence for multiple felon. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to correct a void sentence as the sentence of life imprisonment without parole imposed by the trial court was supported by the defendant's three prior felony convictions, and there was no merit to the defendant's claim that the law did not allow for the life sentence because the state failed to follow the procedures required for a death penalty case. Bihlear v. State, 341 Ga. App. 364, 801 S.E.2d 68 (2017).

No parole for fourth offender recidivist. — Since certified records of at least five noticed prior felony convictions were introduced by the state, sentence of the defendant to life imprisonment without eligibility for parole was required under the applicable version of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 which removed the possibility of parole in regard to the sentence of fourth offender recidivists. State v. Willis, 218 Ga. App. 402, 461 S.E.2d 576 (1995).

In discussing the proposed sentence on a guilty plea, the court did not commit reversible error by informing the defendant that, as a recidivist, the defendant would get the maximum punishment since the court had inquired and the defendant had offered no evidence in mitigation. Quarterman v. State, 223 Ga. App. 566, 479 S.E.2d 397 (1996).

Trial court was required to sentence the defendant to life imprisonment because the defendant had previously been convicted of a felony under Georgia law and sentenced to confinement in a penal institution. Webb v. State, 251 Ga. App. 414, 554 S.E.2d 563 (2001).

Trial court correctly understood that under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 the court was required to impose the maximum sentence for each current felony conviction but had the discretion to probate or suspend part of that sentence (which the court chose not to do). Whether the offense for which the defendant currently stood convicted was defendant's second, third, fourth or fourteenth, the only sentence imposable for such conviction was the maximum time prescribed by the statute for that offense. Buckner v. State, 253 Ga. App. 294, 558 S.E.2d 823 (2002).

Defendant's sentence to life imprisonment without parole for the defendant's conviction of aggravated child molestation was not illegal as the sentence was the defendant's second "serious violent felony" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a)(5), and, accordingly, the trial court had no discretion but to impose that sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2); it was noted that the defendant's motion to vacate, modify, correct, or set aside the sentence was made four and a half years after the defendant's sentencing, at which point the trial court no longer had jurisdiction because it was past the court's term. Gosnell v. State, 262 Ga. App. 641, 586 S.E.2d 350 (2003).

Trial court did not have the power to sentence the defendant who was convicted of armed robbery after the defendant was already convicted of committing other felonies to probation, or to suspend any part of the defendant's sentence, and because life in prison was the maximum penalty for armed robbery, the trial court properly sentenced the defendant to life in prison without parole. Thompson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 696, 595 S.E.2d 377 (2004).

Defendant's 20-year sentences without parole for burglary and aggravated assault were not improper merely because the defendant was eligible for parole on the murder conviction after 14 years pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(c)(1); O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c) mandated the maximum sentences for burglary and aggravated assault without parole and did not require probation or suspension of any part. Clark v. State, 279 Ga. 243, 611 S.E.2d 38 (2005).

Trial court did not err at the defendant's resentencing hearing in resentencing the defendant to 20 years, after the court had originally sentenced the defendant to two concurrent 12-year terms for aggravated assault convictions because, as a recidivist, the defendant should have been given the maximum sentence of 20 years as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). Hill v. State, 272 Ga. App. 280, 612 S.E.2d 92 (2005).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a) defined both rape and aggravated sodomy as "serious violent felonies"; thus, in light of a prior aggravated sodomy conviction, a trial court would have been required to sentence the defendant to life without parole for subsequent violent rape felonies under the sentencing statutes either as the statutes existed at the time of the rapes, 1996, or at the time of the defendant's trial, 1998. Thompson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 657, 632 S.E.2d 407 (2006).

Trial court properly vacated a consent order modifying the defendant's original sentence as such was based upon a mistake of law induced by the defendant personally, and hence, void; moreover, because the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist, the trial court was required to impose a sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). Sosebee v. State, 282 Ga. App. 905, 640 S.E.2d 379 (2006).

Because the defendant was a three-time recidivist and because the maximum sentence for aggravated sodomy was life in prison, the trial court correctly imposed sentence against the defendant to serve life in prison without the possibility of parole. Bharadia v. State, 282 Ga. App. 556, 639 S.E.2d 545 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0522, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 222 (Ga. 2007).

Failure to specify sentencing provision. — Since the trial court, in erroneously finding that the defendant had three prior convictions rather than only two, erred only to the extent that the court did not specify that the sentences were being imposed pursuant to subsection (a) rather than subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the case was remanded with direction to amend the order sentencing the defendant to show that the defendant was not found to be a fourth offender under § 17-10-7(b). Mitchell v. State, 202 Ga. App. 100, 413 S.E.2d 517 (1991).

Because the record reflected that the defendant's five convictions were not consolidated for trial, and the trial court necessarily was sentencing the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), which applied to defendants having three or more prior felony convictions, the defendant was sentenced correctly; while it would have been the better practice for the trial court to plainly indicate on the court's final disposition which subsection of the repeat offender statute applied to the defendant's recidivist sentence, the failure to do so did not amount to reversible error. Harper v. State, 270 Ga. App. 376, 606 S.E.2d 599 (2004).

Judicial discretion. — Although the defendant would be required under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) to serve the maximum time provided in the sentence of the judge, the sentence of the judge was by no means fixed; because the trial judge mistakenly believed that a life sentence was mandatory, the judge failed to exercise judicial discretion. Blevins v. State, 270 Ga. App. 388, 606 S.E.2d 624 (2004).

Whether offense is defendant's second, third, fourth, or fourteenth, the only sentence imposable for such conviction is the maximum time prescribed by the statute for that offense. Hammond v. State, 139 Ga. App. 820, 229 S.E.2d 685 (1976).

State introduced three prior felony convictions at the defendant's sentencing on a fourth felony conviction for possession of cocaine and, thus, the trial court was authorized to sentence the defendant under the recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, to any sentence permitted under that statute for a fourth-time felon. Taylor v. State, 261 Ga. App. 248, 582 S.E.2d 209 (2003).

Defendant's third prior felony conviction did not count for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), inasmuch as that conviction was entered only after the defendant committed the crimes of which the defendant was convicted. The terms of § 17-10-7(c) plainly forbid parole only when a defendant, "after having been convicted" of three felonies, committed another felony. Barber v. State, 316 Ga. App. 701, 730 S.E.2d 176 (2012).

Effect of maximum punishment requirement for second offense. — Maximum penalty might be imposed on a first conviction. The requirement of this section, that it must be imposed in the event of a second conviction, does not alter the character of the original offense or provide for a different punishment. McWhorter v. State, 118 Ga. 55, 44 S.E. 873 (1903).

Sentenced for a second offense of cocaine possession. — Defendant's previous conviction for cocaine possession with intent to distribute constituted a previous conviction for cocaine possession that triggered the mandatory 30-year sentencing for a second simple possession offense under O.C.G.A. § 16-30-30(c). Smiley v. State, 241 Ga. App. 712, 527 S.E.2d 585 (2000).

If prior felony punished as for misdemeanor, maximum punishment rule inapplicable. — If evidence showed that although the defendant was convicted of a reducible felony, the defendant was only sentenced to misdemeanor punishment, the defendant was thus not "sentenced to confinement and labor in the penitentiary" under this section so as to make this conviction relevant under the second conviction rule prescribing maximum punishment. Mobley v. State, 101 Ga. App. 317, 113 S.E.2d 654 (1960).

If maximum punishment applicable, punishment for misdemeanor inapplicable. — When it was decided that former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7), fixing the punishment of a second felony at the maximum time for the felony of which the defendant was convicted in this prosecution, is applicable, it necessarily follows that former Code 1933, § 27-2501 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-5), which authorizes reductions in the severity of punishment for certain felonies to the level applied in misdemeanors, which was a punishment less than that for a felony, was inapplicable. Moye v. State, 70 Ga. App. 890, 29 S.E.2d 791 (1944).

Judge may impose maximum sentence when prior sentence probated. — Trial judge did not err in giving a maximum sentence under this section since the record disclosed that on a prior conviction the defendant was sentenced to confinement and labor in the penitentiary with the privilege of serving the sentence on probation. Bennett v. State, 132 Ga. App. 397, 208 S.E.2d 181 (1974).

Failure to probate sentence. — In sentencing a four-time recidivist, the trial court's failure to exercise the court's discretion to probate a portion of the maximum 20-year sentence was reversible error. Banks v. State, 225 Ga. App. 754, 484 S.E.2d 786 (1997).

Probating portion of sentence appropriate. — Based upon a defendant's three prior felony convictions, the defendant's sentencing was governed by both O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) and (c), and the trial court was required to apply both. The trial court properly exercised the court's discretion when the court probated a portion of the defendant's sentence. Jefferson v. State, 309 Ga. App. 861, 711 S.E.2d 412 (2011).

Probation was not available option. — Trial court properly sentenced the defendant to life imprisonment because, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), the court lacked discretion to probate any portion of the sentence. Grace v. State, 347 Ga. App. 396, 819 S.E.2d 674 (2018).

Proof of prior conviction need not be made basis for maximum penalty. — Allegation and proof that the defendant had previously been sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary would tend to prejudice defendant and need not be made as a basis for the imposition of the maximum penalty provided by this section. McWhorter v. State, 118 Ga. 55, 44 S.E. 873 (1903).

Consolidation for trial. — Fact that sentences were entered on the same day and that the sentences on one charge ran concurrent with the other sentence did not require the conclusion that the two prior convictions had been "consolidated for trial" within the meaning of the statute when burglary and criminal damage to property convictions were committed against different victims on the same date, both convictions were the result of separate indictments, and a separate order of sentence was entered on each indictment. Thompson v. State, 237 Ga. App. 466, 517 S.E.2d 339 (1999).

Section may be applied to defendant charged with armed robbery. — If death is not a possible sentence insofar as punishment is concerned, the offense cannot be capital and a defendant charged with armed robbery may be indicted as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Ivory v. State, 160 Ga. App. 193, 286 S.E.2d 435 (1981).

Imposition under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 of sentence of life imprisonment for armed robbery is not cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the United States Const., amend. 8. Chappell v. State, 164 Ga. App. 77, 296 S.E.2d 629 (1982), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Standing of non-parolees to challenge constitutionality. — Appellant lacked standing to challenge the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 on the theory that the statute diminishes the powers and authority of Board of Pardons and Paroles until the defendant claimed a right of parole and the statute was asserted against the defendant as a bar. Sewell v. State, 162 Ga. App. 483, 291 S.E.2d 783 (1982); Stevens v. State, 210 Ga. App. 355, 436 S.E.2d 82 (1993); Guice v. State, 223 Ga. App. 161, 477 S.E.2d 322 (1996).

Defendant lacked standing to challenge the failure to impose parole pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 until the defendant claimed a right of parole and the statute was asserted against the defendant as a bar. Butler v. State, 277 Ga. App. 57, 625 S.E.2d 458 (2005).

Notice to defendant of intent to prosecute as a recidivist performs the function of any required notice in an indictment. Anderson v. State, 176 Ga. App. 255, 335 S.E.2d 487 (1985); Anderson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 559, 405 S.E.2d 558 (1991).

Failure to inform on parole. — In sentencing the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), there was no requirement that the trial court inform the defendant that there was no eligibility for parole. Hildreth v. State, 256 Ga. App. 832, 570 S.E.2d 49 (2002).

Notice of intent to use prior convictions is sufficient. — There was no error since the trial court found the notice of intent to use prior convictions sufficient to allow the defendant's sentencing because the matters asserted were merely served by the prosecutor and not returned in a separate count of the indictment. Bonds v. State, 203 Ga. App. 51, 416 S.E.2d 329, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 329 (1992).

Notice of state's intentions to use prior convictions in aggravation of punishment was fair when served on the defendant more than a week before trial. Martin v. State, 205 Ga. App. 200, 422 S.E.2d 6 (1992).

Because state's written notice sufficiently notified the defendant of the state's intent to seek recidivist sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 upon conviction of felony obstruction of an officer, and during plea negotiations the state again referenced the defendant's prior criminal history and reiterated the state would seek recidivist punishment, no error occurred in imposing the sentence based on lack of notice. Evans v. State, 290 Ga. App. 746, 660 S.E.2d 841 (2008).

Prior convictions listed on an attached GCIC as aggravation evidence for a defendant's sentencing for theft by deception were sufficient notice that the state intended to seek sentencing as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-7. Parks v. State, 294 Ga. App. 646, 669 S.E.2d 684 (2008).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the prosecutor properly served under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5) the state's notice of intent to seek recidivist punishment and introduce evidence of the defendant's prior convictions on defense counsel on the first day of trial; any defects or untimeliness in the notice were waived as certified copies of the convictions were admitted without objection. Howard v. State, 297 Ga. App. 316, 677 S.E.2d 375 (2009).

State timely filed the state's notice of intent to use the defendant's prior convictions in aggravation of punishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the state provided the notice four days before trial; the state served and filed the state's notice of intent on March 20, 2008, and trial commenced on March 24. Shindorf v. State, 303 Ga. App. 553, 694 S.E.2d 177 (2010).

Trial court did not err by sentencing defendant to serve sentence without parole. — Trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant to serve the defendant's sentence without parole pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) as the state notified the defendant in the indictment and a separate notice that the state intended to seek recidivist punishment, and the state produced copies of three prior felony convictions, which were used to sentence the defendant. King v. State, 290 Ga. App. 118, 658 S.E.2d 883 (2008).

Imprisonment for prior crime not prerequisite to applicability. — Application of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is not contingent on a person having been convicted of a felony and sentenced to confinement for that person's prior crime; the statute may also apply if the person had been given a probated sentence. Hernandez v. State, 182 Ga. App. 797, 357 S.E.2d 131 (1987).

Prior federal conviction not predicate for second-offender treatment. — Defendant may not be sentenced as a second offender recidivist based upon a previous mail theft conviction in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee. Only Georgia convictions provide the predicate for second-offender treatment. Cofer v. State, 166 Ga. App. 436, 304 S.E.2d 537 (1983) (decided prior to 1984 amendment).

Prior federal felony conviction not shown to be a felony under Georgia law. — Trial court erred in imposing a recidivist sentence against the defendant without the possibility of parole under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the state failed to establish that the defendant's federal felony conviction for theft or receipt of stolen mail, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1708, was considered a felony under Georgia law. Davis v. State, 319 Ga. App. 501, 736 S.E.2d 160 (2012).

Fourth-offender provisions cover both prior federal and other state convictions. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b), dealing with fourth offenders, was added in 1953 and specifically encompasses both prior federal convictions and prior convictions in other states. Cofer v. State, 166 Ga. App. 436, 304 S.E.2d 537 (1983).

Section applicable when defendant found guilty of voluntary manslaughter. — Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is applicable to felonies and since the death penalty was not sought, neither the offense charged nor the offense of which the accused was found guilty, voluntary manslaughter, was a capital felony within that section's meaning; therefore, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to strike the recidivist counts. Scott v. State, 172 Ga. App. 725, 324 S.E.2d 565 (1984).

Possession of firearm by convicted felon. — Prior felony conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-11-131, regarding possession of firearms by convicted felons, cannot also be used to punish a defendant as a repeat offender under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). King v. State, 169 Ga. App. 444, 313 S.E.2d 144 (1984).

Prior felony conviction for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon was properly considered for purposes of sentencing a defendant as a recidivist because the court did not use the underlying felony used to convict the defendant of being a felon in possession of a firearm to enhance the defendant's punishment as a repeat offender. Nelson v. State, 210 Ga. App. 249, 435 S.E.2d 750 (1993).

Rape now included in cases to which § 17-10-7 applies. — Capital cases to which O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is not applicable no longer include the offense of rape. Haslem v. State, 160 Ga. App. 251, 286 S.E.2d 748 (1981).

Mistaken sentence may be corrected. — Judge who through a mistaken interpretation of the law incorrectly sentences an habitual offender to less than the term required by law is required and empowered to increase the sentence later on after the error becomes known. Wallace v. State, 175 Ga. App. 685, 333 S.E.2d 874 (1985).

Defendant may not contest O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 until defendant claims right of parole and the statute is asserted against defendant as a bar. Ivory v. State, 160 Ga. App. 193, 286 S.E.2d 435 (1981); Martin v. State, 205 Ga. App. 200, 422 S.E.2d 6 (1992).

Consideration of mitigating factor when mandatory sentence applies. — Although O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 requires the trial court to consider fact of tender of restitution by criminal offender to a victim before imposing sentence, failure of trial court to consider this fact was not error since the sentence imposed was mandatory under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Chappell v. State, 164 Ga. App. 77, 296 S.E.2d 629 (1982), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

If armed robbery indictment contains recidivist count which specifically invokes O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, rather than the specific recidivist sentencing statute for armed robbery, O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(b), the trial court errs when the court sets the final sentence pursuant to § 16-8-41(b). Under such an indictment and a guilty verdict, the trial court is required to sentence the defendant, pursuant to § 17-10-7(a), to "the longest period of time prescribed" for armed robbery, that sentence being life imprisonment. State v. Baldwin, 167 Ga. App. 737, 307 S.E.2d 679 (1983); Stone v. State, 218 Ga. App. 350, 461 S.E.2d 548 (1995).

For the purpose of punishment, armed robbery was not a capital felony; the general recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), included, for purpose of punishment, armed robbery, and a sentence of life without parole for defendant's armed robbery conviction was proper and was affirmed. Dixon v. State, 267 Ga. App. 479, 600 S.E.2d 415 (2004).

Life without parole. — There is no requirement that a kidnapping victim receive bodily injury when sentencing is pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1; moreover, as the defendant had also been convicted of armed robbery, the trial court correctly imposed a mandatory life without parole sentence for either of the defendant's second serious violent felonies: kidnapping and armed robbery. Moorer v. State, 286 Ga. App. 395, 649 S.E.2d 537 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1910, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 806 (Ga. 2007).

An inmate who sought a writ of habeas corpus had been properly sentenced to life without the possibility of parole under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2). A felony murder charge with the underlying felony of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon had been vacated by operation of law, and no conviction on that charge had been entered; accordingly, unlike the case relied upon by the habeas court, the trial court had not used the prior felony conviction both to support a possession conviction and to enhance the inmate's sentence. Walker v. Hale, 283 Ga. 131, 657 S.E.2d 227, cert. denied, 555 U.S. 911, 129 S. Ct. 255, 172 L.Ed.2d 192 (2008).

Proper application of recidivism. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), the defendant's two prior convictions as a habitual violator allowed the defendant to be sentenced as a recidivist after the defendant was convicted of two drug crimes. Morrison v. State, 256 Ga. App. 23, 567 S.E.2d 360 (2002).

Because the defendant failed to show an infringement of rights or a procedural irregularity relating to the three prior felony convictions the state used to support the imposition of a recidivist sentence, that sentence was upheld. Hampton v. State, 287 Ga. App. 896, 652 S.E.2d 915 (2007).

In a felony murder case, as the defendant was convicted of both predicate felonies, armed robbery and burglary, it was within the trial court's discretion to choose to merge the former rather than the latter into the felony murder count for which the defendant was sentenced. Thus, the defendant was not sentenced as a recidivist for felony murder, but was properly sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) to 20 years without the possibility of parole for the separate crime of burglary, which did not merge into the conviction for felony murder while in the commission of an armed robbery. Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. 484, 668 S.E.2d 700 (2008).

As a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(c)(1) (operating a vehicle by a habitual offender whose license has been revoked) is punishable by one to five years' imprisonment, the offense is a felony. Since a defendant had four prior convictions for violations of § 40-5-58(c)(1), the defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). Hollis v. State, 295 Ga. App. 529, 672 S.E.2d 487 (2009).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) because the indictment stated that the defendant was in lawful confinement for the 1987 felony convictions and, thus, those convictions were properly admitted at trial to prove felony escape, O.C.G.A. § 16-10-52, for which the defendant could be sentenced up to ten years imprisonment; because the defendant's 1987 conviction for theft by taking was not used by the state as the predicate felony for the offense of felony escape pursuant to § 16-10-52(b), the 1987 felony theft by taking conviction remained available for sentence enhancement under § 17-10-7(a), and, inasmuch as the record was silent as to the specific felony conviction the trial court relied upon for sentence enhancement, it had to be presumed that the trial court knew the state of the law and did not use any of the 1987 felony convictions listed in the escape indictment to enhance the defendant's punishment under § 17-10-7(a). Allen v. State, 286 Ga. 273, 687 S.E.2d 417 (2009).

There was no error in the trial court's entry of sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d) because the defendant pled guilty to various counts of entering an automobile and theft by receiving, which were alleged in three separate indictments on which three separate orders of sentence were entered; each indictment alleged crimes that occurred on different days. Baker v. State, 306 Ga. App. 99, 701 S.E.2d 572 (2010).

Instruction on elements of recidivism. — Trial court was not required by the constitution to instruct the jury on the elements of recidivism. McCoy v. Newsome, 953 F.2d 1252 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 944, 112 S. Ct. 2283, 119 L. Ed. 2d 208 (1992).

Recidivism not jury issue. — Defendant has no right to a jury trial on a recidivism count. Zachery v. State, 241 Ga. App. 722, 527 S.E.2d 601 (2000).

Controlling issue on appeal is would result have been different. — When the defendant showed the constitutional deficiency of the defendant's appellate counsel for not raising an improper jury instruction, the habeas court used the wrong analysis of whether the defendant also showed prejudice by considering the possibility that the defendant would be subject to the same punishment on remand, as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b), and thus showed no prejudice because the proper analysis looked only at whether the result of the defendant's appeal would have been different. Nelson v. Hall, 275 Ga. 792, 573 S.E.2d 42 (2002).

Issues raised on appeal. — Since the defendant did not raise the issue of intelligent and voluntary waiver with respect to prior guilty pleas in the trial court, it was held that issues which were not raised in the trial court cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Mincey v. State, 186 Ga. App. 839, 368 S.E.2d 796 (1988).

Defendant's life sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 should be sustained if the state demonstrates that the defendant was previously convicted of a felony under the laws of this state and was sentenced to confinement in a penal institution. Melton v. State, 216 Ga. App. 215, 454 S.E.2d 545 (1995).

No review of sentence within guidelines. — Appellate court declined to review the defendant's 30-year sentence because the sentence was within the statutory guidelines; the defendant was found guilty of possessing cocaine with the intent to distribute, the state introduced three prior felony convictions in aggravation of sentencing pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), and given the defendant's prior drug convictions and the mandate of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), the defendant faced a maximum punishment of life in prison under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d). Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 619, 644 S.E.2d 491 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1169, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 521 (Ga. 2007).

Ten-year sentence for shoplifting appropriate. — In applying the statute for imposition of recidivist sentencing, based on the defendant's four prior felony drug convictions, the trial court had no discretion with regard to the term of the sentence and was required to sentence the defendant to ten years, which was the maximum sentence for theft by shoplifting. Allen v. State, 325 Ga. App. 752, 754 S.E.2d 795 (2014).

Sentence of ten years to serve for felony shoplifting was upheld; contrary to the defendant's contention, the trial court did not sentence the defendant as a recidivist pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. The trial court's imposition of a sentence within the statutory limits would not be disturbed. Tyner v. State, 313 Ga. App. 557, 722 S.E.2d 177 (2012).

No error in imposition of sentence. — As the defendant was not sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) or to the maximum term pursuant to § 17-10-7(a) for a conviction of aggravated assault, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(b), the defendant's claim that the sentencing imposed was improper lacked merit. Tatum v. State, 297 Ga. App. 550, 677 S.E.2d 740 (2009).

Sentence of 30 years for each of the three attempted armed-robbery convictions fell within the statutory range and was not void. Issa v. State, 340 Ga. App. 327, 796 S.E.2d 725 (2017).

Sentence was within statutory range. — Trial court did not err in imposing separate sentences for the defendant's two convictions because the sentence was within the statutory range and the law allowed separate and consecutive punishment for separate criminal transactions;

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 applies to the use of prior convictions to enhance the punishment of repeat offenders, and the statute does not apply to the trial court's authority to impose separate sentences for a defendant's current convictions of two distinct offenses committed on different dates. Ross v. State, 313 Ga. App. 695, 722 S.E.2d 411 (2012).

Sentence not cruel and unusual. — Trial court did not commit cruel and unusual punishment in sentencing a defendant to two consecutive terms of 20 years to serve in confinement for two burglary convictions under O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a), based on the defendant's recidivism under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), because the sentence was within statutory limits. Hight v. State, 302 Ga. App. 826, 692 S.E.2d 69 (2010).

Allegation and Proof of Prior Convictions

Knowing and voluntarily entered pleas. — Defendant's signature on forms in which the defendant acknowledged that the defendant was aware of specified constitutional rights and that the defendant was waiving those rights by pleading guilty, which the defendant signed in regard to three prior negotiated guilty pleas, showed that the defendant was aware the defendant was waiving constitutional rights when entering those guilty pleas, and permitted the trial court to find the state met the state's burden of proving the defendant's guilty pleas were validly entered; accordingly, the state showed that those prior pleas were knowingly and voluntarily entered for the purpose of the defendant being sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). Hall v. State, 261 Ga. App. 64, 581 S.E.2d 695 (2003).

Offenses charged in indictment for which defendant is on trial cannot be considered in determining defendant's status as a recidivist. McCoy v. State, 168 Ga. App. 598, 310 S.E.2d 2 (1983).

First offender guilty plea was not prior conviction. — Defendant would not have been subject to recidivist treatment and plea counsel's advice in this regard was erroneous because one of the prior felony convictions was based on a first offender guilty plea, which did not constitute a "conviction" for those purposes. Ingram v. State, 338 Ga. App. 552, 790 S.E.2d 641 (2016).

First offender probation not admissible. — Trial court erred in admitting the defendant's prior guilty plea, which had been resolved by placing the defendant on probation, as a first offender, in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist; however, the error was harmless since there was evidence of another guilty plea to felony counts sufficient to support a maximum sentence. Scott v. State, 216 Ga. App. 692, 455 S.E.2d 609 (1995).

Defendant violated the terms of first offender probation. — Due to the defendant's earlier violation of the terms of the defendant's first offender probation, the defendant was a convicted felon at the time of sentencing by the trial court; therefore, the trial court did not err in treating the defendant as a repeat offender. Daniels v. State, 271 Ga. 167, 517 S.E.2d 66 (1999).

Prior federal felony conviction shown to be felony under Georgia law. — For purposes of Georgia's recidivist statute, the defendant's federal conviction for conspiracy to transport stolen goods, in which the defendant admitted that the defendant stole more than $5,000 worth of silver, and that the defendant transported that stolen property across state lines, was a conviction that would have constituted a felony under Georgia law based on the state offense of theft by receiving as the defendant received stolen property with a value that exceeded $500. Nordahl v. State, 344 Ga. App. 686, 811 S.E.2d 465 (2018), aff'd, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Convictions while a juvenile. — Defendant could not be found to be a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) since one of the defendant's prior felony convictions was invalid as the conviction was for burglaries committed when the defendant was 16 years of age; the superior court did not have concurrent jurisdiction with the juvenile court to find the defendant guilty of a felony under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(1) because the punishment for burglary was neither death nor life imprisonment under O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1. Smith v. State, 266 Ga. App. 111, 596 S.E.2d 230 (2004).

Convictions when juvenile tried as adult. — Defendant's sentence to life in prison without parole, under the three felony recidivist sentencing provision of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), was proper as the trial court could rely on an armed robbery conviction from the superior court against the defendant when the defendant was 16 years old as the court properly assumed jurisdiction over the matter. Moore v. State, 276 Ga. App. 55, 622 S.E.2d 417 (2005).

Out-of-state convictions for acts committed while defendant was a juvenile could not be used as prior felony convictions for purposes of recidivist sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the defendant would not have been convicted of felonies in this state, but would have been adjudicated delinquent. Miller v. State, 231 Ga. App. 869, 501 S.E.2d 42 (1998).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because the trial court committed no error in using the defendant's 1991 Michigan armed robbery conviction as a predicate offense for recidivist punishment as the state met the state's burden of proving that the defendant's Michigan conviction was for conduct that would have been considered a felony under Georgia law because, if the defendant had committed the offense of armed robbery in Georgia as a juvenile in 1991, a superior court would have had concurrent jurisdiction over the matter and the defendant could have been convicted of the felony offense of armed robbery. Anderson v. State, 337 Ga. App. 739, 788 S.E.2d 831 (2016).

Requirements of indictment for recidivist punishment. — Indictment for the second offense must allege the indictment and conviction of the accused for the first offense. Harris v. State, 40 Ga. App. 228, 149 S.E. 153 (1929).

Defendant must be indicted as a recidivist in order to impose recidivist punishment. Brown v. State, 144 Ga. App. 509, 241 S.E.2d 621 (1978).

For one to receive recidivist punishment one must have been indicted under a recidivist statute, one's prior convictions having been considered by the grand jury and having been included in the indictment. Aldridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 719, 282 S.E.2d 189 (1981).

Defendant's prior felony convictions could not be used against the defendant since there was no recidivist charge contained in the indictment and the record did not contain any other affirmative notice to the defendant that the defendant's prior felony offenses would be used against the defendant for recidivist purposes during sentencing. State v. Freeman, 198 Ga. App. 553, 402 S.E.2d 529 (1991).

In a prosecution for armed robbery, even though the defendant was not indicted as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, the court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist since the state provided notice to the defendant that the defendant's prior offenses would be used against the defendant for recidivist purposes during sentencing. Kinsey v. State, 219 Ga. App. 204, 464 S.E.2d 648 (1995).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for burglary, the trial court properly sentenced the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 to 20 years, with ten years to serve in prison without parole and the remainder of the sentence suspended on the condition that the defendant not violate any laws, as a result of three prior felony convictions because the defendant waived any claimed error by failing to challenge the sentence. However, even if the error had not been waived, the recidivist sentence was proper since the state proved all four of the convictions that were listed in the indictment and notices and, although the trial court stated that the court was not relying on the defendant's robbery convictions in imposing a sentence, there was no reason those convictions could not be used to support the sentence. Battise v. State, 295 Ga. App. 833, 673 S.E.2d 262 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C0917, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 369 (Ga. 2009).

Trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant as a recidivist since the defendant's convictions for selling cocaine and possessing a firearm as a convicted felon were separate convictions and were not merged for sentencing purposes. The trial court's use of the same waiver form with regard to the defendant's guilty pleas did not negate the fact that the convictions were separate and were not consolidated. Crutchfield v. State, 295 Ga. App. 490, 672 S.E.2d 467 (2009).

Recidivist punishment appropriate. — Because the state provided adequate notice to the defendant of the state's intent to ask for recidivist sentencing and counsel chose to move forward at sentencing without making any objection, the trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist. Pruitt v. State, 354 Ga. App. 73, 840 S.E.2d 597 (2020).

No evidence that out-of-state convictions were felonies in Georgia. — Because the trial court considered the out-of-state convictions without evidence that the convictions were for conduct that would have constituted felonies in Georgia, the felony sentences were vacated and the case remanded for re-sentencing. Woodson v. State, 242 Ga. App. 67, 530 S.E.2d 2 (2000), aff'd, 273 Ga. 557, 544 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

When the defendant was sentenced to a life sentence as a recidivist, but a certified copy of the defendant's prior conviction from another state was not included in the record, the appellate court could not uphold the sentence as the court had no opportunity to inspect the prior conviction, nor did the state offer any proof that the acts of which the defendant was convicted in the prior conviction were a felony in Georgia, and it appeared that the prior sentence was for probation alone, meaning that the defendant was not "sentenced to confinement in a penal institution" as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). Wheeler v. State, 270 Ga. App. 363, 606 S.E.2d 612 (2004).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because the defendant's prior Florida convictions did not match the elements of felonies in Georgia and, thus, did not qualify as predicate convictions. Butler v. State, 354 Ga. App. 473, 841 S.E.2d 162 (2020).

Proof of previous felony allegation must be made before the accused can be subjected to the maximum punishment prescribed. Harris v. State, 40 Ga. App. 228, 149 S.E. 153 (1929).

Failure to charge recidivism in indictment not error. — Since the state served notice to the defendant that the state planned to seek recidivist sentencing and to offer the defendant's prior convictions into evidence as aggravating factors, it was not error for the state to fail to charge the defendant under the recidivist statute in the indictment or for the court to sentence the defendant under such statute. Mikell v. State, 231 Ga. App. 85, 498 S.E.2d 531 (1998).

When sentencing the defendant as a recidivist, the trial court erred in considering prior convictions which were not supported by admissible evidence. Williams v. State, 235 Ga. App. 876, 510 S.E.2d 848 (1999).

Recidivism evidence used to enhance sentence. — Trial court may impose a higher degree of punishment for an offense due to evidence in aggravation of the punishment of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 and not have sentenced the defendant under a recidivist statute when the defendant was never indicted under a recidivist statute. Williams v. State, 208 Ga. App. 716, 431 S.E.2d 469 (1993).

Trial court properly resentenced the defendant to ten years, six to serve, on the defendant's guilty plea to sale of marijuana as the state provided an additional recidivist notice which listed three prior felony convictions and O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) did not give the trial judge discretion to impose less than the maximum sentence under those circumstances. West v. State, 255 Ga. App. 334, 565 S.E.2d 538 (2002).

Because the state introduced certified copies of convictions at the defendant's sentencing proving that, while represented by counsel, defendant pled guilty to at least three separate felony offenses, and the defendant did not produce any counter evidence showing an infringement of the defendant's rights or a procedural irregularity in the taking of the pleas, the state properly met the state's burden of proof of showing recidivism. Clark v. State, 279 Ga. 243, 611 S.E.2d 38 (2005).

Trial court did not err in considering the defendant's three prior sale-of-cocaine convictions as three separate convictions for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c); even though two of the prior convictions were entered on the same date by the same judge and had concurrent sentences, the convictions were separately indicted and concerned two separate sales of cocaine that took place on different days. Butler v. State, 277 Ga. App. 57, 625 S.E.2d 458 (2005).

Because the defendant's three prior felony convictions, and a subsequent conviction of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon as a result of one or more of those felonies, remained separate felonies that could be used to impose a recidivist punishment for the commission of yet another felony, and the defendant did not seek to collaterally attack any of those convictions, the recidivists sentences imposed under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 were valid. Campbell v. State, 279 Ga. App. 331, 631 S.E.2d 388 (2006).

Trial court properly sentenced the defendant as a repeat offender under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) since the defendant had previously been convicted of three prior crimes which would have been felonies if committed in Georgia; moreover, there was no evidence in the record to support claims that defendant was not represented by counsel in the prior matters. McConnell v. State, 281 Ga. App. 303, 635 S.E.2d 882 (2006).

Because sufficient proof of the necessary prior convictions, even without inclusion of the defendant's first offender plea, existed to authorize punishment under both O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30 and 17-10-7, the recidivist sentence imposed by the trial court was upheld. Johnson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 724, 644 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, No. S07C1179, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 538 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion complaining of the imposition of recidivist sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) as the defendant did not establish that the trial court erred in considering any of the defendant's three prior felony convictions for purposes of recidivist sentencing. Defendant's argument that a third prior conviction was not final since the conviction still involved a period of probation that had not yet been discharged or revoked was found meritless as the prior conviction at issue did not involve a first offender sentence. Land v. State, 291 Ga. App. 617, 662 S.E.2d 368 (2008).

Trial court correctly sentenced a defendant to serve life without the possibility of parole because the defendant was a four-time recidivist and the maximum sentence for rape was life in prison. Further, the state provided the defendant with notice prior to trial that the state would seek to have the defendant sentenced as a recidivist, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Hall v. State, 292 Ga. App. 544, 664 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, No. S08C1841, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 926 (Ga. 2008).

Trial court erred in using the defendant's August 2001 felony convictions to sentence the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) because, at the time of the defendant's sentencing for escape in October 2001, the August 2001 convictions were unavailable for recidivist treatment since those convictions were pending on appeal; the defendant was found guilty and sentenced on armed robberies in August 2001, the defendant appealed those convictions, and the convictions were affirmed three years later. Allen v. State, 286 Ga. 273, 687 S.E.2d 417 (2009).

Trial court properly sentenced the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 following a shoplifting conviction because the record of the plea proceeding in a prior case wherein the defendant pled guilty belied the claim that the defendant was not adequately advised of the right to a jury trial, thus, the trial court did not err in considering, for purposes of sentencing, that prior conviction. Foster v. State, 319 Ga. App. 815, 738 S.E.2d 651 (2013).

Because the felony convictions not challenged by the defendant would have sufficed to render the defendant a recidivist and because both of the defendant's attacks on prior convictions for drug possession with intent to distribute lacked merit, the trial court did not err when the court considered those prior convictions and sentenced the defendant to serve 30 years without parole under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(b) and 17-10-7(c). Merritt v. State, 329 Ga. App. 871, 766 S.E.2d 217 (2014).

Evidence of previous conviction relevant to punishment for second conviction. — As to defendants charged with a felony punishable by labor in the penitentiary, evidence of a previous conviction and sentence for a felony is relevant evidence on the question of the punishment to be inflicted in the event of a conviction for a second felony. Kryder v. State, 212 Ga. 272, 91 S.E.2d 612, cert. denied, 352 U.S. 850, 77 S. Ct. 71, 1 L. Ed. 2d 61 (1956).

Introduction of former indictments, pleas of guilty, and sentences are the highest and best evidence of such facts. Timbs v. State, 71 Ga. App. 141, 30 S.E.2d 290 (1944).

Use of arrest photographs to demonstrate prior convictions. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion during the sentencing phase of the defendant's trial on charges of armed robbery and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony when the court considered photographs that were taken when the defendant was arrested on another charge to determine that the defendant was the person convicted of that charge, even though the defendant was arrested and convicted under another name, or when the court found that the defendant was subject to a sentence of life in prison without parole because the defendant had prior felony convictions. Farmer v. State, 268 Ga. App. 831, 603 S.E.2d 16 (2004).

Allegation and proof of prior convictions generally. — Fact of a former sentence must be charged in the indictment if a second conviction would affect the grade of the offense, or require the imposition of a different punishment. McWhorter v. State, 118 Ga. 55, 44 S.E. 873 (1903).

If under this section it was provided that the maximum punishment is to be inflicted in the event the accused has been convicted of a prior felony, such fact becomes a part of the offense charged, and it was necessary to allege and prove the prior conviction. Berry v. State, 51 Ga. App. 442, 180 S.E. 635 (1935).

If prior felony convictions are intended to be proved for the purpose of obtaining a maximum sentence, the previous convictions must be alleged in the indictment as well as proved on the trial of the case. Kitchens v. State, 113 Ga. App. 663, 149 S.E.2d 373 (1966).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the trial court did not admit into the record two certified copies of the defendant's prior convictions tendered by the state or a third copy that the prosecution had been waiting to receive from the clerk's office, and defense counsel did not waive the requirement that the convictions be proven by the state. Tanksley v. State, 323 Ga. App. 299, 743 S.E.2d 585 (2013).

It is mandatory that previous convictions be set out in indictment. Croker v. Smith, 225 Ga. 529, 169 S.E.2d 787 (1969).

If the state elects to aver in a possession of firearm by felon count that the defendant has been convicted of more than one prior felony offense, such averment is descriptive of the manner in which the offense was committed and, as such, the state must make an honest attempt to prove the offense "as laid." State v. Freeman, 198 Ga. App. 553, 402 S.E.2d 529 (1991).

Prior convictions not required in indictment. — Since 1974 when Georgia adopted judge sentencing (O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2) it is not required that the prior convictions be included in the indictment but only that the accused receive notice of the state's intention to seek recidivist punishment and of the identity of the prior convictions. Wainwright v. State, 208 Ga. App. 777, 432 S.E.2d 555 (1993).

When the prior convictions do no more than subject the defendant to a greater risk of the maximum sentence (O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a)) or even to a certainty of the maximum sentence (O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)) for the crime as indicted, the prior convictions need not be alleged in the indictment; imposition of the maximum sentence has already been authorized by the grand jury's action, and adequate advance notice to the defendant is assured by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a). Wainwright v. State, 208 Ga. App. 777, 432 S.E.2d 555 (1993).

Records of the defendant's pleas to two prior indictments tendered in aggravation of punishment were properly not treated as one offense since there was no evidence that the indictments were "consolidated for trial" as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d). Robinson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 280, 501 S.E.2d 536 (1998).

Since the state gave the defendant notice that the state intended to seek sentencing under the recidivist statute and, at sentencing, offered into evidence certified copies of previous convictions, imposition of an enhanced sentence was not invalid on grounds that the trial court never admitted the certified copies into evidence. Moore v. State, 250 Ga. App. 75, 550 S.E.2d 667 (2001).

Although the language in the convictions may not track Georgia's armed robbery statute, if a defendant's Missouri conviction's language describes that the defendant was in possession of a deadly weapon when the defendant forcefully and violently took valuables from the victim, such description was sufficient to prove that the defendant was convicted of an offense in Missouri, which would have been the serious violent felony of armed robbery had the offense occurred in Georgia pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2). Anderson v. State, 261 Ga. App. 456, 582 S.E.2d 575 (2003).

Trial court did not err in not including a recidivism count in the indictment as the defendant's prior convictions did not constitute facts increasing the defendant's punishment that were required to be submitted to a jury. Nordahl v. State, 344 Ga. App. 686, 811 S.E.2d 465 (2018), aff'd, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Failure to object to void sentence did not mean sentence not vacated on appeal. — If, at the time of a recidivist sentencing, the period of probation on the defendant's prior first offender sentence had expired with no revocation, the discharge was automatic and the first offender sentence was not a felony "conviction." The recidivist sentence was thus illegal, and since a challenge to the void sentence was not waived by the defendant's failure to object, the sentence was vacated. Headspeth v. State, 266 Ga. App. 414, 597 S.E.2d 503 (2004).

Defendant was properly sentenced under the recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), even though a certified copy of the prior conviction was not formally entered into evidence since the state put the defendant on notice that the state would offer evidence of the defendant's prior conviction, the defendant did not challenge the legal sufficiency of the prior conviction, and the defendant's own witness acknowledged that the defendant had a prior conviction. Thompson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 29, 596 S.E.2d 205 (2004).

Alford plea sufficient. — In a trial in which the state sought to show that the defendant was a recidivist for sentencing purposes, although the documents did not contain direct evidence of the defendant's plea in one of the prior convictions, the documents were sufficient to establish that the defendant entered an Alford plea, which was a guilty plea and was sufficient for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7; for the one conviction at issue, the documents included an indictment which was left blank as to the plea section, a sentencing form which indicated that defendant entered an Alford plea, and an order of restitution. Wynn v. State, 271 Ga. App. 10, 609 S.E.2d 97 (2004).

Because the state: (1) conceded that the trial court erred by using two felony and three misdemeanor shoplifting convictions; (2) failed to meet the state's burden of proving that the defendant was represented by counsel before pleading guilty to those crimes; and (3) failed to show that the defendant was represented by counsel or waived such a right, on three previous misdemeanor shoplifting convictions, the trial court should not have used the convictions to enhance the defendant's shoplifting conviction into a felony; moreover, the defendant overcame presumption of regularity of the trial court's decision as two of the underlying felonies were the same ones which were ruled inadmissible. Simmons v. State, 278 Ga. App. 372, 629 S.E.2d 86 (2006).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the state did not introduce any evidence that the defendant had previously pled guilty or been convicted of any crime. Dobbs v. State, 302 Ga. App. 628, 691 S.E.2d 387 (2010).

Defendant sentenced to life in prison without parole, under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(d) and 17-10-7(c), based on the defendant's prior convictions stemming from guilty pleas, was not entitled to habeas relief on the basis of the defendant's trial counsel's failure to review the transcripts of the defendant's prior plea colloquies because: (1) no per se rule required counsel to review the transcripts; and (2) counsel otherwise adequately investigated the validity of the prior convictions. Barker v. Barrow, 290 Ga. 711, 723 S.E.2d 905, cert. denied, 568 U.S. 987, 133 S. Ct. 540, 184 L. Ed. 2d 354 (2012).

State did not "use up" prior felony conviction to prove element of crime. — Trial court's consideration of a prior felony conviction in imposing punishment under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) was proper because the state did not "use up" evidence of the prior felony conviction to establish a charge of firearm possession by a convicted felon charge; instead, the state only offered evidence of the defendant's previous felony indictment, not the conviction. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. App. 768, 670 S.E.2d 226 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0482, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 252 (Ga. 2009).

First offender conviction had to be violated and adjudication of guilt entered. — Because it was unclear whether one of the defendant's convictions, which was a first offender conviction pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq., was successfully completed, in which case there was no "conviction" as that term was defined under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-3(4) because there was no adjudication of guilt, or alternatively, whether the first offender sentence was violated and the trial court thereafter entered an adjudication of guilt and a sentence thereon, in which case the conviction could be counted as one of the three felonies for purposes of recidivist sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), a remand of the sentencing for further determination was required. Swan v. State, 276 Ga. App. 827, 625 S.E.2d 97 (2005).

Proof of validity of prior guilty plea. — In a prosecution for rape and aggravated sodomy, proof that the defendant's plea of guilty to possession of cocaine with intent to distribute required sentencing of the defendant as a recidivist. Miller v. State, 214 Ga. App. 393, 448 S.E.2d 20 (1994).

Trial court did not deprive the defendant of due process of law by admitting in evidence the defendant's prior guilty plea so as to make the defendant eligible for a recidivist sentence; even though a transcript of the plea proceeding was not available, the validity of the plea was shown by extrinsic evidence. Nash v. State, 233 Ga. App. 75, 503 S.E.2d 23 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 271 Ga. 281, 519 S.E.2d 893 (1999).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the evidence of the defendant's guilty plea in another state indicated that the defendant was represented by counsel when the defendant entered the plea and the defendant produced no evidence that the plea was not valid. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392 (2004).

Remand for further sentencing proceedings was necessary because the state was not given an opportunity to show that a prior conviction, based on a guilty plea, upon which the state relied during sentencing was constitutional. Grant v. State, 326 Ga. App. 121, 756 S.E.2d 255 (2014).

Certified copy of plea submitted. — Trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's prior guilty plea to armed robbery because the state tendered a certified copy of the guilty plea during the sentencing hearing and, thus, met the state's initial burden by proving the existence of the prior guilty plea and that the defendant was represented by counsel. Freeman v. State, 244 Ga. App. 393, 535 S.E.2d 349 (2000).

Trial court properly used a prior guilty plea to sentence the defendant as a recidivist when the state presented a certified copy of the plea that was signed and initialed by defense counsel along with a plea hearing transcript; even if the plea hearing transcript was uncertified and unauthenticated, the certified copy of the plea was admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-920), and the defendant had not produced evidence of invalidity once the fact of conviction was proved and the state showed that the defendant had been represented by counsel. Moorer v. State, 286 Ga. App. 395, 649 S.E.2d 537 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1910, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 806 (Ga. 2007).

When the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d), the sentence was properly supported by certified copies of each of the four prior convictions. Hester v. State, 274 Ga. App. 276, 617 S.E.2d 232 (2005).

Trial court did not err in considering the defendant's prior guilty plea in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist after the defendant was convicted of felony theft by taking because the state, by tendering the certified copy of the plea, met the state's initial burden of proving that the defendant had entered the guilty plea. Sheppard v. State, 300 Ga. App. 631, 686 S.E.2d 295 (2009).

State may prove as many prior convictions as have occurred. — In alleging former conviction or plea of guilty by the defendant of similar offenses, the state is not limited to the alleging or proving of only one. It may allege and prove as many as have in fact occurred, or any portion thereof. Law v. State, 121 Ga. App. 106, 173 S.E.2d 98, appeal dismissed, 226 Ga. 591, 176 S.E.2d 80 (1970).

Convictions on separate counts of the same indictment count as one prior felony for purposes of recidivist sentencing. Fuller v. State, 233 Ga. App. 211, 504 S.E.2d 62 (1998).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because two of the defendant's prior convictions were pleas that had been consolidated for trial under § 17-10-7(d) and, thus, were deemed to be only one conviction. Stone v. State, 245 Ga. App. 728, 538 S.E.2d 791 (2000).

When the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d), the trial court properly considered two convictions arising from the same crime as one conviction for recidivist sentencing purposes, but the court was not required to consider convictions entered two years apart as one conviction because the probation granted for the earlier offense was revoked on the same day defendant was sentenced on the later offense. Hester v. State, 274 Ga. App. 276, 617 S.E.2d 232 (2005).

Offenses not consolidated for trial. — Trial court correctly concluded that a defendant's three prior offenses were not consolidated for trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d). The three prior crimes involved different victims, and each conviction had a separate case number, indictment, and sentencing order. Barbee v. State, 308 Ga. App. 322, 707 S.E.2d 550 (2011).

Prior felony conviction resulting from guilty verdict. — Since the defendant was shown to have at least one prior felony conviction resulting from a guilty verdict rather than a guilty plea, and since the defendant was found guilty of another separate felony, it was not error to sentence the defendant as a recidivist pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). Cribbs v. State, 204 Ga. App. 109, 418 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 418 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

First offender record properly considered. — Defendant's first offender record was properly considered at the defendant's sentencing hearing and evidence regarding the defendant's underlying behavior in connection with the first offender plea was not required. Williams v. State, 228 Ga. App. 622, 492 S.E.2d 290 (1997).

Admissibility of proof of extraneous crime. — To be admissible, proof of extraneous crime must tend to establish commission of the crime in question. Kitchens v. State, 113 Ga. App. 663, 149 S.E.2d 373 (1966).

Prior conviction may be used to show motive, scheme, or plan. — While the primary object of alleging and proving that the defendant, in a trial for larceny (now theft) of an automobile, had been previously convicted of numerous designated felonies and sentenced to confinement and labor in the penitentiary for each of those offenses, may be to make the defendant receive the maximum sentence under the provisions of this section, yet such proof, especially as to the defendant's previous conviction of the larceny of an automobile, is admissible to show motive, scheme, or plan. Weeks v. State, 66 Ga. App. 553, 18 S.E.2d 503 (1942).

If a particular group of tools has been used in a particular way in previous burglaries related in point of time, the evidence may be admissible to show modus operandi, or it may be shown that the tools in question have in fact been used by the defendant in the commission of the crime for the purpose of showing the intent accompanying the possession. Kitchens v. State, 113 Ga. App. 663, 149 S.E.2d 373 (1966).

Effect of written admission of prior conviction. — Written admission made to the court of the allegation in the indictment of a prior conviction by the defendant does not make it necessary to strike this allegation from the indictment nor make evidence of such fact inadmissible. Berry v. State, 51 Ga. App. 442, 180 S.E. 635 (1935).

If indicted as a recidivist on narcotics offense with prior convictions for nonnarcotics offenses, sentencing under this section was proper. Green v. State, 154 Ga. App. 295, 267 S.E.2d 898 (1980).

If indicted on narcotics charge with a prior narcotics conviction, the specific recidivist statute for narcotics offenders should be applied rather than the general recidivist statute. Green v. State, 154 Ga. App. 295, 267 S.E.2d 898 (1980).

Recidivist sentencing applied in drug possession conviction. — Since there had been three prior felony convictions, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 applied to a sentencing for possession of cocaine. Gray v. State, 254 Ga. App. 487, 562 S.E.2d 712 (2002).

Recidivist sentencing properly applied. — Trial court did not err in imposing recidivist sentencing because the state's evidence served as sufficient proof of the existence of the defendant's prior guilty pleas and that the defendant was represented by counsel when those pleas were taken. Horne v. State, 318 Ga. App. 484, 733 S.E.2d 487 (2012).

Driving motor vehicle after being declared habitual violator. — Defendant could not be sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b) since the defendant's habitual violator convictions did not fall within the definition of "serious violent felony." Ball v. State, 233 Ga. App. 859, 506 S.E.2d 149 (1998).

Identity of names in prior and present indictments is prima facie proof. — Identity of names shown in two previous indictments with the name in the present indictment was sufficient in the instant case to establish prima facie that the defendant was the same man previously charged and sentenced. Timbs v. State, 71 Ga. App. 141, 30 S.E.2d 290 (1944).

Defendant may rebut evidence of previous conviction. — In a prosecution for a second felonious offense, if record evidence of a former conviction is introduced showing one of the same name as that of the defendant on trial, the defendant has the opportunity of showing that the defendant is not the individual named in the previous indictments, and until the defendant proves otherwise, the evidence would be taken as proof that the defendant is the person named in the previous indictments. It is not conclusive, but is prima facie evidence of a former conviction. Timbs v. State, 71 Ga. App. 141, 30 S.E.2d 290 (1944).

If defendant does not rebut such identity, it is sufficiently established. — If the defendant is being prosecuted under a certain name, and the record evidence of a former conviction shows an individual of the same name to have been formerly convicted and sentenced in the same court for two felonies committed in the same county, and the defendant in the defendant's statement to the jury does not deny that the defendant is the person named in the former sentences, and there is no evidence to rebut this prima facie proof by the record evidence of identity, and this record evidence is undisputed, the identity of the defendant as the person named in the former sentences was thus sufficiently established. Timbs v. State, 71 Ga. App. 141, 30 S.E.2d 290 (1944).

Because the defendant did not present any evidence that one of the three prior convictions presented by the state for sentencing purposes was a first-offender sentence, the defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist. Swan v. State, 275 Ga. App. 137, 619 S.E.2d 809 (2005).

Concordance of name. — In the absence of any denial by the defendant and no proof to the contrary, concordance of name is sufficient to show that the defendant and the individual previously convicted are the same person. Mincey v. State, 186 Ga. App. 839, 368 S.E.2d 796 (1988).

Judge may inspect record and act on own knowledge as to identity. — After a second conviction, the judge may inspect the record of the former trial, act on the judge's own knowledge, or hear evidence to satisfy the judge of the identity of the accused. McWhorter v. State, 118 Ga. 55, 44 S.E. 873 (1903).

Conviction with maximum sentence invalid if indictment silent as to prior convictions. — Conviction and sentence of an accused given the maximum punishment is illegal if the indictment contains no reference to the defendant's former convictions and sentences. Harris v. State, 40 Ga. App. 228, 149 S.E. 153 (1929).

Notice of prior offenses used for recidivist purposes. — Although it is not essential that the indictment set forth the prior offenses, if the indictment does not set forth prior offenses it is necessary that the record contain an "affirmative notice to defendant that his prior felony offenses would be used against him for recidivist purposes during sentencing." Ross v. State, 210 Ga. App. 455, 436 S.E.2d 496 (1993).

Defendant was not improperly sentenced under the general recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), as the defendant was served with notice that certified copies of the defendant's three prior felony convictions would be used against the defendant in sentencing as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a); once the convictions were offered, the trial court was authorized to sentence the defendant under § 17-10-7. Walker v. State, 268 Ga. App. 669, 602 S.E.2d 351 (2004).

Trial court did not err in finding that the state provided sufficient notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment because the state first provided the defendant with notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment in January 2014; and the amended notice from June 2016 was provided well before the February 10, 2017 hearing, at which the defendant ultimately pled guilty, and the state provided specific details regarding the defendant's previous three convictions that the state intended to use in aggravation of punishment, including the fact that those offenses were considered felonies in their respective jurisdictions and would similarly be considered felonies in Georgia. Nordahl v. State, 344 Ga. App. 686, 811 S.E.2d 465 (2018), aff'd, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Recidivism indictment which contains a defect in the allegation of prior convictions is not rendered void by such defect, assuming that the defect was not brought to the attention of the jury during the guilt-innocence phase of the trial. Wooten v. State, 160 Ga. App. 747, 288 S.E.2d 94 (1981).

Prior convictions as a separate "count." — Placing a defendant's prior convictions in an indictment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 did not constitute a separate and distinct "count" of the indictment so as to charge the defendant with an offense. Parrish v. State, 160 Ga. App. 601, 287 S.E.2d 603 (1981).

Prior federal conviction for receiving, possessing, and concealing explosives, knowing the explosives have been stolen, was not necessarily conduct which would be considered felonious under the laws of Georgia, and that conviction cannot be considered a prior conviction within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b). Wallace v. State, 175 Ga. App. 685, 333 S.E.2d 874 (1985).

Prior out-of-state convictions. — Although the language of a Florida indictment did not track Georgia's armed robbery statute, the Florida indictment was sufficient to prove that the defendant was convicted of two offenses in Florida which would have each been the serious violent felony of armed robbery had the offenses been committed in Georgia. Smith v. State, 241 Ga. App. 770, 527 S.E.2d 608 (2000).

There was no merit to the defendant's contention that the trial court erred in sentencing the defendant to life in prison without parole under the recidivist provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2) since the defendant was convicted of a serious violent felony, armed robbery, and the state produced evidence that the defendant had previously been convicted in Florida of the offense of armed robbery, which, if committed in Georgia, would also have been a serious violent felony as defined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(a). Cordy v. State, 257 Ga. App. 726, 572 S.E.2d 73 (2002).

Fla. Stat. Ch. 812.13(2)(a) specifically provided that armed robbery was committed while robbing using "force, violence, assault," or intimidation and carrying a firearm or other deadly weapon, so the defendant's conviction of this crime, even though it was noted that the defendant did not carry the firearm involved in the offense, adequately supported the imposition of a life sentence without parole under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2) for defendant's subsequent offense. King v. State, 258 Ga. App. 872, 575 S.E.2d 679 (2002).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because it was shown that the defendant pled guilty in Alabama to theft of an automobile, and, under Georgia law, theft of a motor vehicle was a felony regardless of the value of the vehicle under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-12(a)(5)(A). Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392 (2004).

Defendant's case was remanded for resentencing after a conviction for criminal attempt to manufacture methamphetamine because the trial court considered an uncertified Arkansas docket sheet in aggravation of sentence and a Tennessee conviction that might not qualify as a prior felony in Georgia under the recidivist statute. Elliot v. State, 274 Ga. App. 73, 616 S.E.2d 844 (2005).

Because the state met the state's statutory burden of proving that the defendant had at least three prior out-of-state convictions for offenses that would have constituted felonies under Georgia law, the trial court was entitled to sentence the defendant as a fourth-time felony offender under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). Nelson v. State, 277 Ga. App. 92, 625 S.E.2d 465 (2005).

Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant's two Oklahoma convictions would have constituted felonies under Georgia law for purposes of sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a); the state introduced copies of the applicable Oklahoma statutes and there was no basis for concluding that the trial judge was required to review certified copies of the Oklahoma statutes in order to reach the court's conclusions. Johnson v. State, 281 Ga. App. 7, 635 S.E.2d 278 (2006).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for armed robbery and other crimes, the trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b) based on the existence of an out-of-state robbery with a dangerous weapon conviction because, for sentencing purposes, Georgia defines armed robbery as a serious violent felony and the out-of-state conviction for the crime of robbery with a dangerous weapon was properly treated as armed robbery under Georgia law. Grant v. State, 289 Ga. App. 230, 656 S.E.2d 873 (2008).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's use of prior felonies defendant committed in California to sentence the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), as the elements of Cal. Health & Safety Code §§ 11054(f), 11350(a) (possession of cocaine) were sufficiently similar to those of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-26(1)(D), 16-13-30(c); and the elements of Cal. Penal. Code § 211 (robbery) were sufficiently similar to those of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-40. Williams v. State, 296 Ga. App. 270, 674 S.E.2d 115 (2009).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because the records of an Alabama conviction showed that the defendant pled guilty to the offense of burglary in the third degree and received a sentence of four years imprisonment; the elements of the crime as charged in the Alabama indictment were similar to the elements required to commit the crime under O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1. Wells v. State, 313 Ga. App. 528, 722 S.E.2d 133 (2012).

Trial court properly imposed recidivist punishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 based on the defendant's prior federal conviction for conspiracy to transport stolen goods in interstate commerce, 18 U.S.C. §§ 371 and 2314, because the conviction's elements matched felony conspiracy to commit a crime under Georgia law as defined in O.C.G.A. § 16-4-8. Nordahl v. State, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Offenses heard on same day not "consolidated for trial." — When previous offenses were merely heard on the same day for convenience or efficiency, but were not in fact "consolidated for trial," the offenses constituted separate offenses for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), especially if a separate indictment was charged for each of the offenses and a separate sentence was handed down for each offense. Clarke v. State, 167 Ga. App. 402, 306 S.E.2d 702 (1983).

Prior convictions were not consolidated for trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) although the convictions involved separate indictments and pleas of guilty before the same judge on the same date, concurrent sentences in separate orders, and similar but separate probation orders. Moore v. State, 169 Ga. App. 24, 311 S.E.2d 226 (1983).

Since two convictions were the result of guilty pleas entered on the same date to two separate accusations, since the defendant was sentenced for each conviction, sentences to be served concurrently, and since a separate order of sentence was entered on each accusation, the trial court did not err in concluding that those two prior convictions had not been consolidated for trial within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). Parker v. State, 170 Ga. App. 295, 316 S.E.2d 855 (1984), overruled on other grounds, Darty v. State, 188 Ga. App. 447, 373 S.E.2d 389 (1988).

Concurrent sentence entered on same day not consolidated. — Since the record reflected that the defendant was found guilty of armed robbery and pled guilty to possessing heroin on two separate dates and all three convictions were the result of separate indictments and a separate order of sentence was entered on each indictment, the fact that the sentences were entered on the same day and that the sentences on the possession charges ran concurrent with the armed robbery sentence did not require the conclusion that the three prior convictions had been "consolidated for trial" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Philmore v. State, 263 Ga. 67, 428 S.E.2d 329 (1993); Mims v. State, 225 Ga. App. 331, 484 S.E.2d 37 (1997).

Although the latter two of a defendant's prior felonies were entered on the same day and resulted in the imposition of concurrent terms of imprisonment, as the sentences were based on burglaries that occurred on different dates and resulted in separate indictments against the defendant, the sentences were not deemed consolidated for trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d), such that the offenses counted as separate felony offenses for purposes of recidivist sentencing under § 17-10-7(c). McSears v. State, 292 Ga. App. 804, 665 S.E.2d 890 (2008).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(d) did not require the imposition of concurrent sentences for a defendant's convictions of armed robbery and aggravated assault. O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7 authorized separate sentences for the two crimes charged in the same prosecution because the crimes were not included offenses. Redden v. State, 294 Ga. App. 879, 670 S.E.2d 552 (2008).

State need not prove that defendant's prior convictions are valid in order merely to allege the convictions in the indictment. Aldridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 719, 282 S.E.2d 189 (1981).

State must prove prior convictions at sentencing hearing. Aldridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 719, 282 S.E.2d 189 (1981).

Fact of prior conviction triggers section. — It is the fact of the prior conviction, not where or when the conviction occurred, that triggers O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Aldridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 719, 282 S.E.2d 189 (1981).

Offenses occurring after charged offense. — Sentence of the defendant as a recidivist was not authorized since the offenses on which the state relied occurred after the offenses for which the defendant was being sentenced. Covington v. State, 226 Ga. App. 484, 486 S.E.2d 706 (1997).

Time for defendant to challenge validity of convictions on which recidivism charge is made is when state attempts to prove the convictions at sentencing. Aldridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 719, 282 S.E.2d 189 (1981).

Defendant's failure to furnish transcript of prior proceeding. — If the defendant contended that the evidence submitted in assessing punishment as a recidivist was insufficient in light of the state's use of "uncounselled" convictions from another county, inasmuch as it was incumbent upon the defendant to provide a transcript of the proceeding (Chancery v. State, 256 Ga. 415, 349 S.E.2d 717 (1986)) and none was filed, the Court of Appeals had to assume that the evidence presented at the sentencing hearing supported the sentence imposed by the trial court. Midura v. State, 183 Ga. App. 523, 359 S.E.2d 416 (1987).

Use of prior convictions for guilt innocence phase and sentencing phase. — When the defendant was convicted of aggravated assault, the defendant's prior convictions for aggravated assault and criminal damage to property, which had been used during the guilt-innocence phase of the defendant's trial for impeachment purposes, could be used at sentencing because a repeat offender convicted of aggravated assault could be sentenced as a recidivist, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), and there was no restriction in the aggravated assault statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21, that limited the use of prior convictions to the guilt-innocence phase of trial such that the sentences could not be used again at the sentencing phase of trial. Carswell v. State, 263 Ga. App. 833, 589 S.E.2d 605 (2003).

Trial court did not err in considering the defendant's earlier conviction for driving under the influence at sentencing after the court had already considered the same conviction during the guilt-innocence phase of the defendant's trial; nothing in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 prohibits prior convictions used in the guilt-innocence phase of trial from being used again at sentencing. Morgan v. State, 277 Ga. App. 670, 627 S.E.2d 413 (2006).

Because the defendant was acquitted of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, two prior felony convictions were not used both to support a conviction on that charge and to enhance the defendant's burglary sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c). Raymond v. State, 298 Ga. App. 549, 680 S.E.2d 598 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1791, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. 2010).

Defendant waived the defendant's objection to the trial court's consideration of a particular conviction in aggravation of sentencing under the recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, when the state had already used that conviction in support of the charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon because the defendant failed to object at sentencing to the exhibit containing the conviction. Thomas v. State, 305 Ga. App. 801, 701 S.E.2d 202 (2010).

Failure to object to the state's evidence of prior convictions. — Defendant's claim that the defendant should not have been sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) was rejected on appeal because defense counsel failed to object to the admissibility of the defendant's prior felony convictions at the presentencing hearing. Williams v. State, 301 Ga. App. 731, 688 S.E.2d 650 (2009).

Sentence was not enhanced, nor was defendant sentenced as a recidivist. — With regard to a defendant's conviction for trafficking in cocaine, the trial court did not improperly consider similar transaction evidence of being arrested for trafficking in cocaine in 2004, as well as convictions that were reversed on appeal, in aggravation of the defendant's sentence because, although the state filed a notice of intent to seek recidivist punishment, the state did not offer certified copies of any convictions in evidence at sentencing and the defendant was not sentenced as a recidivist. Celestin v. State, 296 Ga. App. 727, 675 S.E.2d 480 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1200, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 340 (Ga. 2009).

Disclosure of Prior Convictions to Jury

Prior convictions must not be disclosed in first phase. — Under the two-step procedure, one must be indicted as a recidivist in order to impose recidivist punishment, but the recidivism of the accused must not be disclosed during the first phase of the trial, and may only be disclosed after conviction at the second phase of the trial. Making such a disclosure without a waiver during the first phase of the trial is reversible error. Bennett v. State, 132 Ga. App. 397, 208 S.E.2d 181 (1974).

Prior convictions properly admitted for both impeachment and sentencing purposes. — Defendant's claim on appeal that the trial court erred in admitting prior convictions for aggravated assault and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony for the purpose of sentencing as a recidivist, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), as the state "used up" the evidence of said prior convictions by introducing the convictions for impeachment purposes during the guilt-innocence phase of the trial, was rejected, as nothing prevented the use of the defendant's prior convictions for both impeachment and sentencing. Newsome v. State, 289 Ga. App. 590, 657 S.E.2d 540 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1042, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. 2008).

Reading indictment listing prior convictions valid. — Reading of an indictment which lists prior convictions of the accused, pursuant to this section, did not render the accused's conviction void. Willis v. Smith, 434 F.2d 1029 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 932, 91 S. Ct. 2261, 29 L. Ed. 2d 711 (1971).

Absent objection. — Practice of including prior convictions in the indictment and reading the convictions to the jury before the determination of the issue of guilt or innocence in the crime charged, pursuant to this section, was not reversible error if there is no objection to the introduction of such evidence. Almond v. State, 128 Ga. App. 758, 197 S.E.2d 836 (1973).

Prior convictions must be read to sentence under section. — In order to sentence a prisoner according to this section, the prior convictions relied on must be placed in the indictment and read to the jury before the principal issue of guilt or innocence is determined. Landers v. Smith, 226 Ga. 274, 174 S.E.2d 427 (1970).

State's interests outweigh defendant's as to reading prior crimes to jury. — Under this section, the jury learns of prior crimes committed by the defendant, but the conceded possibility of prejudice is believed to be outweighed by the validity of the state's purpose in permitting introduction of the evidence. Winston v. State, 186 Ga. 573, 198 S.E. 667 (1938).

Defendants' interests are protected by limiting instructions, and by the discretion residing with the trial judge to limit or forbid the admission of particularly prejudicial evidence even though admissible under an accepted rule of evidence. Cook v. Smith, 303 F. Supp. 90 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970).

Use of term "recidivist." — Trial court should not have referred to the recidivist count of the indictment when the court administered the oath to the prospective jurors. However, because the court only said the word "recidivist" (the court did not read that count of the indictment), and because the defendant's prior record was introduced in evidence to prove another charge (i.e., possession of a firearm by a convicted felon), the brief reference to the recidivist count was harmless error. Holiday v. State, 258 Ga. 393, 369 S.E.2d 241, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 934, 109 S. Ct. 329, 102 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1988).

Probation or Suspension

Discussions in court as to parole. — Ability or inability to obtain early release does not relate to the defendant's character, the defendant's prior record, or circumstances of the defendant's offense; thus, the policy forbidding argument about such matters does not run afoul of either U.S. Const., amend. 8 or 14, and the trial court did not err in refusing to allow such argument. Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030 (1983).

Trial court has authority to suspend or probate sentence imposed under this section. Cofer v. Hawthorne, 154 Ga. App. 875, 270 S.E.2d 84 (1980).

Former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7) did not compel a maximum sentence in confinement for second offenders, but gave the trial judge discretion to probate or suspend the maximum sentence pursuant to former Code 1933, § 27-2502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1). Davis v. State, 154 Ga. App. 803, 269 S.E.2d 874 (1980).

Although O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 mandates that a second offender must be sentenced to the maximum punishment for the offense of which convicted, there is no limitation on the trial court's authority under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 to grant probation of such a sentence. Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 530, 281 S.E.2d 252 (1981); Brooks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 115, 299 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Court has discretion to probate or suspend. — Although O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) prohibits parole, the statute does not take away the discretion given to the trial court by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a) to probate or suspend part of a sentence. Muhammad v. State, 242 Ga. App. 540, 529 S.E.2d 418 (2000).

Although O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) prohibited parole, the statute did not dispense with the trial court's discretion to probate or suspend part of the defendant's sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a); therefore, the trial court was within the court's discretion to suspend a portion of the defendant's 20-year sentence. Hill v. State, 272 Ga. App. 280, 612 S.E.2d 92 (2005).

Since the defendant had prior felonies in addition to two prior burglary convictions, the defendant was not subject to the exclusive sentencing provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(b) after being convicted of a third felony burglary; the additional felonies subjected the defendant to the general recidivist provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), which gave the sentencing court discretion to suspend a portion of the sentence, and the state's appeal of the defendant's 20 year sentence, which included suspension of 12 years of the sentence after the defendant served 8 years, was rejected. State v. Chambers, 275 Ga. App. 666, 621 S.E.2d 588 (2005).

Since criminal statutes construed against state and in favor of liberty. — Criminal statutes must be strictly construed against the state and liberally in favor of human liberty. If a statute increasing a penalty is capable of two constructions, the statute should be construed so as to favor life and liberty. This being so, former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7) did not compel a maximum sentence in confinement for second offenders but gives the trial judge discretion to probate or suspend the maximum sentence pursuant to former Code 1933, § 27-2502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1). Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

Intent was to permit such suspension or probation. — Language of this section indicated that the General Assembly did not intend that a conviction of a second offense should result in a sentence that could not be suspended or probated. Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

Trial judge has no discretion to probate or suspend any portion of a life sentence. Wallace v. State, 175 Ga. App.

685, 333 S.E.2d 874 (1985).

Construction of subsections (a) and (c) regarding probation. — When the prosecutor informed the court that the defendant should be sentenced under "subsection (c)," the prosecutor was referring to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c); however, the language of that subsection must be read along with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), which requires a trial court to impose the maximum sentence when an individual is convicted of a second "felony punishable by confinement in a penal institution" and further provides, however, that "the trial judge may, in his or her discretion, probate or suspend the maximum sentence prescribed for the offense." Although subsection (c) prohibits parole, the subsection does not dispense with the trial court's discretion to probate or suspend part of a sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). However, the defendant has not shown that the court failed to properly construe the law after the court reviewed the defendants' extensive criminal record and drug involvement and noted that probation would be an ineffective method of punishment and sentenced the defendant to 25 years. Pritchett v. State, 267 Ga. App. 303, 599 S.E.2d 291 (2004).

Discretion properly exercised. — If trial court, knowing that the court was required to impose maximum sentence, nevertheless asked the defendant if the defendant had any evidence to offer in mitigation, the court demonstrated that the court properly exercised the court's discretion to probate or suspend a portion of the recidivist sentence. Cox v. State, 205 Ga. App. 375, 422 S.E.2d 68 (1992).

Fact that the trial court did not probate part of the defendant's sentence was not dispositive since the court never indicated that the court could not consider probation after hearing the defendant's argument and citations at the resentencing hearing. Hunter v. State, 237 Ga. App. 803, 517 S.E.2d 534 (1999).

Discretion exceeded with probation for convicted hijacker. — Defendant convicted under the hijacking statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1, who was originally sentenced to the maximum 20 years under the recidivist provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, with ten of the 20 years to be served on probation, was properly re-sentenced because § 16-5-44.1 provides that the prescribed punishment "shall not be deferred, suspended, or probated." Stephens v. State, 245 Ga. App. 823, 538 S.E.2d 882 (2000).

Discretion exceeded. — Since the defendant was convicted of prior felonies and the offense of rape was also a felony under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1(b), the trial court's imposition of a suspended sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 was void because the trial court was required to give the defendant a life sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). State v. Scott, 265 Ga. App. 387, 593 S.E.2d 923 (2004).

Because the trial court erroneously concluded that the court was required to sentence the defendant, a fifth-time recidivist, to the maximum of 20 years, and that under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) the court had no discretion to probate or suspend any portion of that sentence, resentencing was warranted. Page v. State, 287 Ga. App. 182, 651 S.E.2d 131 (2007).

Defendant's sentence for felony fleeing and attempting to elude was vacated because the trial court incorrectly determined that the recidivist punishment statute did not apply since the defendant had been confined in a prior case to a penal institution as the recidivist punishment statute did not mandate that the defendant's entire sentence be served in confinement. State v. Yohman, 348 Ga. App. 378, 823 S.E.2d 57 (2019).

Remand to consider probating portion of mandatory sentence. — Since the trial court did not exercise the court's discretion to consider probating the appellant's sentence for theft by taking, the sentence for that offense was reversed and remanded so the trial court could determine whether any portion of the appellant's mandatory sentence should be probated. Brooks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 115, 299 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Probated sentence may be used to sentence defendant as recidivist. — Fact that part of the defendant's sentence on a prior felony was probated did not mean that the previous conviction could not be used to sentence the defendant as a recidivist. Johnson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 294, 612 S.E.2d 29 (2005).

Probation or Suspension (Cont'd)

Fourth-offender recidivists. — There is no limitation on the trial court's authority under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 to grant probation of sentence to a fourth offender recidivist who under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is not eligible for parole until the maximum sentence has been served since probation is not parole. Brooks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 115, 299 S.E.2d 167 (1983); State v. Carter, 175 Ga. App. 38, 332 S.E.2d 349 (1985).

Banishing defendant from county. — Even though the defendant was sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), requiring that the defendant serve an entire 30-year sentence without the possibility of parole, imposition of a special condition of probation banishing the defendant from certain counties for 30 years was not unreasonable. Adams v. State, 241 Ga. App. 810, 527 S.E.2d 911 (2000).

Sentencing when offenses merged. — Trial court vacated the conviction and sentence for voluntary manslaughter recognizing correctly that the voluntary manslaughter should have merged into the felony murder. The only sentence that survives is the sentence for murder, and the trial court never pronounced a sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) for that crime, nor does the written sentencing order reflect that the defendant is parole ineligible. Grimes v. State, 293 Ga. 559, 748 S.E.2d 441 (2013).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Constitutional limitations on power to parole. — As of January 1, 1995, there have been placed additional constitutional limitations on the power of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to parole. The limitations include the inability to parole during the mandatory minimum sentence for the seven serious violent felonies set out in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, the inability to parole for sentences of life without parole as set out in O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-7(b)(2) and 17-10-16, and the inability to parole for felony recidivists who are convicted for a fourth or subsequent such offense. Other felons and misdemeanants are required to serve the minimum time prescribed in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-45(b), subject to the authority reserved by statute to the board in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-46 to consider for clemency upon complying with certain notice procedures. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-4.

17-10-8. Payment of fine in felony case; rebate or refund of fine not permitted upon revocation of probation.

(a) In a felony case, when a statutory fine amount is not set by law, upon conviction, the court may impose a fine not to exceed $100,000.00.

(b) In any case when probation is revoked, the defendant shall not be entitled to any rebate or refund of any part of the fine paid.

The fine shall not exceed $100,000.00 or the amount of the maximum fine which may be imposed for conviction of such a felony, whichever is greater. In any case where probation is revoked, the defendant shall not be entitled to any rebate or refund of any part of the fine so paid."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Power of trial judge to sentence generally. — O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1 and 17-10-8, when read together, provide that the judge fixing sentence shall prescribe a determinate sentence for a specific number of years within the limits set by law, may probate a noncapital felony sentence upon such terms as the judge deems proper, and may impose a fine upon the convicted party not to exceed $10,000 (or the fine fixed by law, whichever is greater). State v. Shepherd Constr. Co., 248 Ga. 1, 281 S.E.2d 151, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1055, 102 S. Ct. 601, 70 L. Ed. 2d 591, appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 1074, 102 S. Ct. 626, 70 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1981).

Power to sentence corporation. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-2-22(a), a corporation can be prosecuted for violating the law and a court may sentence a corporation to serve a term for years (even though such sentence be incapable of enforcement) and may suspend that sentence and impose a fine. State v. Shepherd Constr. Co., 248 Ga. 1, 281 S.E.2d 151, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1055, 102 S. Ct. 601, 70 L. Ed. 2d 591, appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 1074, 102 S. Ct. 626, 70 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1981).

Fine distinguished from reparations to injured party. — Since a fine is payable to the state and reparation to the injured party, the two are distinct and cannot be substituted for each other to void a sentence. Biddy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 4, 225 S.E.2d 448 (1976).

Showing of wilfullness or inadequacy of alternative punishments required. — When payment of a fine or restitution is made a condition precedent to probation, a defendant's probation may not be revoked or withheld because of the defendant's failure to pay the fine or restitution without a showing of wilfullness on the defendant's part or inadequacy of alternative punishments. Day v. State, 188 Ga. App. 648, 374 S.E.2d 87 (1988), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Fine not authorized in every case. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-8 does not authorize the imposition of a fine in every case when probation might have been given. Hendrix v. State, 199 Ga. App. 599, 405 S.E.2d 576 (1991).

Trial court may impose a fine when the trial court is authorized to and, in fact, does award "such probation." If the trial court does not award probation, the imposition of a fine in addition to a prison sentence is outside the trial court's discretion and not authorized. Hendrix v. State, 199 Ga. App. 599, 405 S.E.2d 576 (1991).

If the trial court does not award probation, the imposition of a fine in addition to a prison sentence is outside the trial court's discretion and not authorized. Wood v. State, 204 Ga. App. 467, 419 S.E.2d 534 (1992).

Upon conviction of a defendant of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, the trial court was without authority to impose a fine, penalty fee, and D.A.T.E. fee; the penalty for the offense does not include monetary fines. Rawls v. State, 210 Ga. App. 408, 436 S.E.2d 527 (1993).

Unauthorized fines are void. — Since the defendants violated O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b) by possessing with intent to distribute a controlled substance and since O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(h) does not authorize imposition of any fines, the trial court was without authority to impose a $5,000 fine on one defendant and $10,000 fines on each of the other defendants, thus, the fines imposed were void and stricken from the respective sentences. Castillo v. State, 166 Ga. App. 817, 305 S.E.2d 629 (1983).

Though the section under which a defendant is convicted does not authorize a fine, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-8 allows the imposition of a fine as a condition precedent to probation for a felony conviction. Todd v. State, 172 Ga. App. 231, 323 S.E.2d 6 (1984).

Offense for which fine not otherwise authorized. — Although the authorized punishment for aggravated assault does not include a fine, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-8 authorizes a fine in any case in an amount up to $10,000.00 (1990 amendment increased maximum fine to $100,000.00) as a condition of probation. Shelton v. State, 161 Ga. App. 524, 289 S.E.2d 768 (1982).

Imposition of a $100,000 fine as a condition of probation on a sentence for attempting to traffic in cocaine was invalid, illegal, and void for the reason that since the offense of attempted trafficking in cocaine is punishable by imprisonment but contains no provision for a fine, the maximum fine which could be imposed as a condition of probation was $10,000 (1990 amendment increased maximum fine to $100,000.00). Holbert v. State, 177 Ga. App. 461, 340 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Imposition of $5,000 fine proper for drug possession. — When a defendant was convicted of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 and sentenced to the mandatory minimum of ten years' imprisonment, plus 30 years on probation, the trial court did not err in imposing a $5,000 fine as a condition of probation. O.C.G.A. § 17-10-8 permitted a trial court to impose a fine as a condition of probation. Marshall v. State, 291 Ga. App. 284, 661 S.E.2d 662 (2008).

Fine for Medicaid fraud deemed proper. — Defendant was properly fined $50,000 as a condition of defendant's ten years' probation for Medicaid fraud because, although the maximum statutory fine for the crime was $10,000, the trial court could impose a fine up to $100,000 as a probation condition pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-8. Kell v. State, 262 Ga. App. 489, 585 S.E.2d 915 (2003).

Imposition of fine not authorized. — Since the defendant was not placed on probation, imposition of $2,000.00 fine was not authorized and the defendant had to be resentenced. Young v. State, 163 Ga. App. 507, 295 S.E.2d 175 (1982).

Order for defendant to pay fines during incarceration was void. — Defendant's sentence for cocaine possession requiring the defendant to begin making monthly payments on fines, fees, and court costs during incarceration was a punishment that the law did not allow, and therefore was void. Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-8, the defendant could only be ordered to make such payments as a condition of probation. Crane v. State, 302 Ga. App. 422, 691 S.E.2d 559 (2010).

Defendant's ability to pay to be determined. — Trial court was authorized to impose a $5,000 fine as a condition of probation in addition to incarceration; however, the court erred in imposing the fine without first determining the defendant's ability to pay. Eason v. State, 215 Ga. App. 614, 451 S.E.2d 820 (1994), overruled on other grounds, Turner v. State, 259 Ga. App. 902 (2003), recons. denied; overruled on other grounds by State v. In any case in which a defendant receives legal defense services pursuant to Chapter 12 of Title 17 where the defendant has not paid the application fee required by Code Section 15-21A-6 and the court has not waived such fee at the time of sentencing, the court shall impose such fee as a condition of probation.

17-10-9. (For effective date, see note.) Specification by judge imposing sentence of time from which penal sentence to run; effect of appeal.

(a) In the imposition of sentence for violation of the penal laws, it shall be the duty of the judge to specify that the term of service under the sentence shall be computed from the date of sentence if the defendant is confined in jail or otherwise incarcerated and has no appeal or motion for new trial pending.

(b) In cases which are appealed to the Georgia Court of Appeals or the Georgia Supreme Court for reversal of the conviction, the sentence shall be computed from the date the remittitur of the appellate court is made the judgment of the court in which the conviction is had, provided the defendant is not at liberty under bond but is incarcerated or in custody of the sheriff of the county where convicted. If the defendant was at liberty under bond during the pendency of the appeal, once the remittitur of the appellate court is made the judgment of the court in which the conviction is had, the prosecuting attorney shall have the burden of notifying the defendant of the commencement of the sentence within 90 days of such remittitur. When the prosecuting attorney fails to provide such notice, the sentence shall be computed from the date of such remittitur.

(c) If a defendant has been convicted and sentenced but, because of his or her failure or inability to post bond or bail for any reason, he or she has been incarcerated pending the prosecution of an appeal to any court, the time of the original imposition of his or her sentence until the time when the remittitur of the appellate court is made the judgment of the court in which the conviction is had shall be counted as time spent under sentence for all purposes.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Intent. — Before enactment of former Code 1933, § 27-2505 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-9), sentences did not begin to run until the defendant was actually delivered to the penitentiary or chain gang and no credit was received for the time which may have been previously spent by such defendant in jail. It was this evil which that section sought to remedy. Aldredge v. Potts, 187 Ga. 290, 200 S.E. 113 (1938).

Under a rational construction of former Code 1933, § 27-2505 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-9), the statute's sole purpose was to give a defendant credit for time involuntarily spent in jail after sentence. Goble v. Reese, 214 Ga. 697, 107 S.E.2d 175 (1959).

Credit for time served. — Defendant was entitled to credit for time already served, notwithstanding the trial court's statement that no credit would be given since credit is computed and applied by the pre-sentence and post-sentence custodians, and a trial court cannot take the credit away. Johnson v. State, 248 Ga. App. 454, 546 S.E.2d 562 (2001).

Defendant's claim for credit for time served was cognizable only in a mandamus or injunction action because the defendant did not contest the validity of the entry of the defendant's guilty plea and it was well beyond time to appeal any such claim. Beasley v. State, 255 Ga. App. 522, 566 S.E.2d 333 (2002).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant by specifying that the defendant's credit for time served would not begin until December 5, 2008, the date probation for another offense expired because a trial judge has no authority to interfere with the administrative duties of the correctional custodians and the Georgia Department of Corrections to determine and award credit for time served. Watts v. State, 321 Ga. App. 289, 739 S.E.2d 129 (2013).

"Supreme Court" means Supreme Court of Georgia. — Only reasonable construction of the term "Supreme Court" in this section meant the Georgia Supreme Court and not the United States Supreme Court. Huff v. McLarty, 241 Ga. 442, 246 S.E.2d 302 (1978).

Applicability. — Provision in O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-9 and 17-10-11 for crediting prison sentences with the time spent in confinement applies only to persons who would not be confined but for their charges which give rise to the sentence for which credit is sought. Spann v. Whitworth, 262 Ga. 21, 413 S.E.2d 713 (1992); Wilson v. State, 273 Ga. 97, 538 S.E.2d 429 (2000).

Section inapplicable when defendant not incarcerated and no appeal pending. — Since the defendant was not in jail or otherwise incarcerated at the time of the defendant's trial under the indictment, this section, relating to the time from which a sentence shall be computed, was inapplicable. Crosby v. Courson, 181 Ga. 475, 182 S.E. 590 (1935).

This section, which provided that it was the duty of judges to specify that the term of sentence shall be computed from the date of sentence in all cases when the defendant was incarcerated or had an appeal pending, did not apply since the defendant was not incarcerated and had no appeal pending. Norman v. State, 87 Ga. App. 442, 74 S.E.2d 131 (1953).

No credit if defendant at large pending appeal. — Obvious intent of this section was that a sentence shall not begin when the remittitur from the appellate court is made the judgment of the trial court for the defendants who are then still at large. Those defendants at large shall not receive credit for any time before entering upon the defendants' incarceration or other penalty. Huff v. McLarty, 241 Ga. 442, 246 S.E.2d 302 (1978); Serpentfoot v. State, 241 Ga. App. 35, 524 S.E.2d 516 (1999).

Sentence continues to run while being served on probation. Goble v. Reese, 214 Ga. 697, 107 S.E.2d 175 (1959).

Effect of state's delay in enforcing sentence. — Sentence is not voided because of the state's delay in attempting to enforce the sentence. Of course, there is some point at which the state's unreasonable delay will be deemed to prevent later enforcement of the sentence. Huff v. McLarty, 241 Ga. 442, 246 S.E.2d 302 (1978).

Trial court properly enforced the prison sentence imposed against the defendant, even though over six years had passed since the sentence's imposition, upon the state's motion for remand to the custody of the Department of Corrections, as the defendant did not offer to begin serving the sentence when the convictions entered were affirmed on appeal, but acquiesced in the delay of the execution of the sentence by continuing to report to the pretrial services department; hence, the defendant could not claim that the sentence began to run when the defendant should have, but failed to offer to serve the sentence. Cronan v. State, 282 Ga. App. 408, 638 S.E.2d 827 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0462, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 144 (Ga. 2007).

Offer of defendant to initiate sentence. — If the state makes no move to initiate the sentence, the defendant must offer oneself up if the defendant wishes the term to begin to run. An offer which is premature because the sentence may not yet be put into effect is ineffective and may not be deemed continuing. The defendant's offer must come at a time when the sentence may lawfully be put into effect. Huff v. McLarty, 241 Ga. 442, 246 S.E.2d 302 (1978).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

What constitutes being "otherwise incarcerated." — In order to be "otherwise incarcerated" under this section, one must be confined by competent public authority or under due legal process. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-93.

Confinement of a defendant in a state hospital would not come within the legal definition of the term "otherwise incarcerated." 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-93.

This section did not relate to time spent in jail prior to trial. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-127.

While this section provides that a sentence may not commence prior to the date of imposition, the statute did not affect computation of credit for time spent in jail awaiting trial. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-3.

Subsequent sentences run concurrently with unexecuted portion of previous sentence. — When a sentence is imposed to run concurrently with a sentence already being served, the subsequent sentence runs concurrently with the unexecuted portion of the previous sentence. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-3.

Effect of federal proceedings on state sentence. — State sentence begins to run on day and date of sentence and is not tolled by an informal release to the federal marshal and subsequent trial, conviction, and imprisonment in the federal penitentiary. 1945-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 513.

State prison sentence of an individual currently in the custody of federal authorities does not begin to run until the individual is released from the federal authorities and returned to the state penal system. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-191.

State sentence should be computed from the date of rendition unless the sentence specifies that the sentence is to run consecutively to the federal sentence. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-121.

Credit for time in jail while awaiting trial. — While O.C.G.A. § 17-10-9 provides that a sentence may not commence prior to the date of imposition, the statute does not affect computation of credit for time spent in jail awaiting trial. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 87-19.

Credit for time in custody of Department of Human Resources. — When custody of a felon 16 years of age is transferred by court order from the Department of Human Resources to the Department of Offender Rehabilitation, the sentence begins to run when the youth is placed under the custody of the Department of Human Resources. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-78.

In computing parole consideration eligibility, those persons who are sentenced in superior court on felony charges and are committed to the Division for Children and Youth (now Department of Human Resources) until their seventeenth birthday, are entitled to "jail time" or other time in custody in the same manner as adult offenders as required by this section. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-142.

Hospitalization for physical or mental disorder does not interrupt the running of the sentence. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 515.

Time between original sentence and grant of new trial. — Prisoner's sentence is credited with time intervening between the original sentence and granting of motion for new trial. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 287.

No credit for time pending appeal when not incarcerated or under supervision. — If appellant is neither incarcerated nor placed under supervision pending the appeal, the time spent awaiting completion of the appeal is not credited toward service of the sentence. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-30.

Effect of fixed antecedent computation dates. — Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) should disregard fixed antecedent computation dates in those cases in which no appeal has been taken and in which sentence has been imposed on or after July 1, 1970. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-176.

17-10-9.1. Voluntary surrender to county jail or correctional institution; release of defendant.

(a) When a defendant who pleads nolo contendere or guilty or is convicted of an offense against the laws of this state other than:

(1) Treason;

(2) Murder;

(3) Rape;

(4) Aggravated sodomy;

(5) Armed robbery;

(5.1) Home invasion in any degree;

(6) Aircraft hijacking and hijacking a motor vehicle in the first degree;

(7) Aggravated child molestation;

(8) Manufacturing, distributing, delivering, dispensing, administering, selling, or possessing with intent to distribute any controlled substance classified under Code Section 16-13-25 as Schedule I or under Code Section 16-13-26 as Schedule II;

(9) Violating Code Section 16-13-31, relating to trafficking in cocaine or marijuana;

(10) Kidnapping, arson, or burglary in any degree if the person, at the time such person was charged, has previously been convicted of, was on probation or parole with respect to, or was on bail for kidnapping, arson, aggravated assault, burglary in any degree, or one or more of the offenses listed in paragraphs (1) through (9) of this subsection;

(11) Child molestation;

(12) Robbery;

(13) Aggravated assault; or

(14) Voluntary manslaughter

is sentenced to a term of confinement in a county jail or a correctional institution operated by or under the jurisdiction and supervision of the Department of Corrections, the sentencing judge may release the defendant pending the defendant's surrendering to a county jail or to a correctional institution designated by the Department of Corrections as authorized in this Code section. The sentencing court may release the defendant on bond or may release the defendant on the defendant's personal recognizance. This Code section shall not be construed to limit the court's authority in prescribing conditions of probation.

(b) Any defendant who has been released on bond and who has complied with all of the conditions of the bond and any other defendant who, in the opinion of the sentencing judge, is deemed worthy of the procedure to surrender voluntarily, may be eligible to participate in the program. However, the sentencing judge shall be the sole and final arbiter concerning eligibility and the defendant shall have no right to appeal such decision.

(c) When a defendant submits a request to the sentencing judge to be allowed to surrender voluntarily to a county jail or a correctional facility, the judge may consider the request and if, taking into the consideration the crime for which the defendant is being sentenced, the history of the defendant, and any other factors which may aid in the decision, the judge determines that the granting of the request will pose no threat to society, the defendant shall be remanded to the supervision of a community supervision officer, county or Department of Juvenile Justice juvenile probation officer, or probation officer serving pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42 by the judge and ordered to surrender voluntarily to a county jail designated by the court or to a correctional institution as thereafter designated by the Department of Corrections. The surrender date shall be a date thereafter specified as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section. The sentence of any defendant who is released pursuant to this Code section shall not begin to run until such person surrenders to the facility designated by the court or by the department, provided that such person shall receive credit toward his or her sentence for time spent in confinement awaiting trial as provided in Code Section 17-10-11.

(d) In the event the defendant is ordered to surrender voluntarily to a county jail, the court shall designate the date on which the defendant shall surrender, which shall not be more than 120 days after the date of conviction. When the sentencing judge issues an order requiring a defendant to surrender voluntarily to a correctional institution, the Department of Corrections shall authorize the commitment and designate the correctional institution to which the defendant shall report and the date on which the defendant is to report, which date shall not be more than 120 days after the date of conviction. Upon such designation, the department shall notify the community supervision officer, county or Department of Juvenile Justice juvenile probation officer, or probation officer serving pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, as applicable, who shall notify the defendant accordingly. Subsistence and transportation expenses en route to the correctional institution shall be borne by the defendant.

(e) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to any defendant convicted of a capital felony.

(f) If the defendant fails to surrender voluntarily as directed and required, the defendant may be charged with the offense of bail jumping pursuant to subsection (a) of Code Section 16-10-51 or the offense of escape pursuant to paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16-10-52 and, if convicted of such crimes, shall be punished as provided by law; or may be cited for contempt of court by the sentencing judge and, if convicted of contempt, the defendant shall be punished as provided in Code Section 15-6-8.

(g) The Department of Corrections is authorized and directed to promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this Code section.

Analysis

General Consideration
Separate Terms or Different Courts

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Trial court erred in determining that a defendant's challenge to the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 was waived; however, the Supreme Court of Georgia rejected the defendant's challenges to consecutive sentences imposed under the statute on due process grounds, equal protection grounds, Sixth Amendment grounds, and rule of lenity grounds. Rooney v. State, 287 Ga. 1, 690 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 854, 131 S. Ct. 117, 178 L. Ed. 2d 72 (2010).

Consecutive sentencing authorized when crimes separate and distinct. — This section gave the trial judge authority to impose consecutive sentences if separate and distinct crimes are charged. Hart

v. State, 137 Ga. App. 644, 224 S.E.2d 755 (1976).

It is within the discretion of the trial judge to impose consecutive sentences for separate offenses. Smith v. Ault, 230 Ga. 433, 197 S.E.2d 348 (1973); Hoerner v. State, 246 Ga. 374, 271 S.E.2d 458 (1980); Hambrick v. State, 256 Ga. 148, 344 S.E.2d 639 (1986).

Defendant who was convicted of simple battery and criminal trespass after the defendant attacked the defendant's spouse and the spouse's mother and broke the windshield and at least one other window on the spouse's car was not subjected to cruel and unusual punishment because the trial court imposed a sentence of 12 months' incarceration for each charge, and ordered that the defendant serve the sentences consecutively. Hill v. State, 259 Ga. App. 363, 577 S.E.2d 61 (2003).

Trial court properly imposed separate sentences on the defendant who was convicted of burglary, battery, kidnapping, and aggravated assault because those were separate crimes, and the court did not violate the defendant's rights under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 when the court required the defendant to serve the defendant's sentences consecutively. Woodson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 731, 605 S.E.2d 822 (2004).

After a defendant pled guilty to thirteen different criminal offenses, the trial court explained how the sentences on those various convictions would run, including sentences to three consecutive 20-year terms, and the defendant failed to show that the defendant's sentences were illegal because nothing in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 implicated the rule of lenity. Dowling v. State, 278 Ga. App. 903, 630 S.E.2d 143 (2006).

Trial court's imposition of four separate 20-year sentences upon the defendant for each of the four aggravated-assault convictions and ordering those sentences to be served consecutively was not excessive punishment because the 20-year sentence for each separate aggravated assault fell within the statutory range and the defendant failed to demonstrate that the punishment was so excessive in proportion to the offenses as to shock the conscience. Miller v. State, 351 Ga. App. 757, 833 S.E.2d 142 (2019).

Authority for consecutive or concurrent sentence is in court, not jury. — Authority to make a determination as to whether sentences will run consecutively or concurrently is in the court and not in the jury. Lee v. State, 107 Ga. App. 484, 130 S.E.2d 814 (1963).

Whether other sentences in same or different terms or courts. — It is within the discretion of the judge to impose consecutive sentences for separate offenses, and to authorize the sentence or sentences the judge imposes to be served consecutively to sentences imposed, whether by jury or judge, both within the same term of court or at a separate term of court or in a different court or courts. Heard v. State, 135 Ga. App. 685, 218 S.E.2d 866 (1975).

Section does not limit such discretion as to sentencing for separate crimes. — This section did not constitute a limitation upon the discretion of the trial court, derived from the common law, to set sentences imposed as a result of conviction for a new crime that is separate and distinct from an earlier sentence for a different crime to commence at the termination of any sentence previously imposed. Turner v. State, 151 Ga. App. 631, 260 S.E.2d 756 (1979).

Section does not limit discretion. — This section did not constitute a limitation upon the discretion of the trial court, derived from the common law, to set sentences imposed as a result of convictions for a new group of offenses that are separate and distinct from previous sentences to commence at the termination of all sentences previously imposed. Amerson v. Zant, 243 Ga. 509, 255 S.E.2d 34 (1979); Schamber v. State, 152 Ga. App. 196, 262 S.E.2d 533 (1979).

Use of word "sentences" contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10(a) meant that the defendant should be sentenced separately for each count of a multicount indictment or accusation. To hold otherwise would make subsection (a) of that section meaningless, for if a court could impose one aggregate sentence for several counts of one indictment or accusation, there would be no need to determine, or specify, whether the sentences are to run concurrently or consecutively. Dilas v. State, 159 Ga. App. 39, 282 S.E.2d 690 (1981).

For case when concurrent sentence doctrine inapplicable because of nonmerger of offenses, see Ruffin v. State, 243 Ga. 95, 252 S.E.2d 472, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 995, 100 S. Ct. 530, 62 L. Ed. 2d 425 (1979).

Misdemeanor sentences may be consecutive. — This section referred to felony cases only, but in misdemeanor cases the court may also provide that the terms shall be served consecutively. Murphy v. Lowry, 178 Ga. 138, 172 S.E. 457 (1933).

Judge sets the sentence for misdemeanors, and under subsections (b) and (c) of this section, can properly prescribe sentences to run consecutively and to commence running at the conclusion of the sentences imposed under felony counts, and any sentence the defendant is presently serving. Mealor v. State, 135 Ga. App. 682, 218 S.E.2d 683 (1975).

Authority as to instruction on sentences unchanged by amendments. — Nothing in Ga. L. 1956, p. 161, § 3 or Ga. L. 1964, p. 494, §§ 1 and 2 changes the authority of the court to determine whether the court should instruct the jury concerning concurrent and consecutive sentences, or provide itself that the sentences should run consecutively. Baker v. State, 127 Ga. App. 403, 194 S.E.2d 122 (1972).

Sentences concurrent by operation of law when verdict silent. — This section effected, by operation of law, the running of sentences concurrently when the original sentencing verdicts are silent on the matter. Atkins v. State, 132 Ga. App. 417, 208 S.E.2d 190 (1974).

Presence of defendant for pronouncement whether additional sentence consecutive or concurrent. — Determination of whether a sentence is to be served concurrently with or consecutively to another sentence which the defendant is serving at the time is a part of the second sentence and should be pronounced in the presence of the defendant. Fleming v. State, 113 Ga. App. 113, 147 S.E.2d 480 (1966).

Defendant can be absent when concurrent sentences pronounced. — It is not necessary that the prisoner be present in court or be represented by counsel for the entry of the concurrent sentences. Johnson v. Caldwell, 232 Ga. 200, 205 S.E.2d 857 (1974).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 must yield to O.C.G.A. § 42-8-36, pertaining to reporting duties of probationers, if there is any conflict between the statutes. Downs v. State, 163 Ga. App. 485, 295 S.E.2d 152 (1982).

Ordering consecutive life sentence if jury does not indicate preference. — Trial court did not exceed the limits of the court's discretion in sentencing the defendant to four consecutive life terms for two counts of murder and two counts of armed robbery since the jury rejected the death penalty and recommended mercy without specifying that the life sentences run consecutively. Cargill v. State, 256 Ga. 252, 347 S.E.2d 559 (1986).

Modification of sentence held improper. — Modification of a defendant's oral sentence to make the defendant's sentence run consecutively to any sentence that the defendant was currently serving increased the defendant's punishment and violated the prohibition against double punishment or jeopardy. Pierce v. State, 184 Ga. App. 168, 361 S.E.2d 47 (1987).

Resentence proper. — Trial court did not err in resentencing the defendant to a probated sentence of ten years for a theft by receiving conviction, upon filing a motion under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-12, with such sentence to commence ten years after the beginning of a term of imprisonment for an armed robbery conviction as: (1) the revised sentence did not impermissibly increase the original sentence imposed; (2) the revised probated sentence effected no change in the probation term to be served following the confinement for armed robbery, as both the original and revised sentences provided for five years of probation, consecutive to the defendant's confinement; and (3) the defendant failed to show fulfillment of the maximum legal term for the theft by receiving conviction, or that any of the probation requirements had been satisfied. Fair v.

State, 281 Ga. App. 518, 636 S.E.2d 712 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0125, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. 2007).

Amendment of sentence as denial of double jeopardy rights. — Trial court's amendment of a sentence to clarify that the sentence was to run consecutively with a prior life sentence constituted a denial of the defendant's double jeopardy rights since O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 provides that sentences are presumed to run concurrently with preexisting sentences and the defendant had already begun serving the defendant's latest sentence prior to the court's amendment of the defendant's sentence. Schamber v. Newsome, 696 F. Supp. 1506 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Legality of present confinement is the question under review in a habeas corpus proceeding. Patterson v. Smith, 227 Ga. 170, 179 S.E.2d 247 (1971).

Sentences which may be attacked in habeas corpus. — In a petition for writ of habeas corpus, if the petitioner's present confinement was under prior sentences and not under the sentences attacked, the petitioner could not attack sentences to be served consecutively with the prior sentences. Patterson v. Smith, 227 Ga. 170, 179 S.E.2d 247 (1971).

Appellate court is not empowered to modify sentences which are within statutory limits and lawfully imposed. Thomas v. State, 139 Ga. App. 364, 228 S.E.2d 386 (1976).

Consecutive sentences allowed. — Denial of the defendant's motion attacking the defendant's consecutive sentences for burglary as void was affirmed under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 sentences were to be served "concurrently unless otherwise expressly provided therein." Jones v. State, 271 Ga. App. 830, 610 S.E.2d 570 (2005).

Defendant's sentence of 20 years to serve for armed robbery, 20 years probation for aggravated assault, and 5 years probation for possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, each to run consecutively, did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment because the trial court's sentence fell within the statutory range of punishment, O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-21(b), 16-8-41(b), and 16-11-106(b); under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10(a), it was within the trial court's discretion to order that the defendant's sentences on armed robbery and aggravated assault run consecutively. McKenzie v. State, 302 Ga. App. 538, 691 S.E.2d 352 (2010).

Trial court did not err in imposing maximum and consecutive sentences on the defendant for the burglary and theft by taking convictions as the defendant's prior convictions for three or more felonies qualified the defendant to be sentenced as a recidivist, requiring the defendant to be sentenced to the maximum time allowed; the sentences were within the statutory ranges; and the trial court had the authority to require that the sentences run consecutively. Hamlett v. State, 350 Ga. App. 93, 828 S.E.2d 132 (2019), cert. denied, No. S19C1274, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 860 (Ga. 2019), cert. denied, No. A19C1275, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 890 (Ga. 2019).

Consecutive sentences for weapon possession. — Trial court's imposition of sentences of imprisonment on the defendant's conviction for possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b)(1), which were to run consecutively to all other sentences imposed in the defendant's criminal matter, was within the trial court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10, as the trial court was required to run the sentence consecutively to the underlying felony to that offense, and the trial court had discretion as to other sentences imposed. Owens v. State, 271 Ga. App. 365, 609 S.E.2d 670 (2005).

Separate Terms or Different Courts

Intent of subsection (b). — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10(b) in no way indicates any intention to do more than give a method of construing sentences when one feature of the sentence has been omitted (that is, whether the intent of the sentence is to be consecutive or concurrent), and was inapplicable to a situation arising from escape or other fugitive status. Downs v. State, 163 Ga. App. 485, 295 S.E.2d 152 (1982).

Groups of offenses committed in a single crime spree are within the ambit of this section if convictions for such offenses have been obtained in separate courts or terms of court. Schamber v. State, 152 Ga. App. 196, 262 S.E.2d 533 (1979).

Subsection (b) of this section properly was to be construed as being applicable to groups of offenses committed in a single crime spree if convictions for such offenses have been obtained in separate courts or terms of court. Amerson v. Zant, 243 Ga. 509, 255 S.E.2d 34 (1979).

If convictions obtained on more than one indictment or accusation at separate terms of court or different courts, and sentenced to imprisonment, the judge does not have a duty to make such sentences run concurrently. Cozzolino v. Hubert, 222 Ga. 43, 148 S.E.2d 435 (1966).

If a person is convicted on more than one indictment in different courts and sentenced to imprisonment, it is within the discretion of the trial court to impose consecutive sentences. Daughtrey v. State, 138 Ga. App. 504, 226 S.E.2d 773 (1976).

No intent to give credit for sentences imposed by other sovereignties. — There is only reference to "different courts" and there is no expression of the General Assembly that sentences imposed by courts of different sovereignties are to be credited as service of sentences for offenses against this state. Grimes v. Greer, 223 Ga. 628, 157 S.E.2d 260 (1967).

Section inapplicable to such sentences. — Provisions of this section did not apply to sentences imposed by courts of different sovereignties, such as two states, or a state and the United States. Huddleston v. Ricketts, 233 Ga. 112, 210 S.E.2d 319 (1974).

Service of sentence for a federal offense cannot satisfy a sentence for state offense by operation of this section. Grimes v. Greer, 223 Ga. 628, 157 S.E.2d 260 (1967).

State sentence consecutive to federal sentence absent expression to contrary. — State's oral sentence, in the absence of an expression that the sentence was to be served concurrently with the federal sentence, runs consecutively to the federal sentence under this section. Taylor v. Green, 229 Ga. 164, 190 S.E.2d 66 (1972).

Sentences imposed by different courts are not automatically assumed concurrent if the orders are silent, and the defendant is not released at the termination of the longer sentence. Hightower v. Hollis, 121 Ga. 159, 48 S.E. 969 (1904).

Incarceration by political subdivision after escape from state. — Prisoner who escapes from state incarceration and is then arrested and incarcerated by a political subdivision of the state is still incarcerated under the power of the same sovereign, and there is no valid reason to toll the running of that prisoner's existing sentence until the prisoner is actually in the physical custody of a Department of Corrections facility. Spann v. Whitworth, 262 Ga. 21, 413 S.E.2d 713 (1992).

Interpretation of declaration that sentence is to be "computed from this date." — A new sentence declaring that it is to be "computed from this date," received by a prisoner having one or more outstanding sentences, is consecutive. Statements such as "to be computed from this date," standing alone, are not sufficient to overcome the presumptive rule of construction created by this section. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 260.

Effect of imposing additional consecutive sentence when part of current sentence remains. — Since ambiguity in a criminal sentence is to be construed in favor of a defendant, if a defendant is sentenced to six one-year sentences to be served consecutively, and while serving the third of these one-year sentences escapes and is, upon apprehension, given a three-year sentence to be served consecutively to the "sentence now being served," the third one-year sentence is the one "then" being served and is the proper sentence to use for computational purposes; therefore, the three-year escape sentence will be served concurrently with the last three one-year sentences. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-42.

Applicability. — This section, which provided that unless otherwise stated, sentences from different courts or different terms of court shall be served concurrently, applies only to sentences from courts of this state. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-148.

Affirmed consecutive sentences not amendable to run concurrently. — Sentences imposed to be served consecutively may not, after affirmance on appeal beyond the expiration of the term, be amended so as to run concurrently. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 115.

Payment of fine as probating sentence. — If a prisoner is sentenced to two consecutive sentences or fines, then the payment of the fine in one sentence will probate that sentence, after which the second sentence would be in force and the prisoner detained unless the fine was paid. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 119.

Transfer of inmate for treatment of mental disease. — State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) can transfer an inmate to a facility of the Department of Human Resources for treatment as a mentally diseased inmate. If the inmate is declared sane prior to completion of the inmate's existing sentence, the inmate can be returned to stand trial for outstanding charges. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-72.

Commitment to mental institution does not breach service of sentence. — This section did not enable a subsequent order of committal to a state mental institution to breach the service of an existing sentence. To allow otherwise would deprive the inmate of the opportunity to complete service of the inmate's existing sentence until the inmate was again returned to the custody of the State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation). 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-72.

During period when both sentence and commitment are operative, terms of subsequent criminal sentence govern. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-20.

17-10-11. (For effective date, see note.) Granting of credit generally; exceptions; use in determining parole eligibility; applicability of Code section.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, upon conviction for an offense, a person shall be given full credit for each day spent in confinement in any penal institution or facility and in any institution or facility for treatment or examination for a disability, as such term is defined in Code Section 37-1-1, infirmity, or other physical condition, including:

(1) Pretrial confinement, for any reason, since the date of arrest for the offense which is the subject of the sentence; and

(2) Posttrial confinement awaiting the remittitur from an appellate court or transfer to the Department of Corrections or other court ordered institution or facility.

(b) The court may exclude credit for time served in pretrial confinement when its sentence:

(1) Requires the person to complete a program at a probation detention center as set forth in Code Section 42-8-35.4;

(2) Allows the person to participate in a work release program as set forth in Code Section 42-1-4; or

(3) Is for a misdemeanor offense for time spent in confinement in a jurisdiction other than the one in which the arrest for such offense occurred.

(c) The credit or credits set forth in subsection (a) of this Code section shall be applied toward the convicted person's sentence and shall be considered by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles in determining the eligibility of such person for parole.

(d) This Code section shall apply to sentences for all crimes, whether classified as violations, misdemeanors, or felonies, and to all courts having criminal jurisdiction located within the boundaries of this state.

The 2020 amendment, effective January 1, 2021, substituted the present provisions of subsections (a) and (c) for the former provisions of subsection (a), which read: "Each person convicted of a crime in this state shall be given full credit for each day spent in confinement awaiting trial and for each day spent in confinement, in connection with and resulting from a court order entered in the criminal proceedings for which sentence was imposed, in any institution or facility for treatment or examination of a physical or mental disability. The credit or credits shall be applied toward the convicted person's sentence and shall also be considered by parole authorities in determining the eligibility of the person for parole."; added subsection (b); redesignated former subsection (b) as present subsection (d); and substituted "shall apply" for "applies" near the beginning of subsection (d).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This section contemplates credit only for time served during proceedings for which sentence received. Tucker v. Stynchcombe, 239 Ga. 356, 236 S.E.2d 623 (1977).

Applicability. — Provision in O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-9 and 17-10-11 for crediting prison sentences with the time spent in confinement applies only to persons who would not be confined but for their charges which give rise to the sentence for which credit is sought. Spann v. Whitworth, 262 Ga. 21, 413 S.E.2d 713 (1992); Wilson v. State, 273 Ga. 97, 538 S.E.2d 429 (2000).

Trial court cannot modify a sentence to reflect credit for time served prior to sentence being imposed; the responsibility for computing credit for time served awaiting trial not being upon the trial court. Casario v. State, 169 Ga. App. 515, 313 S.E.2d 772 (1984); Warren v. State, 246 Ga. App. 894, 543 S.E.2d 38 (2000).

Procedure for claiming credit. — Defendant's claim was cognizable only in a mandamus or injunction action because the defendant did not contest the validity of the entry of the guilty plea, and it was well beyond time to appeal any such claim. Beasley v. State, 255 Ga. App. 522, 566 S.E.2d 333 (2002).

Defendant's claim that the trial court did not give the defendant credit for time the defendant spent in pretrial confinement when the court sentenced the defendant after the defendant pled guilty to charges of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute was cognizable only in a mandamus or injunction action against the Commissioner of the Georgia Department of Corrections, or in a petition for habeas corpus, not in a motion to modify the defendant's sentence, and the trial court properly dismissed the defendant's motion to modify the defendant's sentence. Maldonado v. State, 260 Ga. App. 580, 580 S.E.2d 330 (2003).

Trial court's order denying the defendant's motion for credit for time served in pretrial confinement was vacated as the defendant's remedy lied solely with the Department of Corrections and not the courts, and then if the defendant remained aggrieved thereafter, a mandamus or injunction action could be pursued. Edwards v. State, 283 Ga. App. 305, 641 S.E.2d 193 (2007).

Because the defendant raised the issues of sentencing credit in a motion for jail-credit time and not in a petition for mandamus, the motion was a nullity and should have been dismissed by the trial court and because it was a nullity there was nothing left to appeal. Warbington v. State, 303 Ga. 649, 814 S.E.2d 351 (2018).

Sentencing order need not reflect consideration of confinement pending trial. — A fair reading of the provisions of Ga. L. 1972, p. 742, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-11) and Ga. L. 1972, p. 742, §§ 2 and 3 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-12) indicates that while a trial court should give consideration for time spent in confinement pending trial, these sections do not require the trial court affirmatively to reflect that consideration in the language of the sentence imposed. Turner v. State, 151 Ga. App. 631, 260 S.E.2d 756 (1979).

Trial court did not exceed the court's authority in sentencing the defendant to 48 hours confinement without credit for time served because the amount of credit given for time served is computed by the pre-sentence custodian, is awarded by the post-sentence custodian, and the trial court was, therefore, not involved in this matter. Diaz v. State, 245 Ga. App. 380, 537 S.E.2d 784 (2000).

Board of Offender Rehabilitation has duty to award credit day for day. — Even if the trial court considers the time spent in pretrial confinement, and gives a defendant favorable treatment therefor, Ga. L. 1972, p. 742, §§ 2 and 3 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-12) affirmatively places the duty upon the Board of Offender Rehabilitation to award the defendant day for day credit for time served prior to trial. Turner v. State, 151 Ga. App. 631, 260 S.E.2d 756 (1979).

Amount of credit for time served prior to sentencing is to be computed by the convict's presentence custodian, and the duty to award the credit for time served prior to trial is upon the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections). Casario v. State, 169 Ga. App. 515, 313 S.E.2d 772 (1984); Warren v. State, 246 Ga. App. 894, 543 S.E.2d 38 (2000).

Credit for time spent in drug court program. — Credit towards the defendant's sentence for time spent in the drug court program was not warranted because such credit was not part of the plea agreement, which provided that the defendant would be sentenced to ten years, with four to serve and six on probation if the defendant failed to complete the drug program, and the defendant was neither under a sentence nor in confinement while the defendant participated in the drug program. Fleming v. State, 297 Ga. 606, 774 S.E.2d 594 (2015).

Credit improperly denied. — Judgment, denying the defendant credit for 16 months the defendant served in jail while awaiting trial, was in conflict with the statute and it was ordered the judgment be modified to comply with requirements of law. Addo v. State, 212 Ga. App. 163, 441 S.E.2d 486 (1994).

Trial court erred in refusing to give the defendant credit for the number of days that the defendant served in custody from the date of arrest on a bench warrant for failure to appear at a scheduled court hearing until the date of trial. Allen v. State, 244 Ga. App. 377, 535 S.E.2d 347 (2000).

Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-11(a) provided that the defendant was entitled to credit for the full time served prior to sentencing in connection with the charges, because the Department of Corrections apparently relied upon the trial court's handwritten notation in calculating the defendant's sentencing credit, and as the notation was a gratuitous misdirection that had the effect of improperly taking credit away from the defendant, the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to correct the error. Cochran v. State, 315 Ga. App. 488, 727 S.E.2d 125 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1384, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 82 (Ga. 2013).

Reviewability on appeal. — Defendant's claim on direct appeal that the defendant was not properly credited for time served while awaiting trial was not properly before the appellate court as issues regarding the amount of time credited were within the purview of the Georgia Department of Corrections, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-11(a) and 17-10-12, and relief should have been sought from the department; as the trial court in the court's written sentencing order did not give gratuitous misdirection to the correctional custodians, the issue was not reviewable. Cutter v. State, 275 Ga. App. 888, 622 S.E.2d 96 (2005).

Because the amount of credit the defendant was entitled to receive was to be computed by a pre-sentence custodian, and the duty to award the credit for time served prior to trial fell upon the Department of Corrections, an appeal from an order denying the defendant clarification of an imposed sentence was not properly before the appeals court; moreover, any dissatisfaction with that relief would not be part of the defendant's direct appeal from the original conviction, but would be in a mandamus or injunction action against the Commissioner of the Department of Corrections. Smashey v. State, 282 Ga. App. 293, 638 S.E.2d 431 (2006).

Cited in Noble v. State, 132 Ga. App. 755, 209 S.E.2d 30 (1974); Fong v. State, 149 Ga. App. 456, 254 S.E.2d 460 (1979).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Purpose. — Remedial change made by this section was to allow credit for jail time served before formal implementation of the sentence. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-1.

This section was applicable to sentences imposed on and after July 1, 1970. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-85.

This section was not retroactive and did not apply to jail time prior to sentences arising before July 1, 1970, the date the law became effective. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-1.

Effect of fixed antecedent computation dates. — Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) should disregard fixed antecedent computation dates in those cases in which no appeal has been taken and in which sentence has been imposed on or after July 1, 1970. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-176.

Credit for time in confinement awaiting trial. — Provision for credit for time spent in confinement awaiting trial was intended to apply only to confinement resulting from the charges for which the sentence in question was ultimately imposed. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-3.

Amount of credit for time spent in confinement awaiting trial provided for in this section was intended to be limited to credit for days spent in custody in connection with the offense or acts for which sentence was imposed. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-3.

This section was not intended to allow credit on a sentence for time spent awaiting trial on a separate and unrelated charge, and a prisoner was not entitled to credit on the prisoner's sentence for such time. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-3.

Individual must be given credit for the time spent in jail while not serving any other sentence. In fact, not allowing credit for such time served would be in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-11. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 87-19.

When a sentence is imposed to run concurrently with one already being served, the subsequent sentence runs concurrently with the unexecuted portion of the previous sentence. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-3.

Credit for time served against consecutive sentences. — Defendants serving consecutive sentences, who have earned credit for time served against the consecutive sentences, must be given credit for that time against the consecutive sentences. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 87-19.

Credit for confinement when suspended sentence is revoked. — This section was intended to credit a defendant, whose suspended sentence is revoked, with the time the defendant spent in jail prior to the defendant's original trial and prior to the defendant's revocation. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-1.

When a suspension of jail sentence occurred before July 1, 1970, the effective date of this section, and a revocation occurred afterwards, credit was allowed for prerevocation jail time occurring after the effective date. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-1.

Determination of credit when probation revoked. — After revocation of a probated sentence, in determining the remaining balance of the sentence, the defendant is credited with time on probation. However, to prevent the defendant from receiving double credit for this time, jail time credit should not be awarded toward the period of confinement ordered after revocation of a probated sentence. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-1.

Credit for time awaiting extradition. — Defendant is entitled to receive credit for time spent in confinement awaiting extradition. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-5.

When good-time allowances and deductions may be computed. — With the limited exception of Ga. L. 1969, p. 606, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-6-5), relating to temporary custody of convicted inmates in county facilities, good-time allowances and deductions therefrom can only be computed when inmates are under the jurisdiction and control of the institutions operated by the Department of Offender Rehabilitation. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-61.

When credit can be taken away for misbehavior. — With the limited exception of Ga. L. 1969, p. 606, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-6-5), neither sheriffs nor the Department of Offender Rehabilitation can take jail credit away from inmates who have misbehaved in jails prior to the inmates being sent to correctional institutions. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-61.

Power to devise forms and to require submission of information. — Director of corrections (now commissioner of offender rehabilitation) is authorized to devise and distribute such forms as may be necessary to implement Ga. L. 1972, p. 742, §§ 1—3 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-11 and 17-10-12). The director (now commissioner) may require that data concerning the number of days an inmate spent in jail prior to trial be transmitted to the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) upon forms approved and distributed by the board. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-127.

Credits for defendant sentenced in one county and loaned to second county for prosecution. — Individual who is sentenced in county A and then "loaned" to county B for prosecution is entitled to credit for jail time certified by the individual's county B custodian against both sentences, if concurrent, but if the individual's county B sentence is made consecutive, the individual will not receive credit against the county B sentence for the individual's county B jail time. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

An inmate who is removed by court order to a county jail for prosecution or sentencing is entitled to credit against both the inmate's previous sentence(s) and the inmate's new sentence(s), if concurrent, for certified jail time the inmate serves in connection with the new sentence(s). 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

Credit for time served in escape status. — Inmate is not entitled to credit for time served in a county jail while in escape status, even if the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Corrections) is made aware of the inmate's whereabouts. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

Escapee captured and sentenced in another state. — Inmate who escapes from the custody of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) and, while on escape, is captured and sentenced in another state remains in escape status until returned to Georgia and is not entitled to credit against the inmate's Georgia sentence(s) for time served in the other state. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

If jail time is certified pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-12 in connection with prosecution of an escapee prior to the escapee's return to the custody of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections), the prisoner is entitled to jail time credit only against the new sentence(s). 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

The affidavit of the custodian of the defendant shall be made a part of the official record of the trial.

(b) The clerk of the court shall transmit a copy of the custodian's affidavit to the Department of Corrections when the defendant has been sentenced to the custody of the department. The Department of Corrections shall give the defendant credit for the number of days spent in confinement prior to conviction and sentence, as reflected in the custodian's affidavit, before forwarding the record to the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

(c) Where the defendant has been sentenced to the custody of an official other than the commissioner of corrections, the clerk of the court shall transmit the custodian's affidavit to the proper authorities who shall give the defendant credit for the number of days spent in custody prior to conviction and sentence.

(d) For service under this Code section, the clerk shall receive the fee prescribed in Code Section 15-6-77 from the funds of the county, except where the clerk is on a salary.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

It is trial judge's responsibility to impose legally proper sentence, one which does not exceed the maximum authorized and is certain enough to allow the Board of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) and the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to compute the sentence and all the credits and losses that the law authorizes or mandates. Swain v. State, 157 Ga. App. 868, 278 S.E.2d 743 (1981).

Sentence need not reflect consideration of time in confinement awaiting trial. — Fair reading of the provisions of Ga. L. 1972, p. 742, §§ 1-3 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-11 and 17-10-12) indicates that while a trial court should give consideration for time spent in confinement pending trial, the statutes do not require the trial court affirmatively to reflect that consideration in the language of the sentence imposed. Turner v. State, 151 Ga. App. 631, 260 S.E.2d 756 (1979).

Trial court cannot modify a sentence to reflect credit for time served prior to sentence being imposed, the responsibility for computing credit for time served awaiting trial not being upon the trial court. Casario v. State, 169 Ga. App. 515, 313 S.E.2d 772 (1984); Warren v. State, 246 Ga. App. 894, 543 S.E.2d 38 (2000).

Board of Offender Rehabilitation has duty to award credit day for day. — Even if the trial court considers the time spent in pretrial confinement and gives a defendant favorable treatment therefor, this section affirmatively places the duty upon the Board of Offender Rehabilitation to award the defendant day for day credit for time served prior to trial. Turner v. State, 151 Ga. App. 631, 260 S.E.2d 756 (1979).

Amount of credit is to be computed by the convict's presentence custodian, and the duty to award the credit for time served prior to trial is upon the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections). Casario v. State, 169 Ga. App. 515, 313 S.E.2d 772 (1984); Warren v. State, 246 Ga. App. 894, 543 S.E.2d 38 (2000).

Judge has no authority to interfere with credit issued by administrative entities. — Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant by specifying that the defendant's credit for time served would not begin until December 5, 2008, the date probation for another offense expired because a trial judge has no authority to interfere with the administrative duties of the correctional custodians and the Georgia Department of Corrections to determine and award credit for time served. Watts v. State, 321 Ga. App. 289, 739 S.E.2d 129 (2013).

Court correctly dismissed a petition for mandamus against the State Board of Pardons and Paroles and the board's chairperson, seeking an order requiring them to recompute the petitioner's sentences resulting from the petitioner's convictions as a habitual violator. The duty to award credit for time served lies with the Department of Corrections, not the board. Further, mandamus lies against an official to require the performance of a clear legal duty, but does not reach the office. Harper v. State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 260 Ga. 132, 390 S.E.2d 592 (1990).

Court clerk did not have a duty to compute or give credit for jail time; therefore, a prisoner's petition for mandamus to compel the clerk to correct documents concerning time that the prisoner spent in the county jail did not state a justiciable issue. Grant v. Byrd, 265 Ga. 684, 461 S.E.2d 871 (1995).

Procedure for claiming credits. — Trial court's order denying the defendant's motion for credit for time served in pretrial confinement was vacated as the defendant's remedy lied solely with the Department of Corrections and not the courts, and then if the defendant remained aggrieved thereafter, a mandamus or injunction action could be pursued. Edwards v. State, 283 Ga. App. 305, 641 S.E.2d 193 (2007).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to modify the defendant's sentence; under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-12, it was the duty of the department of corrections, not the trial court, to award credit for time served prior to trial; if the defendant was aggrieved by the department's calculations, the defendant should have sought relief from the department, then pursued mandamus or injunctive relief if the defendant was not satisfied. Anderson v. State, 290 Ga. App. 890, 660 S.E.2d 876 (2008).

Because the defendant raised the issues of sentencing credit in a motion for jail-credit time and not in a petition for mandamus, the motion was a nullity and should have been dismissed by the trial court and because it was a nullity there was nothing left to appeal. Warbington v. State, 303 Ga. 649, 814 S.E.2d 351 (2018).

Reviewability on appeal. — Defendant's claim on direct appeal that the defendant was not properly credited for time served while awaiting trial was not properly before the appellate court as issues regarding the amount of time credited were within the purview of the Georgia Department of Corrections, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-11(a) and 17-10-12, and relief should have been sought from the department; as the trial court in the court's written sentencing order did not give gratuitous misdirection to the correctional custodians, the issue was not reviewable. Cutter v. State, 275 Ga. App. 888, 622 S.E.2d 96 (2005).

Because the amount of credit the defendant was entitled to receive was to be computed by a pre-sentence custodian, and the duty to award the credit for time served prior to trial fell upon the Department of Corrections, an appeal from an order denying the defendant clarification of an imposed sentence was not properly before the appeals court; moreover, any dissatisfaction with that relief would not be part of the defendant's direct appeal from the original conviction, but would be in a mandamus or injunction action against the Commissioner of the Department of Corrections. Smashey v. State, 282 Ga. App. 293, 638 S.E.2d 431 (2006).

This section is applicable to sentences imposed on and after July 1, 1970. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-85.

Power to devise forms and to require data be submitted upon such forms. — Director of corrections (now commissioner of offender rehabilitation) is authorized to devise and distribute such forms as may be necessary to implement Ga. L. 1970, p. 692, §§ 1-4 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-11 and 17-10-12). The director (now commissioner) may require that data concerning the number of days an inmate spent in jail prior to trial be transmitted to the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) upon forms approved and distributed by the board. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-127.

Board of Offender Rehabilitation is not authorized to grant credits without the custodian's affidavit. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-127.

Credits for defendant sentenced in one county and loaned to second county for prosecution. — Individual who is sentenced in county A and then "loaned" to county B for prosecution is entitled to credit for jail time certified by the individual's county B custodian against both sentences, if concurrent, but if the individual's county B sentence is made consecutive, the individual will not receive credit against the county B sentence for the individual's county B jail time. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

Inmate who is removed by court order to a county jail for prosecution or sentencing is entitled to credit against both the inmate's previous sentence(s) and the inmate's new sentence(s), if concurrent, for certified jail time the inmate serves in connection with the new sentence(s). 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

Credit for time served while in escape status. — Inmate is not entitled to credit for time served in a county jail while in escape status, even if the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) is made aware of the inmate's whereabouts. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

Escapee captured and sentenced in another state. — Inmate who escapes from the custody of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) and, while on escape, is captured and sentenced in another state remains in escape status until returned to Georgia and is not entitled to credit against the inmate's Georgia sentence(s) for time served in the other state. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

If jail time is certified pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-12 in connection with prosecution of an escapee prior to the escapee's return to the custody of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections), the prisoner is entitled to jail time credit only against the prisoner's new sentence(s). 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-21.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Former Code 1933, §§ 89-9907 and 89-9908 (see O.C.G.A. § 45-11-4), dealing with malpractice in office, must be construed with former Code 1933, § 27-2509 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-13). When thus construed, former Code 1933, §§ 89-9907 and 89-9908 meant that any of the officers charged with the offense therein named shall, upon a legal conviction in a court having jurisdiction, be punished as for a misdemeanor and removed from office. Cargile v. State, 67 Ga.

App. 610, 21 S.E.2d 326 (1942).

Former Code 1933, §§ 89-9907 and 89-9908 (see O.C.G.A. § 45-11-4) meant that former Code 1933, § 27-2509 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-13) was made sufficiently definite to meet the requirements of a valid penal law when construed with other provisions of the code. Cargile v. State, 67 Ga. App. 610, 21 S.E.2d 326 (1942).

17-10-14. Committal of person under 17 convicted of felony.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this article and except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, in any case where a person under the age of 17 years is convicted of a felony and sentenced as an adult to life imprisonment or to a certain term of imprisonment, such person shall be committed to the Department of Juvenile Justice to serve such sentence in a detention center of such department until such person is 17 years of age at which time such person shall be transferred to the Department of Corrections to serve the remainder of the sentence. This Code section shall apply to any person convicted on or after July 1, 1987, and to any person convicted prior to such date who has not been committed to an institution operated by the Department of Corrections.

(b) If a child is transferred to superior court pursuant to Code Section 15-11-561 and convicted of aggravated assault as defined in Chapter 5 of Title 16, the court may sentence such child to the Department of Corrections. Such child shall be housed in a designated youth confinement unit until such person is 17 years of age, at which time such person may be housed in any other unit designated by the Department of Corrections.

all offenses which occur and juvenile proceedings commenced on and after such date. Any offense occurring before January 1, 2014, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior adjudication for the purpose of imposing a disposition that provides for a different penalty for subsequent adjudications, of whatever class, pursuant to this Act. The enactment of this Act shall not affect any prosecutions for acts occurring before January 1, 2014, and shall not act as an abatement of any such prosecutions."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Custody of juvenile until 21 years. — Ordering that the juvenile remain in the Department of Juvenile Justice custody until the juvenile reaches 21 years of age is neither authorized by O.C.G.A. § 49-4A-9(e) or any other provision of Georgia law. Ga. Dep't of Juvenile Justice v. Eller, 338 Ga. App. 247, 789 S.E.2d 412 (2016).

While O.C.G.A. § 49-4A-9(b) provides the superior court broad discretion to modify the court's orders for the welfare of any child subject to the court's jurisdiction, the plain language of subsection (e) limits that discretion once that child becomes 17 years of age. Ga. Dep't of Juvenile Justice v. Eller, 338 Ga. App. 247, 789 S.E.2d 412 (2016).

Judgment of the trial court directing the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) to hold in its custody a criminal defendant prosecuted as an adult for a crime committed as a juvenile, until the defendant turned 21 years old, was reversed because ordering that the defendant remain in DJJ custody until reaching 21 years of age was neither authorized by O.C.G.A. § 49-4A-9(e) or any other provision of Georgia law. Ga. Dep't of Juvenile Justice v. Eller, 338 Ga. App. 247, 789 S.E.2d 412 (2016).

17-10-15. AIDS transmitting crimes; requiring defendant to submit to HIV test; report of results.

(a) Any term used in this Code section and defined in Code Section 31-22-9.1 shall have the meaning provided for such term in Code Section 31-22-9.1.

(b) A victim or the parent or legal guardian of a minor or incompetent victim of a sexual offense as defined in Code Section 31-22-9.1 or other crime which involves significant exposure as defined by subsection (f) of this Code section may request that the agency responsible for prosecuting the alleged offense request that the person arrested for such offense submit to a test for the human immunodeficiency virus and consent to the release of the test results to the victim. If the person so arrested declines to submit to such a test, the judge of the superior court in which the criminal charge is pending, upon a showing of probable cause that the person arrested for the offense committed the alleged crime and that significant exposure occurred, may order the test to be performed in compliance with the rules adopted by the Department of Public Health. The cost of the test shall be borne by the victim or by the arrested person, in the discretion of the court.

(c) Upon a verdict or plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere to any AIDS transmitting crime, the court in which that verdict is returned or plea entered shall require the defendant in such case to submit to an HIV test within 45 days following the date of such verdict or plea.

(d) Any person required under this Code section to submit to the HIV test who fails or refuses to submit to the test shall be subject to such measures deemed necessary by the court in which the order was entered, verdict was returned, or plea was entered to require involuntary submission to the HIV test, and submission thereto may also be made a condition of suspending or probating any part of that person's sentence for the AIDS transmitting crime.

(e) If a person is required by this Code section to submit to an HIV test and is thereby determined to be infected with HIV, that determination and the name of the person shall be reported to:

(1) The Department of Public Health, which shall disclose the name of the person as necessary to provide counseling to each victim of that person's AIDS transmitting crime if that crime is other than one specified in subparagraph (a)(3)(J) of Code Section 31-22-9.1 or to any parent or guardian of any such victim who is a minor or incompetent person;

(2) The court which ordered the HIV test, which court shall make that report a part of that person's criminal record. That report shall be sealed by the court; and

(3) The officer in charge of any penal institution or other facility in which the person has been confined by order or sentence of the court for purposes of enabling that officer to confine the person separately from those not infected with HIV.

(f) For the purpose of subsection (b) of this Code section, "significant exposure" means contact of the victim's ruptured or broken skin or mucous membranes with the blood or body fluids of the person arrested for such offense, other than tears, saliva, or perspiration, of a magnitude that the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have epidemiologically demonstrated can result in transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus.

(g) The state may not use the fact that a medical procedure or test was performed on a person under this Code section or use the results of the procedure or test in any criminal proceeding arising out of the alleged offense.

The 2020 amendment, effective July

1, 2020, substituted "subsection (f)" for "subsection (g)" in the first sentence of subsection (b); deleted the former second sentence of subsection (c) which read: "The clerk of the court in such case shall mail, within three days following the date of that verdict or plea, a copy of that verdict or plea to the Department of Public Health."; deleted former subsection (d), which read: "The Department of Public Health, within 30 days following receipt of the court's order under subsection (b) of this Code section or within 30 days following receipt of the copy of the verdict or plea under subsection (c) of this Code section, shall arrange for the HIV test for the person required to submit thereto."; redesignated former subsections (e) through (h) as present subsections (d) through (g), respectively; and deleted "arranged pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section" following "to the test" near the beginning of subsection (d).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly finds that Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) and its causative agent, including Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), pose a grave threat to the health, safety, and welfare of the people of this state. In the absence of any effective vaccination or treatment for this disease, it threatens almost certain death to all who contract it. The disease is largely transmitted through sexual contacts and intravenous drug use, not through casual contact, and, while deadly, is therefore preventable. The key component of the fight against AIDS is education. Through public education and counseling our citizens can learn how the disease is transmitted and, thus, how to protect themselves and prevent its spread. The Department of Human Resources is encouraged to continue its efforts to educate all Georgians about the disease, its causative agent, and its means of transmission. In addition, voluntary testing should be encouraged for anyone who feels at risk of infection. While education, counseling, and voluntary testing are vital to the elimination of this epidemic, other measures are needed to protect the health of our citizens, and it is the intention of the General Assembly to enact such measures in the exercise of its police powers in order to deal with AIDS and HIV infection."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Subsection (b) constitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-15(b) does not violate the Fourth Amendment because the government's interest outweighs the individual's and because the results are kept confidential and cannot be used against the individual in a criminal prosecution; nor does § 17-10-15(b) violate the right to privacy under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment or the state or federal equal protection clauses. 17-10-16. Sentence to imprisonment for life without parole authorized; ineligibility for parole or leave programs.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a person who is convicted of an offense committed after May 1, 1993, for which the death penalty may be imposed under the laws of this state may be sentenced to death, imprisonment for life without parole, or life imprisonment as provided in Article 2 of this chapter.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person who is convicted of an offense for which the death penalty may be imposed and who is sentenced to imprisonment for life without parole shall not be eligible for any form of parole during such person's natural life unless the State Board of Pardons and Paroles or a court of this state shall, after notice and public hearing, determine that such person was innocent of the offense for which the sentence of imprisonment for life without parole was imposed. Such person shall not be eligible for any work release program, leave, or any other program administered by the Department of Corrections the effect of which would be to reduce the term of actual imprisonment to which such person was sentenced.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1993, "May 1, 1993," was substituted for "the effective date of this Code section" in subsection (a).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 7, effective May 1, 1993, provides: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, a defendant whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached and the state has filed with the trial court notice of its intention to seek the death penalty or (2) the defendant has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking the death penalty after remand."

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 8, effective May 1, 1993, provides: "Except as provided in Section 6 of this Act [Code Section 17-10-32.1], the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act nor shall this Act be construed as repealing Code Sections 17-10-30, 17-10-31, or 17-10-32 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated."

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 9, effective May 1, 1993, provides: "No person shall be sentenced to life without parole unless such person could have received the death penalty under the laws of this state as such laws have been interpreted by the United States Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Georgia."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16 does not violate the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment because the statute places the discretion to withhold the presentation of a life-without-parole sentence in cases of crimes committed before May 1, 1993, in the hands of the prosecutor. Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16 does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. VII, Para. II, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III because the statute imposes legislative restrictions on the power of the Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant parole. Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181 (1994).

Legislature's power to prescribe punishment for crime includes the power to make ineligibility for parole part of the punishment. Moore v. Ray, 269 Ga. 457, 499 S.E.2d 636 (1998).

Ex post facto application. — Application of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16 to the defendant did not violate ex post facto prohibitions since the defendant expressly elected the application and that section did not establish a greater penalty or alter the situation to the defendant's disadvantage. Brantley v. State, 268 Ga. 151, 486 S.E.2d 169, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 985, 118 S. Ct. 449, 139 L. Ed. 2d 384 (1997).

When a defendant pled guilty to rape and the state did not seek the death penalty, it was error to impose a sentence of life without parole under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1(b); under case law and O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16(a), a life sentence without parole was authorized only in cases when the state first sought the death penalty. Velazquez v. State, 283 Ga. App. 863, 643 S.E.2d 291 (2007), aff'd, 238 Ga. 206, 657 S.E.2d 838 (2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Constitutional limitations on power to parole. — As of January 1, 1995, there have been placed additional constitutional limitations on the power of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to parole. The limitations include the inability to parole during the mandatory minimum sentence for the seven serious violent felonies set out in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, the inability to parole for sentences of life without parole as set out in O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-7(b)(2) and 17-10-16, and the inability to parole for felony recidivists who are convicted for a fourth or subsequent such offense. Other felons and misdemeanants are required to serve the minimum time prescribed in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-45(b), subject to the authority reserved by statute to the board in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-46 to consider for clemency upon complying with certain notice procedures. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-4.

17-10-16.1. Seeking death penalty not prerequisite to life without parole sentence.

A person may be sentenced to life without parole without the prosecutor seeking the death penalty under the laws of this state.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-16.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2011, p. 752, § 17/HB 142.

Editor's notes. — This Code section is reflective of uncodified provisions from Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 10.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

State was permitted to seek a sentence of life without parole since the murder occurred one year after the law was changed to permit such a sentence. Heywood v. State, 292 Ga. 771, 743 S.E.2d 12 (2013).

17-10-17. Sentencing of defendants guilty of crimes involving bias or prejudice; identification of increased sentence.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "designated misdemeanor" means:

(1) Simple assault as defined in Code Section 16-5-20;

(2) Simple battery as defined in Code Section 16-5-23;

(3) Battery as defined in Code Section 16-5-23.1;

(4) Criminal trespass as defined in Code Section 16-7-21; and

(5) Misdemeanor theft by taking as defined in Code Section 16-8-2.

(b) Subject to the notice requirement provided in Code Section 17-10-18 and in enhancement of the penalty imposed, if the trier of fact determines beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally selected any victim or group of victims or any property as the object of the offense because of such victim's or group of victims' actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, gender, mental disability, or physical disability, the judge imposing sentence shall:

(1) If the offense for which the defendant was convicted is a designated misdemeanor, impose a sentence of imprisonment for a period of not less than six nor more than 12 months, and a fine not to exceed $5,000.00; or

(2) If the offense for which the defendant was convicted is a felony, impose a sentence of imprisonment for a period of not less than two years, and a fine not to exceed $5,000.00.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17, as enacted, was unconstitutionally vague. — Absent some qualification on "bias or prejudice," former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 was so vague that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at the statute's meaning and differ as to the statute's application and, thus, former § 17-10-17 was too vague to justify the imposition of enhanced criminal punishment for its violation and additionally, former § 17-10-17 could not be upheld because the statute impermissibly delegated basic policy matters to police officers, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory applications; therefore, the sentence enhancement that the defendants selected the defendants' victims because of racial bias and prejudice violated defendants' due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, 5, 8, and 14 and the corresponding state constitutional provisions; accordingly, the defendants' sentence enhancements were reversed. If the trier of fact finds the defendant guilty of such charge or charges, the trial shall immediately be recommenced to receive evidence as is relevant to determine whether the defendant intentionally selected the victim or the property of the victim as the object of the offense as set forth in the notice given pursuant to Code Section 17-10-18.

17-10-20. Collection of fines and restitution in criminal cases.

(a) In any case in which a fine or restitution is imposed as part of the sentence, such fine and restitution shall constitute a judgment against the defendant. Upon the request of the prosecuting attorney, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the sentencing court to issue a writ of fieri facias thereon and enter it on the general execution docket of the superior court of the county in which such sentence was imposed. Such fieri facias may also be entered on the general execution docket in any county in which the defendant owns real property.

(b) If, in imposing sentence, the court sets a time certain for such fine or restitution to be paid in full, no execution shall issue upon the writ of fieri facias against the property of the defendant until such time as the time set by the court for payment of the fine or restitution shall have expired.

(c) If the fine or restitution is not paid in full, such judgment may be enforced by instituting any procedure for execution upon the writ of fieri facias through levy, foreclosure, garnishment, and all other actions provided for the enforcement of judgments in the State of Georgia and in other states and foreign nations where such judgment is afforded full faith and credit under the Uniform Foreign Money Judgments Act or domestication thereof.

(d) If the fine is not paid in full by the expiration of the time set by the court for payment of the fine, the governing authority of the county or municipality entitled to such fine may institute procedures to enforce such judgment as provided by subsection (c) of this Code section.

(e) If the restitution is not paid in full by the expiration of the time set by the court for payment of the restitution, the prosecuting attorney or the victim entitled to receive such restitution may institute procedures to enforce such judgment as provided by subsection (c) of this Code section.

(f) Notwithstanding the provisions of Code Section 9-12-60, a judgment entered on the general execution docket pursuant to this Code section shall not become dormant during any period when the defendant is incarcerated and for seven years thereafter. Such judgment shall be subject to revival in the same manner as provided for dormant judgments under Code Section 9-12-60.

(g) No fees, costs, or other charges authorized by law in civil cases shall be charged by a clerk of superior court for entering a judgment arising out of a criminal case on the general execution docket or for any action brought by the state to enforce such judgment.

(h) The provisions of this Code section shall be supplemental to any other provision of law applicable to the collection of fines or restitution in criminal cases.

17-10-21. Vacating of sentence for trafficking victim defendants.

(a)(1) A defendant convicted of an offense and sentenced as a direct result of the defendant being the victim of an offense of trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46 may petition the court imposing the sentence to vacate such conviction. Such court shall maintain the jurisdiction, power, and authority to vacate such conviction and sentence.

(2) The defendant shall serve the petition provided for under paragraph (1) of this subsection upon the prosecuting attorney, and such petition:

(A) Shall be submitted on a form promulgated by the Attorney General;

(B) Shall be submitted no earlier than six months following conviction and sentencing for a misdemeanor offense or no earlier than one year following completion of the sentence for a felony offense;

(C) Shall be submitted with a copy of his or her criminal history background check report conducted by the Georgia Crime Information Center that has been completed no more than three business days prior to the filing of the petition; provided, however, that the defendant shall not be charged a fee by the Georgia Crime Information Center for a report produced for purposes of this Code section; and

(D) May include documentation of a defendant's status as a victim of an offense of trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46 at the time of the offense; provided, however, that official documentation shall not be required to obtain relief under this Code section. Such documentation shall create a rebuttable presumption that the defendant was a victim of trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46.

As used in this subparagraph, the term "official documentation" includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(i) A copy of an official record, certification, or eligibility letter from a federal, state, tribal, or local proceeding showing that the defendant was a victim of trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46;

(ii) An affidavit, a letter, or sworn testimony from a member of the clergy, medical professional, member of a victim services organization, or certified, licensed, or registered professional from whom the defendant has sought assistance, counseling, or legal counsel related to his or her victimization; or

(iii) Any other evidence that the court determines is of sufficient credibility or probative value.

(3) No defendant with an outstanding warrant issued by a jurisdiction in this state or any other state or by the United States shall file a petition provided for under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(4) If the prosecuting attorney, to the court, consents in writing to the vacatur of such conviction or fails to respond to such petition within 30 days of service, the court imposing the conviction and sentence shall, without notice or hearing, issue an order vacating the conviction and sentence and shall also issue an order restricting access to criminal history record information for such offense.

(5)(A) If the prosecuting attorney, to the court, objects in writing to the petition, the court shall hold a hearing within 90 days of the filing of the petition. The court shall hear evidence and determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, whether the defendant committed such offense as a direct result of being the victim of an offense of trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46. If the court finds, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the defendant committed such offense as a direct result of being the victim of an offense of trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46, the court may issue an order vacating the conviction and sentence.

(B) If such order to vacate is issued, the court shall also issue an order restricting access to criminal history record information for such offense and no fee shall be charged by the Georgia Crime Information Center or any other entity for restricting access to criminal history record information under this paragraph.

(C) As used in this paragraph, the term "restrict" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 35-3-37.

(b) When the petition provided for under subsection (a) of this Code section is filed, it shall be filed under seal.

(c) For any sentence vacated pursuant to this Code section, any fines and fees paid by the defendant under such sentence shall be returned to the defendant in the amount paid by the defendant.

(d) For purposes of considering such petition, testimony from the defendant or any other party may be taken by the court by remote electronic means.

Complex statistical study that indicated a risk that racial considerations enter into capital sentencing determinations did not prove that a particular defendant's capital sentence was unconstitutional under the Eighth Amendment or the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1987).

O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1, the murder statute, and O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30, which authorizes a death sentence for murder, are not unconstitutional. Speed v. State, 270 Ga. 688, 512 S.E.2d 896 (1999).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30, enumerating the statutory aggravating factors in a death penalty case, was not unconstitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI as applied in the defendant's case; the jury found beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of the statutory aggravating circumstances, there was no requirement that the jury find non-statutory aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt, and the non-statutory aggravating evidence presented by the state was reliable and admissible. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Georgia death penalty statutes were not unconstitutional under the Sixth Amendment as the jury had to find beyond a reasonable doubt the statutory aggravating circumstances necessary to make a defendant eligible for the death penalty, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30; there was no requirement that nonstatutory aggravating evidence be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Nance v. State, 280 Ga. 125, 623 S.E.2d 470 (2005).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(8) bears a rational relationship to the legitimate state purposes of providing deterrence of possible harm to peace officers and, thus, of protecting officers. Accordingly, the statutory aggravating circumstance does not violate equal protection under U.S. Const., amend. XIV or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. Fair v. State, 288 Ga. 244, 702 S.E.2d 420 (2010).

Defendants equal protection challenge under U.S. Const., amend. XIV and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II failed since the defendants were similarly situated to the defendants against whom the state sought the death penalty under one or more of the statutory aggravating circumstances as provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b). The trial court did not err in refusing to apply strict scrutiny analysis in considering the defendants' equal protection challenge on the basis that the punishment prescribed by the criminal statute involves an interference with a fundamental right. The proper inquiry was whether the behavior involved a fundamental right, and the obvious answer was that the behavior did not. Fair v. State, 288 Ga. 244, 702 S.E.2d 420 (2010).

Unconstitutionality of portion of prior law did not invalidate otherwise supportable sentence. — Decision in Arnold v. State, 236 Ga. 534, 224 S.E.2d 386 (1976), holding unconstitutional that portion of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 which allowed for the death penalty if a murder is committed by a person with a substantial history of assaultive criminal convictions (deleted in 1981 codification), did not invalidate the defendant's death sentence since the jury listed the aggravating circumstances in both paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(9) of § 17-10-30 as the basis for imposing the death penalty. Zant v. Stephens, 250 Ga. 97, 297 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Use of same fact to support multiple circumstances. — State may urge the presence of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) and (b)(7) aggravating circumstances even though aggravated battery is a fact supporting both circumstances. Tharpe v. State, 262 Ga. 110, 416 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 506 U.S. 942, 113 S. Ct. 383, 121 L. Ed. 2d 292 (1992).

Death penalty not arbitrarily or discriminatorily administered. — Record did not support the defendant's contention that the Georgia death penalty statute is being administered arbitrarily or discriminatorily. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 418, 314 S.E.2d 210 (1984).

Death penalty procedure not cruel and unusual. — Georgia's death penalty procedure is not unconstitutional as a cruel and unusual mechanism for the award of the death penalty in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8. Mulligan v. State, 245 Ga. 266, 264 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Death penalty is not cruel and inhuman punishment. Moore v. State, 233 Ga. 861, 213 S.E.2d 829 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976), execution of death sentence stayed pending action on rehearing petition, 497 U.S. 1048, 111 S. Ct. 11, 111 L. Ed. 2d 826 (1990).

Death penalty is not subject to constitutional attack under U.S. Const., amends. 8 and 14. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

Section not unconstitutionally vague. — This section was not void for vagueness and for not providing a sufficiently clear and objective standard necessary to control the jury's discretion in imposing the death penalty. Lamb v. State, 241 Ga. 10, 243 S.E.2d 59 (1978).

This section was not unconstitutionally vague. Godfrey v. State, 243 Ga. 302, 253 S.E.2d 710 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S. Ct. 1759, 64 L. Ed. 2d 398 (1980).

This section was not overbroad and vague in violation of the due process clauses of the federal and state constitutions. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

Section does not deny equal protection. — Constitutional challenge of this section as a violation of equal protection was without merit. Moore v. State, 233 Ga. 861, 213 S.E.2d 829 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976), execution of death sentence stayed pending action on rehearing petition, 497 U.S. 1048, 111 S. Ct. 11, 111 L. Ed. 2d 826 (1990).

Double jeopardy prohibitions inapplicable to sentence hearings. — Double jeopardy provisions of the federal and state constitutions (U.S. Const., amend. 5, and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XV [see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII]) do not apply to sentence hearings in capital felony cases under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30. Godfrey v. State, 248 Ga. 616, 284 S.E.2d 422 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 919, 102 S. Ct. 1778, 72 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1982).

Enumerated aggravating circumstances are not offenses for double jeopardy purposes. — Statutory aggravating circumstances set forth in subsection (b) of this section were not offenses within the meaning of the double jeopardy clause, but are charged a jury in order to guide the jury in the jury's determination of whether a defendant should be given a life or a death sentence. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442

Aggravating circumstances need not be alleged in indictment. — Defendant's argument that the statutory aggravating circumstances alleged by the state under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 to support a death sentence had to be included in the indictment failed. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Applicability of § 17-10-2. — Sentencing proceedings in death penalty cases are governed not only by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30, but also by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2, which authorizes the factfinder to hear additional evidence in aggravation, including the record of any prior criminal convictions. Although a defendant's character is not an issue at the guilt phase of the trial, it is an issue at the sentencing phase. Lee v. State, 258 Ga. 82, 365 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 879, 109 S. Ct. 195, 102 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1988).

Ga. L. 1973, p. 159, providing for the death penalty, deals with only one subject. — This section, providing for the imposition of the death penalty, deals with only one subject and is not violative of the Georgia Constitution. McCorquodale v. State, 233 Ga. 369, 211 S.E.2d 577 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3223, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976).

System of dispensation of the death penalty provided by the state does not offend the principles of decisions of the United States Supreme Court. Owens v. State, 233 Ga. 869, 214 S.E.2d 173 (1975).

Capital offenses occurring after March 28, 1973 not indicted under § 17-10-7. — If a capital crime occurs after March 28, 1973, the effective date of former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30), the accused should not be indicted under the general recidivist statute, former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7). Clemmons v. State, 233 Ga. 187, 210 S.E.2d 657 (1974).

Death penalty must conform to section to be affirmed. — Death penalties imposed must conform to the standards set forth in this section to authorize affirmance. Moore v. State, 240 Ga. 807, 243 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 903, 99 S. Ct. 268, 58 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1978).

Mere conjecture does not support death penalty. — Because the state failed to substantiate the state's allegation that the defendant would likely kill a prison guard if sentenced to life in prison, the trial court erred in imposing the death sentence as such rationale amounted to mere conjecture. Henry v. State, 278 Ga. 617, 604 S.E.2d 826 (2004).

Death penalty must conform to section to be constitutional. — The death penalty in a case must conform to the standards set forth if it is to pass the test of constitutionality. Gregg v. State, 233 Ga. 117, 210 S.E.2d 659 (1974), aff'd, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

This section permitted use of some discretion. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

Prosecutor's discretion. — In the defendant's trial for the murder of a bystander during a brawl at a teen party, the prosecutor had discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 to pursue the death penalty, and the trial court did not have authority to evaluate any factual disputes regarding the alleged aggravating circumstances prior to trial. Franklin v. State, 303 Ga. 165, 810 S.E.2d 118 (2018).

Jurors properly seated. — Trial court did not improperly seat six jurors in a death penalty case as: (1) the first juror testified that, despite the juror's acquaintance with the victim's family, the juror could act impartially, listen to the evidence, and decide the case based upon the facts and arguments placed before the juror; (2) a second juror stated that the juror's acquaintance with a family member of the victim would have no bearing on the juror's consideration of the case and that the juror would base the juror's decisions solely on the evidence placed before the juror at trial; and (3) four jurors testified that the jurors could fairly consider all possible punishments for the crime, not just the death penalty. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Juror who merely "leans" one way or the other with regard to imposition of the death penalty before hearing any evidence is not disqualified. This proposition applies with particular force to a juror who "leans" toward a life sentence before hearing any evidence since a death penalty cannot be imposed absent evidence to support a finding of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance. Jarrell v. State, 261 Ga. 880, 413 S.E.2d 710 (1992).

Jury instruction to continue proper. — Trial court properly instructed the jury in the sentencing phase that the jury's "verdict as to penalty (had to) be unanimous," and subsequently directed the jury to continue the jury's deliberations after the jury informed the trial court that the jury could not reach a unanimous verdict; the jury was expected to consider the evidence and to attempt to reach unanimity "one way or the other" on the issue of a sentence and, if possible, to unanimously recommend a sentence. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Jurors properly excused for conscientious objection to death penalty. — Trial court did not err by excusing jurors who expressed a conscientious objection to the death penalty and, to the extent that this contention was not rendered moot because the defendant did not receive the death penalty, the contention lacked merit as a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by excusing jurors in a death penalty case who indicated that the jurors were wholly opposed to the death penalty under any circumstances. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Two issues to consider in imposing death sentence. — This state's system for deciding whether a death sentence is to be given requires the jury to consider two issues in the sentencing phase. First, the jury must consider if the state has proven the existence of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance beyond a reasonable doubt. Second, if one of these circumstances is found, the jury must then consider the mitigating and aggravating circumstances relevant to the defendant and determine whether the death penalty is appropriate in this case. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 177, 62 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979).

Supreme Court should determine whether death penalty generally imposed in similar cases. — Duty of the Supreme Court of Georgia is not to determine that less than a death sentence was never imposed in a case with some similar characteristics but rather to assure that no death sentence is affirmed unless in similar cases throughout the state the death penalty has been imposed generally and not wantonly and freakishly imposed. Moore v. State, 233 Ga. 861, 213 S.E.2d 829 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976), execution of death sentence stayed pending action on rehearing petition, 497 U.S. 1048, 111 S. Ct. 11, 111 L. Ed. 2d 826 (1990).

Plea bargaining and arraignment in capital cases. — Since a plea of guilty was entered in a capital felony case and the state sought the death penalty under former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30), plea bargaining was not involved nor could plea bargaining ever be involved. Therefore, former Code 1933, § 27-1404 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-93) would have no purpose under such a circumstance. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

No automatic right to withdraw guilty plea. — Guilty plea, voluntarily and knowingly entered in a capital felony case other than treason or aircraft hijacking, wherein the state seeks the death penalty, may not be withdrawn as a matter of right. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Death penalty not invalid merely because defendant did not have intent to kill. — Supreme Court decision in Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S. Ct. 3368, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1982), does not require declaring unconstitutional any aggravating circumstance which, on its face, might allow a jury to impose a death sentence on someone who had no intent to kill. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Death penalty not unauthorized in domestic murder cases. — Although lesser sentences than death are frequently imposed in domestic murder cases, it does not follow that the death penalty would not be authorized for the murder of one spouse by another under any circumstances. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

"Depravity" finding not required. — Nothing in death penalty statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30, requires that death penalty be set aside in every case unless the defendant can be characterized as "depraved." Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030 (1983).

Individualized consideration of cases by juries. — Capital punishment is possible only in a small number of explicitly defined subclasses of homicide cases; but as to such cases, the jury is allowed to give the case before the jury individualized consideration of circumstances of the crime and of the defendant. Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030 (1983).

Trial court does not err by refusing to direct verdict of life imprisonment simply because state presents no additional evidence at sentencing phase of the trial. Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573 (1985).

Failure to transcribe closing arguments not error. — Failure to transcribe such things as argument, absent a showing of harm, does not amount to a constitutional violation sufficient to require vacating a death sentence. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Trial court's failure to transcribe the closing arguments at a sentencing hearing does not prevent reviewing courts from examining the imposition of a death sentence with full disclosure of the basis for the sentence when the record containing the transcript of the imposition of sentence does not refer to any undisclosed aspect of the proceeding on which the judge relied in imposing sentence. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir.), supplemented by 722 F.2d 629 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1084, 104 S. Ct. 1456, 79 L. Ed. 2d 773 (1984).

What evidence admissible against defendant generally. — Any lawful evidence which tends to show the motive of the defendant, the defendant's lack of remorse, the defendant's general moral character, and the defendant's predisposition to commit other crimes is admissible in aggravation, subject to the notice provisions of the statute. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Information as to character and circumstances of defendant constitutionally required. — In capital cases, it is constitutionally required that the sentencing authority have information sufficient to enable the authority to consider the character and individual circumstances of a defendant prior to imposition of a death sentence. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Information as to character is indispensable prerequisite to reasoned determination. — Accurate sentencing information is an indispensable prerequisite to a reasoned determination of whether a defendant shall live or die by a jury of people who may never before have made a sentencing decision. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

All aspects of defendant's crimes, defendant's character, and defendant's attitude are admissible, subject to the applicable rules of evidence regarding reliability, to guide the fact-finder in determining an appropriate sentence. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Improper arguments during sentencing does not render sentencing unfair. — Although four of the arguments made by the prosecutor in the sentencing phase of a capital murder trial were improper — an unsupported reference to oral sodomy upon the victim, a discussion of future parole, an attempt to place the burden of future danger solely upon the jury, and a discussion of the prosecutor's policy in regard to requesting the death penalty — the arguments did not render the sentencing fundamentally unfair, given the circumstances of the murder (involving the victim being kidnapped, robbed, and clubbed to death), the reasonable inference of rape, the defendant's previous conviction of a vicious capital crime, and testimony about the defendant's desire to kill again. Tucker v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1496 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1022, 106 S. Ct. 3340, 92 L. Ed. 2d 743 (1986).

Improper for prosecutor to suggest impropriety of mercy. — In the sentencing phase of a capital murder prosecution in which the state's case against the defendant was made almost completely by the codefendant, the prosecutor's extremely improper use of century-old Georgia Supreme Court cases to suggest the impropriety of mercy rendered the sentencing proceeding fundamentally unfair. Drake v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1449 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 3333, 92 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1986).

Prosecutor presumed to have acted constitutionally. — Absent a specific showing that the prosecutor was motivated by race or some other factor in considering whether to seek the death penalty, it is presumed that the prosecutor acted constitutionally. Jenkins v. State, 269 Ga. 282, 498 S.E.2d 502, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 968, 119 S. Ct. 416, 142 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1998).

Inquiry into prosecutor's discretion prohibited unless unconstitutional actions. — Absent a showing that the district attorney acted in an unconstitutional manner with respect to the defendant's case, the defendant may not inquire into the prosecutor's exercise of discretion in seeking the death penalty against the defendant. Rower v. State, 264 Ga. 323, 443 S.E.2d 839 (1994).

Testimony from other district attorneys regarding the manner in which the death penalty is sought in their circuits, or the manner in which plea bargains are reached, would be insufficient to show that the district attorney acted in an unconstitutional manner in seeking the death penalty for defendant. Rower v. State, 264 Ga. 323, 443 S.E.2d 839 (1994).

No ineffective assistance of counsel. — Prisoner's counsel was not ineffective in not developing mitigating circumstances after receiving notice that the state was seeking the death penalty under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(7) because the prisoner had requested that counsel not contact relatives and did not provide counsel with leads for such information. Further, counsel was not required under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.4 and Strickland to request an independent evaluation as to the prisoner's competency in that such a request would not have accomplished counsel's goal of a determination of whether there was a psychological or neurological explanation for the prisoner's behavior on the night of the murder. Newland v. Hall, 527 F.3d 1162 (11th Cir. 2008), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 1183, 129 S. Ct. 1336, 173 L. Ed. 2d 607 (2009).

Death penalty not precluded if evidence circumstantial. — This section was not written so as to preclude the imposition of the death penalty if the evidence was circumstantial. Douthit v. State, 239 Ga. 81, 235 S.E.2d 493 (1977), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Section concerned notice of evidence admitted for first time at presentence hearing, and had absolutely nothing to do with the idea of giving notice of an attempt to prove aggravating circumstances during the guilt phase of trial. Bowden v. Zant, 244 Ga. 260, 260 S.E.2d 465 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1103, 100 S. Ct. 1068, 62 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1980).

Evidence which was admissible in the guilt/innocence phase is admissible in resentencing trial. Hance v. State, 254 Ga. 575, 332 S.E.2d 287, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1038, 106 S. Ct. 606, 88 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1985).

Evidence was sufficient to support death penalty. — See Jones v. State, 249 Ga. 605, 293 S.E.2d 708 (1982); Hittson v. State, 264 Ga. 682, 449 S.E.2d 586 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1129, 115 S. Ct. 2005, 131 L. Ed. 2d 1005 (1995); Gissendaner v. State, 272 Ga. 704, 532 S.E.2d 677 (2000); Jones v. State, 273 Ga. 231, 539 S.E.2d 154 (2000), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 839, 122 S. Ct. 94, 151 L. Ed. 2d 54 (2001), recons. denied, overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Federal habeas court, in assessing the proportionality review of the state supreme court, did not think that it "shocked the conscience" to impose the death sentence for the shotgun slayings of a man's wife and mother-in-law. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

Juries are not required to balance aggravating circumstances against mitigating circumstances. Ford v. State, 257 Ga. 461, 360 S.E.2d 258 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 943, 108 S. Ct. 1124, 99 L. Ed. 2d 284 (1988).

Georgia's post-Furman capital punishment statute does not provide for the balancing of aggravating and mitigating circumstances. Once a single aggravating circumstance is shown, all aggravating and mitigating circumstances are relevant and considered by the jury, but those circumstances are not weighed against each other. Waters v. Thomas, 46 F.3d 1506 (11th Cir. 1995).

State may not inform jury that death sentence may be reviewed and set aside. — It is reversible error for the prosecutor to mention to the jury in the prosecutor's arguments during the death penalty phase that any sentence of death will be reviewed by the trial judge and the Supreme Court, and that the sentence can be set aside. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 177, 62 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979).

Jury should be properly instructed if jury exposed to comments on appellate review. — If the jury is exposed to comments about appellate review of the death penalty, the trial court should explain to the jury that it is the responsibility of each juror to decide whether the defendant will be executed, and that the jury cannot pass that responsibility on to anyone else. The jury should be told to decide on the penalty as if there was no possibility of any review of the sentence. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 177, 62 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979).

Comments suggesting jury can pass on responsibility for death sentence. — Jury is given the heavy burden of making the decision of whether the defendant will live or die. Comments about appellate safeguards on the death penalty suggest to the jury that the jury can pass the responsibility for the death sentence on to the Georgia Supreme Court. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 177, 62 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979).

State may argue rules and regulations as to pardons and paroles. — Prosecuting attorney can lawfully argue the rules and regulations of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and the possibility of a pardon or parole. Bland v. State, 211 Ga. 178, 84 S.E.2d 369 (1954).

Rules and regulations may be read at request of jury. — If the court, at the special request of the jury, read and instructed the jury as to the published rules and regulations of the Board of Pardons and Paroles concerning paroles and pardons without objection from the accused, it was not error to thus give the law concerning paroles and pardons. Bland v. State, 211 Ga. 178, 84 S.E.2d 369 (1954).

Permitting Bible in jury room was constitutional error. — It was constitutional error for the court to permit the Christian Bible to go into the jury room at the request of the jurors apparently for consultation in connection with the jury's deliberations after a murder trial. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Associating with state's witness. — If state's witness was assigned to guard the jury and in the performance of this duty rode with jury to the jury's lodgings, dined with the jury, and associated extensively with the jury at the jury's lodgings, conviction required reversal and remand for retrial. Radford v. State, 263 Ga. 47, 426 S.E.2d 868 (1993).

No presumption of innocence at presentence trial. — Defendant in a capital case stands before the trial court or jury in a presentence trial a convicted felon with no presumption of innocence. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Test of adequacy of jury charge. — In considering the adequacy of a jury charge on the sentencing phase of the trial, the ultimate test is whether a reasonable juror, considering the charge as a whole, would know that the juror should consider all the facts and circumstances of the case as presented during both phases of the trial, which necessarily include any mitigating and aggravating facts, and then, even though the juror might find one or more of the statutory aggravating circumstances to exist, would know that the juror might recommend life imprisonment. Spivey v. State, 241 Ga. 477, 246 S.E.2d 288, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1039, 99 S. Ct. 642, 58 L. Ed. 2d 699 (1978).

Failure to clearly charge jury that jury can recommend life sentence. — Death penalty must be set aside if the trial judge fails to make clear in the charge to the jury that the jury can recommend a life sentence even if the jury finds the existence of a statutory aggravating circumstance. Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833 (1977), but see Stewart v. State, 232 Ga. App. 565, 502 S.E.2d 502 (1998).

If a court fails to make clear to the jury that the jury could recommend a life sentence even if the jury found the existence of a statutory aggravating circumstance, the ultimate test is whether a reasonable juror, considering the charge as a whole, would know that the juror should consider all the facts and circumstances of the case as presented during both phases of the trial, and then, even though the juror might find one or more of the statutory aggravating circumstances to exist, would know that the juror might recommend life imprisonment. Bowen v. State, 241 Ga. 492, 246 S.E.2d 322 (1978).

Capital sentencing instructions which do not clearly guide a jury in the jury's understanding of mitigating circumstances and their purpose, and of the option to recommend a life sentence although aggravating circumstances are found, violate the Eighth Amendment. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 684 F.2d 794 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1098, 103 S. Ct. 1798, 76 L. Ed. 2d 364 (1983).

Initial finding of life sentence is in effect acquittal of whatever is necessary to impose death penalty. Godfrey v. State, 248 Ga. 616, 284 S.E.2d 422 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 919, 102 S. Ct. 1778, 72 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1982).

Death sentence impermissible after life sentence reversed. — Defendants who are sentenced to life imprisonment in capital felony sentencing hearing cannot after reversal be sentenced to death for same offense. Godfrey v. State, 248 Ga. 616, 284 S.E.2d 422 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 919, 102 S. Ct. 1778, 72 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1982).

Sufficiency of form of verdict. — Jury verdict needs only to have a finding of circumstances and ultimate issues, not facts. Nor is there error by the jury in repeating the same wording given to the jury in the written charge. If the wording stated is what the jury found, and there is no contrary indication in the transcript of trial, the jury did not err in the jury's finding. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977), modified on other grounds, 243 Ga. 244, 253 S.E.2d 707 (1979).

Although the jury's verdict did not specify the supporting capital felony, the only one charged was kidnapping with bodily injury and absent objection to the form of the verdict, the jury's finding was sufficiently clear to allow the Supreme Court to rationally review the verdict. Ward v. State, 262 Ga. 293, 417 S.E.2d 130 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1084, 113 S. Ct. 1061, 122 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1993).

Elements of circumstances included in verdict. — Although the verdict's word order did not track the statute exactly, the verdict includes all the essential elements of the circumstances and therefore is a valid finding of a O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) circumstance. Hall v. State, 261 Ga. 778, 415 S.E.2d 158 (1991).

Jury verdict which quoted verbatim the state's notice of intent to seek the death penalty failed to satisfy the standards of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(c) requiring that the sentence of death imposed in the case be reversed. Page v. State, 256 Ga. 191, 345 S.E.2d 600 (1986), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 907, 108 S. Ct. 1082,

99 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1988).

What offenses not capital felonies for appellate jurisdiction purposes. — Convictions of rape, armed robbery, and kidnapping with bodily injury if no death results are not capital felonies for appellate jurisdictional purposes and appeals in such cases go to the Court of Appeals. Cook v. State, 242 Ga. 657, 251 S.E.2d 230 (1978).

Conviction for armed robbery standing alone will not authorize the death penalty, and for appellate jurisdictional purposes, armed robbery is no longer a capital felony. Simmons v. State, 149 Ga. App. 830, 256 S.E.2d 79 (1979).

Moot issue. — If the defendant was not given the death penalty, the trial court's refusal to prohibit the state from seeking the death penalty, and all issues with respect thereto, have become moot. Cash v. State, 258 Ga. 460, 368 S.E.2d 756 (1988).

Rearraignment to seek death penalty. — State's failure to provide death penalty notice prior to the original arraignment does not preclude the state from seeking the death penalty through rearraignment. State v. Terry, 257 Ga. 473, 360 S.E.2d 588 (1987).

Trial court was not authorized to sentence defendant to life in prison without possibility of parole. — Upon certiorari review before the Supreme Court of Georgia, the Court of Appeals of Georgia properly vacated a rape sentence entered by the trial court, holding that the defendant was incorrectly sentenced to a term of life in prison without the possibility of parole, as the state failed to give notice that the state intended to seek the death penalty, and the trial court failed to find that any aggravating circumstance under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 existed, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-32.1 (repealed); thus, the trial court was not authorized to sentence the defendant to life in prison without the possibility of parole. State v. Velazquez, 283 Ga. 206, 657 S.E.2d 838 (2008).

Resentencing. — If the jury imposes the death penalty, and the death penalty is vacated on legal grounds as opposed to grounds that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict, the state may seek the death penalty on resentencing. Zant v. Redd, 249 Ga. 211, 290 S.E.2d 36 (1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983); Patrick v. State, 249 Ga. 708, 293 S.E.2d 329, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1089, 103 S. Ct. 575, 74 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1982).

Opening statement at penalty phase of capital case. — Sentencing phase of a death penalty trial is a "criminal matter" and therefore the defendant is entitled to make an opening statement and the trial court erred in refusing to honor defense counsel's choice as to when to make the statement; however the error was harmless in light of the straightforward mitigation theory. O'Kelley v. State, 284 Ga. 758, 670 S.E.2d 388 (2008).

State, 293 Ga. 370, 744 S.E.2d 738 (2013).

Mitigating Circumstances

Discretion of sentencing authority. — Sentencing authority possesses unbridled discretion to consider any perceived mitigating circumstances. The sentencing authority then can assign what the sentencing authority deems the appropriate weight to particular mitigating circumstances. Moreover, with unbridled consideration of mitigating circumstances the sentencing authority may consider something to be mitigating that others might consider aggravating. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir.), supplemented by 722 F.2d 629 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1084, 104 S. Ct. 1456, 79 L. Ed. 2d 773 (1984).

It is not necessary that the court identify mitigating circumstances offered by the defendant. Davis v. State, 255 Ga. 598, 340 S.E.2d 869, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 245, 93 L. Ed. 2d 170 (1986); Clark v. State, 275 Ga. 220, 563 S.E.2d 865 (2002).

Trial court need not use words "mitigating circumstances" in instruction. — When juries are instructed in sentencing to consider all the facts and circumstances which have appeared at both phases of the trial, this necessarily includes any mitigating circumstances which the defendant has shown, or argued, or both; therefore, the trial court does not err in failing to use the talismanic words, "mitigating circumstances," nor does the court err in failing to charge specifically that certain evidence is to be deemed mitigating. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982).

"Mitigating circumstances" not defined. — General Assembly in this section meant to empower jurors to consider as mitigating anything the jurors find to be mitigating, without limitation or definition. Sprivey v. State, 241 Ga. 477, 246 S.E.2d 288, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1039, 99 S. Ct. 642, 58 L. Ed. 2d 699 (1978).

Mitigating circumstances are referred to in former Code 1933, §§ 27-2503 and 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-30), which are wholly silent on what mitigating circumstances shall be. The conclusion is thus inescapable that the legislature meant to empower the jury to consider as mitigating anything the jury found to be mitigating, without limitation or definition. This is a constitutionally valid procedure. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Mitigating circumstances are not required to be singled out in the charge to the jury, because the law of this state nowhere defines mitigating circumstances. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

In the sentencing trial, it is not required that specific mitigating circumstances be singled out by the court in giving instructions to the jury. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

"Extenuating or mitigating circumstances." — Evidence of "extenuating or mitigating circumstances" allowed by former Code 1933, §§ 27-252503 and 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-30) relates to evidence about the particular defendant and does not include evidence involving the death penalty in general. Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

In all but the rarest cases. — United States Const., amends. 8 and 14 require that the sentencer, in all but the rarest kind of capital case, not be precluded from considering as a mitigating factor any aspect of a defendant's character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense that the defendant proffers as a basis for a sentence less than death. Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Evidence which is inadmissible under the rules of evidence is admissible in some instances if offered as mitigation in the sentencing phase of a capital felony trial. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Constitution requires that evidence which would be inadmissible under an evidentiary rule must not automatically be excluded if tendered in a capital case in mitigation of punishment; rather, the potentially mitigating influence of the testimony must be weighed against the harm resulting from the violation of the evidentiary rule and in close cases the doubt should be resolved in favor of admissibility. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Instruction that jury can consider "anything" in mitigation not error. — Trial court does not err in failing to specifically instruct the jury that as to mitigating circumstances the jury can consider "anything, without limitation or definition," if the court's instruction conveys to the jury that the jury's authority to recommend mercy is unlimited and not circumscribed by the court's definition of mitigating circumstances. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Mitigating circumstances to be presented to a jury in a Georgia death penalty case include circumstances surrounding the commission of the crime as contrasted with the life history of the petitioner preceding the period of time possibly relevant to the commission of the offense in question. Fleming v. Zant, 560 F. Supp. 525 (M.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 748 F.2d 1435 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1058, 106 S. Ct. 1286, 89 L. Ed. 2d 593 (1986).

Georgia law instructs the judge and jury in a capital case to consider any mitigating circumstances in determining whether to impose the death penalty. Ferrell v. Hall, 640 F.3d 1199 (11th Cir. 2011).

Admission of polygraph examination. — Rule that the results of a polygraph examination were not admissible in a Georgia criminal trial absent a stipulation of the parties was not to be inflexibly applied to the sentencing phase of a capital case to preclude a defendant from introducing the favorable results of such an examination as mitigation evidence, but this did not require the admission of favorable polygraph test results in the sentencing phase of every Georgia capital case, as the trial court was to exercise the court's discretion to determine if the results were sufficiently reliable to be admitted. Height v. State, 278 Ga. 592, 604 S.E.2d 796 (2004).

Evidence of penalties imposed in other capital cases properly refused. — Trial court properly refused to allow the defendant in a death penalty case to present to the jury evidence of penalties imposed in other cases. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1983).

Defendant in a capital murder trial must be allowed to proffer any evidence of mitigation submitted as a basis for a sentence less than death. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled on other grounds, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 90 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986).

Relative's request for leniency admissible in mitigation. — Grandfather's testimony that the grandfather does not wish to see a grandson die is admissible in mitigation at the sentencing phase of a death penalty case. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Recommendation of mercy need not be supported by mitigating circumstances. — Jury is not required to find any mitigating circumstance in order to make a recommendation of mercy that is binding on the trial court. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Age (youth) is a mitigating circumstance. Lewis v. State, 246 Ga. 101, 268 S.E.2d 915 (1980).

Constitutionality of giving written instructions but without written instructions as to mitigation. — Portion of this section that required the trial court to give in writing to the jury the statutory instructions does not violate due process and equal protection under U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14, and without a concurrent right to send written instructions to the jury as to mitigating circumstances, the aggravating circumstances are not prejudicially emphasized, because the written material furnished to the jury is purely of a procedural nature and amounts to nothing more than a written formulation of the jury's potential verdicts. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Failure to instruct jury as to mitigating circumstances. — If the trial court fails to charge the jury, in the absence of a request, on the law and existence of mitigating circumstances during the sentencing phase of the trial, the death penalty must be set aside. Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833 (1977), but see Stewart v. State, 232 Ga. App. 565, 502 S.E.2d 502 (1998).

Contradictory and confusing instruction required setting aside sentence. — Under Georgia's death sentencing scheme, the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments require that the trial judge clearly and explicitly instruct the jury about mitigating circumstances and the option to recommend against death. When the instruction, taken as a whole, at best was contradictory and confusing as to the jury's function if the jury determined that an aggravating circumstance was present, as the jury was told that upon finding an aggravating circumstance the jury's verdict would be death, but it is possible to lift isolated phrases from the jury instruction and find in those phrases an indication that a death sentence need not have inexorably flowed from a finding of an aggravated circumstance, on the whole, the instruction falls far short of providing clear and explicit information to the jury that the jury had the option not to recommend a sentence of death and the defendant's death sentence must therefore be set aside. Moore v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 702 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1054, 107 S. Ct. 2192, 95 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1987), aff'd, 972 F.2d 319 (11th Cir. 1992).

State must provide funds for production of mitigating evidence. — Capital defendant's right to present evidence in mitigation places an affirmative duty on the state to provide the funds necessary for production of that evidence. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled on other grounds, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 90 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986).

State must furnish the services of a psychologist or psychiatrist in those capital cases deemed appropriate by the state trial court. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled on other grounds, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 90 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986).

Error to exclude mitigating evidence. — Trial court erred in excluding mitigating evidence consisting of the defendant's love poem written for the defendant's spouse, the childhood photographs, and photographs of the defendant's child and stepchildren. Barnes v. State, 269 Ga. 345, 496 S.E.2d 674 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 969, 119 S. Ct. 419, 142 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1998).

Jury instruction. — Trial court is not required to instruct the jury that there is no requirement that evidence of mitigating circumstances must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd sub nom. Parker v. Head, 244 F.3d 831 (11th Cir. 2001).

Aggravating Circumstances

1. In General

Jury must find statutory aggravating circumstance before recommending sentence of death. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Each aggravating circumstance must satisfy constitutional standard. — Each statutory aggravating circumstance under the death penalty statute must satisfy a constitutional standard derived from the principles of Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972), itself, for a system could have standards so vague that they would fail adequately to channel the sentencing decision patterns of juries with the result that a pattern of arbitrary and capricious sentencing like that found unconstitutional in Furman, supra, could occur. To avoid this constitutional flaw, an aggravating circumstance must genuinely narrow the class of persons eligible for the death penalty and must reasonably justify the imposition of a more severe sentence on the defendant compared to others found guilty of murder. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Same case, same victim. — Aggravating circumstances found in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) and (b)(7) may both be found by a jury within the same case involving the same victim and facts. Waldrip v. State, 267 Ga. 739, 482 S.E.2d 299, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 917, 118 S. Ct. 305, 139 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1997).

Overlapping circumstances. — Aggravating circumstances, such as O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(4) and (b)(6), are not invalid because the circumstances might overlap to some extent. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 418, 314 S.E.2d 210 (1984).

Double jeopardy. — Trial court properly convicted and sentenced the defendant on charges of armed robbery and burglary because the fact that those acts served as aggravating circumstances in relation to the defendant's murder charge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b) did not trigger double jeopardy. Jones v. State, 279 Ga. 854, 622 S.E.2d 1 (2005).

Recovering things of monetary value. — Because any rational factfinder, given the evidence as presented, could have found the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(4) aggravating factor present, there was sufficient evidence to allow a jury to find the defendant committed the murder for the purpose of receiving things of monetary value. Baxter v. Thomas, 45 F.3d 1501 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 946, 116 S. Ct. 385, 133 L. Ed. 2d 307 (1995).

1. In General (Cont'd)

Instruction under paragraph (b)(7) did not justify federal habeas corpus relief. — Jury instruction based on O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) and requiring a finding of both depravity of mind and torture to the victim did not justify federal habeas corpus relief. Stanley v. Zant, 697 F.2d 955 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1219, 104 S. Ct. 2667, 81 L. Ed. 2d 372 (1984).

Paragraph (b)(7) finding requires conjunctive delivery. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) jury findings should be returned in the conjunctive to ensure unanimity concerning the necessary elements of this paragraph's circumstances. Hill v. State, 263 Ga. 37, 427 S.E.2d 770, reh'g denied, 510 U.S. 1066, 114 S. Ct. 745, 126 L. Ed. 2d 708(1994); habeas corpus proceeding, remanded, Turpin v. Hill, 269 Ga. 302, 498 S.E.2d 52 (1998), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 950, 114 S. Ct. 396, 126 L. Ed. 2d 344 (1993).

Paragraph (b)(7) factors identified in checklist. — Trial court properly instructed the jury on the relationship of the clauses in paragraph (b)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30. Moreover, the verdict form accurately reflected the language of the statute; and the jury marked the form in such a way as to indicate that the jury found the existence of all of the (b)(7) factors beyond a reasonable doubt. It cannot be said that the verdict form was erroneous simply because the form set forth the (b) (7) factors in the form of a checklist. Sears v. State, 270 Ga. 834, 514 S.E.2d 426 (1999).

Evidence presented at the guilt phase of the trial is properly considered by the jury in establishing the existence of statutory aggravating circumstances. Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573 (1985).

Once statutory aggravating circumstance found, all evidence considered. — Once the jury finds at least one statutory aggravating circumstance beyond a reasonable doubt, the jury may consider all the evidence that has been presented in both phases of the case. Ross v. State, 254 Ga. 22, 326 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1022, 105 S. Ct. 3490, 87 L. Ed. 2d 623 (1985).

Finding of any statutory aggravating circumstance makes the defendant eligible for a sentence of death, and the jury must, considering all the evidence, determine whether to impose such a sentence or to impose a life sentence instead. Moore v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 702 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1054, 107 S. Ct. 2192, 95 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1987), aff'd, 972 F.2d 319 (11th Cir. 1992).

Autopsy photographs admissible. — Autopsy photographs of the victim's body were admissible to show aggravated battery in conjunction with the aggravating circumstances in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) and (b)(7). Waldrip v. State, 267 Ga. 739, 482 S.E.2d 299, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 917, 118 S. Ct. 305, 139 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1997).

State not limited to proof of particular aggravating circumstance relied upon. — In a capital felony presentence trial, the state is not limited to the introduction of evidence to support the particular statutory aggravating circumstances the state is relying upon. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

State is not limited to presenting evidence of statutory aggravating circumstances. Hightower v. State, 259 Ga. 770, 386 S.E.2d 509 (1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 882, 111 S. Ct. 230, 112 L. Ed. 2d 184 (1990).

Failure of one aggravating circumstance does not invalidate others. — When two or more statutory aggravating circumstances are found by the jury, the failure of one circumstance does not so taint the proceedings as to invalidate the other aggravating circumstance found and the sentence of death based thereon. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980); Brooks v. State, 246 Ga. 262, 271 S.E.2d 172 (1980); Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982); Cervi v. State, 248 Ga. 325, 282 S.E.2d 629 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 938, 102 S. Ct. 1995, 72 L. Ed. 2d 457

If several aggravating factors are considered in arriving at a sentencing determination and one of those factors is improper, the improper factor is likely to be harmless error in instances when no mitigating factors are shown. Davis v. Zant, 721 F.2d 1478 (11th Cir. 1983), modified, 752 F.2d 1515 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1143, 105 S. Ct. 2689, 86 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1985).

The O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(10) statutory aggravating circumstance found as to each of two murder victims was not supported by the evidence based on the state's argument that killing a witness to a crime was a means of avoiding, interfering with, or preventing lawful arrest, and that once a defendant obtained the victims' ATM cards and PINs, the defendant murdered the victims because the defendant knew that the defendant would be apprehended if the victims were left alive. However, the invalidation of this statutory aggravating circumstance did not affect the death sentences imposed. Humphreys v. State, 287 Ga. 63, 694 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 599, 178 L. Ed. 2d 438 (2010), overruled in part by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Failure of only aggravating factor. — Only one aggravating factor was presented to and considered by the jury which imposed the death sentence in the defendant's first trial for murder. Since the ground failed, on appeal, for constitutional insufficiency of the evidence, the state could not, should the state choose to try the defendant again, seek to reimpose the death penalty. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

Failure to find aggravating circumstance does not constitute acquittal. — If multiple aggravating circumstances are submitted to the jury, a finding by the jury of less than all of the aggravating circumstances does not constitute an acquittal of the aggravating circumstances not listed by the jury. Spraggins v. State, 255 Ga. 195, 336 S.E.2d 227 (1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1120, 106 S. Ct. 1982, 90 L. Ed. 2d 664 (1986).

Limitation on habeas corpus relief. — As long as one valid statutory aggravating circumstance exists in a death penalty case, a federal habeas court should not grant relief unless the evidence or factor in question was constitutionally inappropriate. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1984).

Proper instructions. — Giving of instructions on murder committed during an armed robbery, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), and murder committed for pecuniary gain, § 17-10-30(b)(4), was proper because the aggravating circumstances referred to were separate and distinct. Simpkins v. State, 268 Ga. 219, 486 S.E.2d 833 (1997); Jenkins v. State, 269 Ga. 282, 498 S.E.2d 502, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 968, 119 S. Ct. 416, 142 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1998).

Trial court properly discharged the court's duty at sentencing of providing the jury with a list of the statutory aggravating circumstances authorized by the evidence. Clark v. State, 275 Ga. 220, 563 S.E.2d 865 (2002).

Petitioner death row inmate failed to establish that no fairminded jurist could conclude that the inmate was not prejudiced by the inmate's trial lawyers' failure at the sentencing phase to present additional evidence of the petitioner's limited intelligence and the inmate's troubled, abusive childhood because, in addition to four statutory aggravating circumstances — (1) the inmate murdered a deputy sheriff, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(8); (2) the inmate murdered the deputy sheriff while trying to avoid arrest, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(10); (3) the inmate murdered the deputy sheriff while committing armed robbery, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2); and (4) the inmate murdered the deputy sheriff after the inmate had already been convicted of a capital felony, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(1) — the jury heard evidence about the inmate's long history of violence against others. Holsey v. Warden, Ga. Diagnostic Prison, 694 F.3d 1230 (11th Cir. 2012).

1. In General (Cont'd)

Instruction as to invalid circumstance. — Death sentence was not impaired because the judge instructed the jury with regard to an invalid statutory aggravating circumstance, a "substantial history of serious assaultive criminal convictions," for the underlying evidence was nevertheless fully admissible at the sentencing phase under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), the instructions did not place particular emphasis on the role of statutory aggravating circumstances in the jury's ultimate decision, and any possible impact could not fairly be regarded as a constitutional defect in the sentencing process, as nothing in the United States Constitution prohibits a trial judge from instructing a jury that it would be appropriate to take account of a defendant's prior criminal record in making a jury's sentencing determination, even though the defendant's prior history of noncapital convictions could not by itself provide sufficient justification for imposing the death sentence. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Rule that a general verdict must be set aside if the jury was instructed that the jury could rely on any of two or more independent grounds, and one of those grounds is insufficient, because the verdict may have rested exclusively on the insufficient ground, does not require that a death sentence be vacated, when the jury did not merely return a general verdict stating that the jury had found at least one aggravating circumstance, but expressly found aggravating circumstances that were valid and legally sufficient to support the death penalty. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Erroneous instruction not reversible error. — Although the court erroneously stated to the jury that kidnapping is a capital felony, when kidnapping with bodily injury is a capital felony but kidnapping is not, the erroneous instruction did not amount to reversible error. Ward v. State, 262 Ga. 293, 417 S.E.2d 130 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1084, 113 S. Ct. 1061, 122 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1993).

Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) sets forth only one statutory aggravating circumstance, the trial court erred by using a verdict that suggested otherwise; however, the error was harmless because the death penalty would still have been authorized if the several overlapping findings had been merged, and the jury was not instructed to weigh the number of statutory aggravating circumstances but, instead, was properly charged that the jury could impose a sentence less than death for any or no reason. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

Introduction of evidence relating to nonstatutory grounds. — Trial judge did not err by permitting the state to introduce court records of prior convictions for burglary and assault since the jury based the death sentence on other proper, specified statutory aggravating circumstances. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716 (1984).

Five aggravators supported death sentence for malice murder. — Death sentence based on O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), (b)(4), (b)(7), and O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1), (c)(3) aggravators for malice murder was supported by sufficient evidence, was not the result of ineffective counsel or an improperly selected jury, and was not disproportionate to other depraved, wantonly vile, and tortuous murders. Defendant's counsel's withholding of alleged mitigating evidence (by presenting the evidence to the trial court under seal) so that the state could not use that evidence against the defendant in the event of a new trial could not be used to assess whether counsel was ineffective for withholding the evidence. Franks v. State, 278 Ga. 246, 599 S.E.2d 134 (2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 1058, 125 S. Ct. 870, 160 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2005).

Consideration of nonstatutory with statutory aggravating circumstance not error. — Because a judge found the statutory aggravating circumstance of armed robbery, then considered the nonstatutory aggravating circumstance of the murder being committed in the victim's home, coming to the conclusion that the statutory aggravating circumstance and the location of the murder and robbery so aggravated the crime as to outweigh all mitigating circumstances involved in the case, such an evaluation comported with the constitutional requirement of an individualized sentencing decision, and thus the judge did not commit constitutional error in imposing the death sentence. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir.), supplemented by, 722 F.2d 629 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1084, 104 S. Ct. 1456, 79 L. Ed. 2d 773 (1984).

Evidence is not inadmissible in aggravation simply because the evidence does not pertain to a specific statutory aggravating circumstance. Although the death penalty cannot be imposed unless the jury finds at least one of the statutory aggravating circumstances enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b), the state is not limited to proof only of the enumerated statutory aggravating circumstances. Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 715, 352 S.E.2d 762, cert. denied, 482 U.S. 931, 107 S. Ct. 3220, 96 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1987).

If the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(4) statutory aggravating circumstance was the only statutory aggravating circumstance contended for by the state, but the state offered, as additional evidence in aggravation, proof that the defendant had a prior record of conviction for assault with intent to murder and for burglary, and the defendant contended the jury improperly considered the two noncapital felony convictions as statutory aggravating circumstances, thereby giving undue emphasis to this prior record in making the jury's determination as to sentence, in view of the court's specific instructions that the defendant's prior record did not constitute statutory aggravating circumstances, and the jury's subsequent return of a verdict showing that the jury understood these supplemental instructions, the mere fact that some of the aggravating circumstances were improperly designated "statutory" in the jury's initial verdict clearly had an inconsequential impact on the jury's decision regarding the death penalty. Quick v. State, 256 Ga. 780, 353 S.E.2d 497 (1987).

Reasonable doubt is essential test in finding of existence of aggravating circumstance. Burger v. State, 245 Ga. 458, 265 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 988, 100 S. Ct. 2975, 64 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1980).

Reasonable doubt test ensures administration of death penalty is constitutional. — Requirement that the jury find the existence of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance beyond a reasonable doubt before imposing the death penalty is sufficient to ensure that the death penalty is administered in a constitutional manner. Finney v. State, 242 Ga. 582, 250 S.E.2d 388 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 916, 99 S. Ct. 2017, 60 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1979).

Charge as to aggravating circumstances generally. — Judge does not err in furnishing the jury multiple copies of the judge's instruction pursuant to the statutory requirement that the instructions be given in charge and in writing to the jury for the jury's deliberation. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

This section demanded no more than a written list of the statutory aggravating circumstances which the trial court had orally charged. Mulligan v. State, 245 Ga. 266, 264 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Judge must charge aggravating circumstances supported by evidence. — Under this section, the judge was required to charge the jury in a capital punishment case on any of the statutory aggravating circumstances which are supported by the evidence. Williams v. State, 237 Ga. 399, 228 S.E.2d 806 (1976).

If the indictment fails to allege aggravating circumstances upon which the state would rely in seeking the death penalty, the state may nevertheless impose the death penalty if the state has notified the defendant of the state's intention to seek such penalty. Blankenship v. State, 247 Ga. 590, 277 S.E.2d 505 (1981), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 871, 109 S. Ct. 183, 102 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993) and, overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274

1. In General (Cont'd)

Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Sufficient evidence of aggravating circumstance. — Evidence supported the court's charges on, and the jury's findings of, the following aggravating circumstances: that the defendant committed murder while engaged in the commission of other capital felonies, rape and kidnapping with bodily injury; and that the murder was wantonly vile and horrible in that the murder involved torture and depravity of mind. Wellons v. State, 266 Ga. 77, 463 S.E.2d 868 (1995).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion to quash an indictment based on Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U. S. 466 (2000), and Ring v. Arizona, 536 U. S. 584 (2002), because the face of the indictment did not contain the statutory aggravators for the death penalty; the state was not required to list the statutory aggravators in the indictment. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Evidence supported findings of aggravated circumstances. — See Young v. State, 251 Ga. 153, 303 S.E.2d 431 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1057, 104 S. Ct. 740, 79 L. Ed. 2d 198 (1984); Holiday v. State, 258 Ga. 393, 369 S.E.2d 241 (1988); Pruitt v. State, 258 Ga. 583, 373 S.E.2d 192 (1988), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1093, 110 S. Ct. 1170, 107 L. Ed. 2d 1072 (1990).

Evidence was sufficient to find O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), (4), and (7) murder aggravators of commission while engaged in aggravated battery on the victim for the purpose of receiving monetary value, murder involving depravity and an aggravated battery to the victim since the victim, who was defendant's close friend, was beaten to death with a hammer and choked, followed by the defendant taking the victim's car, phone, and money. McPherson v. State, 274 Ga. 444, 553 S.E.2d 569 (2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 870, 123 S. Ct. 277, 154 L. Ed. 2d 118 (2002).

Because the jury's recommendation of death for the defendant's murder conviction was sufficiently based on other valid statutory aggravating factors, the fact that the jury returned a disjunctive finding of torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim, whereas this finding should have been returned in the conjunctive to ensure unanimity concerning the necessary elements of the circumstances under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7), no reversal was required. Rivera v. State, 282 Ga. 355, 647 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

Evidence was sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant's motive in murdering the victims was to avoid the defendant's own unlawful arrest as the evidence showed that the defendant failed to report to the defendant's probation officer, left the area after the murder, and had no intention of complying with the terms of probation. Hulett v. State, 296 Ga. 49, 766 S.E.2d 1 (2014), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 2358, 192 L. Ed. 2d 153 (U.S. 2015).

When a jury recommends a death sentence, the jury must designate in writing the aggravating circumstance or circumstances which the jury has found beyond a reasonable doubt. This written finding should recite all the essential, pertinent elements of the statutory aggravating circumstances found by the jury. At a minimum, the jury's intent must be shown with sufficient clarity that the Supreme Court can rationally review the jury's finding. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Verdict which completely omits an essential element of a statutory aggravating circumstance does not suffice as a finding of that statutory aggravating circumstance. Black v. State, 261 Ga. 791, 410 S.E.2d 740 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 839, 113 S. Ct. 118, 121 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1992).

Defendant's death sentence could not stand since the jury's verdict omitted an essential element of the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) aggravating circumstance. However, since the evidence was sufficient to support a proper § 17-10-30(b)(7) finding, the state could seek anew the death penalty. Black v. State, 261 Ga. 791, 410 S.E.2d 740 (1991),

Failure to submit aggravating circumstances which are raised by evidence is not an implied directed verdict of acquittal on these aggravating circumstances. Godfrey v. State, 248 Ga. 616, 284 S.E.2d 422 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 919, 102 S. Ct. 1778, 72 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1982).

Renotification on aggravating circumstance code language. — Trial court did not err by refusing a defendant's request to dismiss the statutory aggravating circumstance of committing murder for the purpose of receiving money since the facts supported a possibility that the accomplice was the person who committed the murder for that purpose; however, the remedy was to merely have the state re-notify the defendant regarding the statutory aggravating circumstance using the language of the code, not dismissal of the statutory aggravating circumstance. Wagner v. State, 282 Ga. 149, 646 S.E.2d 676 (2007).

Poll of the jury may clarify the jury's written finding of aggravating circumstances. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

In double murder case in which two death sentences were imposed on the defendant, the fact that each murder was a statutory circumstance supporting the death penalty for the other did not require reversal since several additional aggravating circumstances sounding in torture were present. Blanks v. State, 254 Ga. 420, 330 S.E.2d 575 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1090, 106 S. Ct. 1479, 89 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1986).

Erroneous sentencing charge on aggravated battery. — When the trial court instructed the jury that the offense of aggravated battery is committed when the defendant causes the specified injuries "maliciously, that is to say, with intent . . . ," this instruction was erroneous. A person acts "maliciously" when the person acts intentionally and without justification or serious provocation. What the court should have said was: "Maliciously, that is to say, intentionally and without justification or serious provocation. . . .". The instruction given, by its incompleteness, removed from the prosecution the burden of proving every element of the crime of aggravated battery beyond a reasonable doubt. Wade v. State, 258 Ga. 324, 368 S.E.2d 482 (1988), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 112 S. Ct. 941, 117 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1992).

Failure to find aggravating circumstance. — Superior court improperly denied the defendant's motion to vacate the void sentences of life without the possibility of parole because the plea court did not specify an aggravating circumstance at the time of sentencing. Cordova v. State, 297 Ga. 26, 771 S.E.2d 884 (2015).

Resentencing. — On resentencing after the defendant's death penalty was overturned on technical grounds, the state may offer proof of statutory aggravating circumstances submitted to the first jury but not listed by that jury in support of the death sentence. Zant v. Redd, 249 Ga. 211, 290 S.E.2d 36 (1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983).

Federal district court's initial judgment holding that there was insufficient evidence to support a death sentence, i.e., insufficient evidence to prove the alleged statutory aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(c), which decision was left undisturbed by the federal appellate court, which reversed the district court's denial of the writ of habeas corpus with respect to the guilt phase of the trial, barred the state under the double jeopardy clause from attempting to impose the death penalty on the defendant in the defendant's retrial. Young v. Kemp, 760 F.2d 1097 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1123, 106 S. Ct. 1991, 90 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1986).

2. Prior Convictions

Evidence of prior record or other criminal acts. — During the presentence hearing, the state, subject to notice limitations, is allowed to place the defendant's character in issue through the defendant's prior record or other criminal acts. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert.

denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Evidence supported a jury's determination that there were statutory aggravating circumstances to support the death penalty for a defendant's murder of a fellow inmate in that the murder was committed by a person in a place of lawful confinement and the murder was committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony as: (1) the defendant and the deceased inmate were confined in a county detention center; (2) the defendant had been convicted of an armed robbery and two other murders; (3) the defendant had struck a defense attorney repeatedly during a jailhouse interview; (4) the defendant had slashed a prison guard's face and throat with a razor blade; and (5) in one day, the defendant had murdered one prison inmate, repeatedly stabbed another with an improvised weapon, and planned to kill a third inmate. Williams v. State, 281 Ga. 87, 635 S.E.2d 146 (2006), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1004, 128 S. Ct. 2046, 170 L. Ed. 2d 793 (2008).

Aggravating circumstance may be established by proof of out-of-state convictions that clearly are comparable to Georgia capital felony offenses. Moon v. State, 258 Ga. 748, 375 S.E.2d 442 (1988), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 982, 111 S. Ct. 1638, 113 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1991), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Zant v. Moon, 264 Ga. 93, 440 S.E.2d 657 (1994).

Eleven-year-old murder conviction properly considered. — 1976 murder conviction was not too old to use in aggravation at a trial in 1987. The age of a conviction is a matter which the defense may argue in mitigation, but the age of the conviction is no ground for the exclusion of the evidence. Kinsman v. State, 259 Ga. 89, 376 S.E.2d 845, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 874, 110 S. Ct. 210, 107 L. Ed. 2d 163 (1989).

Prior capital felony not charged at guilt-innocence phase. — When a defendant in a capital case is not charged during the guilt-innocence phase with the capital felony designated as an aggravating circumstance, the trial court would be required to charge the definition of that capital felony as part of the court's instruction to the jury during the sentencing phase of the trial, unless such charge has been waived. Burger v. State, 245 Ga. 458, 265 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 988, 100 S. Ct. 2975, 64 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1980).

Even if statutory aggravating circumstance is found, death penalty need not be imposed. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

History of serious assaultive convictions is unconstitutional as an aggravating circumstance. — Portion of paragraph (b)(1) of this section which allowed for the death penalty if a murder was committed by a person who had a substantial history of serious assaultive criminal convictions (deleted in 1981 codification) was unconstitutional and, thereby, unenforceable. Arnold v. State, 236 Ga. 534, 224 S.E.2d 386 (1976); Hill v. State, 237 Ga. 794, 229 S.E.2d 737 (1976).

Prior noncapital felonies are admissible but not as statutory aggravating circumstances to authorize the imposition of the death penalty. Hughes v. State, 239 Ga. 393, 236 S.E.2d 829 (1977); Davis v. State, 241 Ga. 376, 247 S.E.2d 45, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 947, 99 S. Ct. 341, 58 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1978).

Jury should consider record as of time of sentencing, not moment of crime. — In deciding if a defendant has a prior record of conviction for a capital felony, the jury should consider the defendant's record as of the time of sentencing rather than at the moment of the crime. Stephens v. Hopper, 241 Ga. 596, 247 S.E.2d 92, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1978).

Supreme Court of Georgia has interpreted O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(1) as referring to the defendant's record at the time of sentencing. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

At issue for sentencing purposes is the status of the defendant at the time of sentencing, not the defendant's status at the moment the defendant committed the crimes for which the defendant was tried.

State v. Terry, 257 Ga. 473, 360 S.E.2d 588 (1987).

Proving prior crime without conviction. — Prior crime may be proven in aggravation despite the lack of a conviction so long as there has not been a previous acquittal. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 872, 108 S. Ct. 203, 98 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1987), 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

One murder as aggravating factor for other murder in joint trial. — When the defendant has been tried for two murders jointly, it is not improper to use the conviction for the murder of one victim as the sole statutory aggravating circumstance supporting the sentence for the murder of the other. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48 (1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1988).

Non-statutory aggravating evidence. — Conviction introduced as non-statutory aggravating evidence does not differ from a conviction introduced to form the basis of a statutory aggravating circumstance on the basis that a statutory aggravating circumstance must be found before the jury can impose a death sentence. Evidence introduced by the state in the penalty phase, whether it is offered to prove a statutory aggravating circumstance or whether it is non-statutory aggravating evidence, is intended to influence the trier of fact to impose a death sentence. Tharpe v. Head, 272 Ga. 596, 533 S.E.2d 368 (2000).

3. Crime Committed While Engaged in Commission of Other Crimes

This section did not require conviction of crime forming basis of aggravating circumstance in order to allow a jury to find such an aggravating circumstance for sentencing purposes. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

It is not required that a defendant be convicted of the crime introduced as an aggravating circumstance. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

No requirement that crime be completed or that offender be charged with it. — The "while … engaged in the commission of" requirement of paragraph (b)(2) of this section did not require that the subject felony shall have been completed or that the offender shall have been charged with or convicted of the felony. Amadeo v. State, 243 Ga. 627, 255 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 974, 100 S. Ct. 469, 62 L. Ed. 2d 389 (1979); Roberts v. State, 252 Ga. 227, 314 S.E.2d 83, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 228, 83 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1984).

Defendant's argument that the death penalty was not appropriate punishment in the defendant's case because the defendant did not complete the armed robbery was rejected. The fact that the robbery was not completed does not diminish the defendant's culpability in the murder and the appropriateness of the death sentence in the defendant's case. Brockman v. State, 292 Ga. 707, 739 S.E.2d 332 (2013).

Use of crimes as aggravating circumstances for one another not permitted. — If armed robberies are held to be aggravating circumstances authorizing death penalties as to murders, the murders cannot then be used in aggravation of the armed robberies. Gregg v. State, 233 Ga. 117, 210 S.E.2d 659 (1974), aff'd, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Although under the test provided for comparison by Ga. L. 1973, p. 159, § 4 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35), two sentences of death for murder and rape are not excessive or disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases, the actual imposition of the two death sentences on the basis of mutually aggravating circumstances cannot be upheld since if the rape offense serves as the aggravating circumstances authorizing the death penalties as to the murder, the murder cannot then be used in aggravation of the rape. Gibson v. State, 236 Ga. 874, 226 S.E.2d 63, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 986, 97 S. Ct. 507, 50 L. Ed. 2d 598 (1976).

3. Crime Committed While Engaged in Commission of Other Crimes (Cont'd)

If one crime, such as robbery, is used as the statutory aggravating circumstances to support imposition of the death penalty for another crime, such as murder, then the murder cannot then be used as the statutory aggravating circumstances to support imposition of the death penalty for the armed robbery. Johnson v. State, 242 Ga. 649, 250 S.E.2d 394 (1978).

When the murders of three children occurred while the defendant was engaged in the commission of another capital felony, the murder of an adult, the imposition of the death penalty for each of the murders of the three children could be supported by the aggravating circumstance that each was committed during the murder of the adult; but the doctrine of "mutually supporting aggravating circumstances" precluded reciprocal use of the murders of the three children as aggravating circumstances to support the imposition of the death penalty for the murder of the adult. Burden v. State, 250 Ga. 313, 297 S.E.2d 242 (1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1103, 103 S. Ct. 1803, 76 L. Ed. 2d 367 (1983).

Doctrine of "mutually supporting aggravating circumstances" precludes simultaneous use of the murder of one victim to support the death penalty for murder of a second victim and use of the murder of the latter victim to support the death penalty for the murder of the first victim. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1983).

Death sentence upheld when each is supported by other circumstances. — Imposition of two death sentences on the basis of mutually aggravating circumstances cannot be upheld. However, if the death sentences are legally and factually supported by additional aggravating circumstances, no violation is present. Potts v. State, 241 Ga. 67, 243 S.E.2d 510 (1978), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1068, 106 S. Ct. 1386, 89 L. Ed. 2d 610 (1986), 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

Doctrine of "mutually supporting aggravating circumstances" precludes imposition of two death sentences if the sole statutory aggravating circumstance is that the defendant has committed a double murder. Nonetheless, if each murder conviction is supported by an independent statutory aggravating circumstance (e.g., armed robbery), the jury may impose the death penalty for each murder. In such cases, the fact that the jury has designated each murder as a statutory aggravating circumstance supporting the death penalty for the other does not require the reversal of either death sentence. Putman v. State, 251 Ga. 605, 308 S.E.2d 145 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 954, 104 S. Ct. 2161, 80 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1984).

Doctrine of "mutually supporting aggravating circumstances" precludes imposition of two death sentences when the sole statutory aggravating circumstance is that the defendant has committed a double murder. However, the jury may impose a death sentence for each murder in a multiple-murder case if each murder is supported by an independent statutory aggravating circumstance. Isaacs v. State, 259 Ga. 717, 386 S.E.2d 316 (1989), cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1031, 110 S. Ct. 3297, 111 L. Ed. 2d 805 (1990).

Defendant's sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor because two statutory aggravating circumstances were found; namely, the murder was committed while engaged in the capital felony of kidnapping with bodily injury and while engaged in the offense of burglary, and an insufficiency of the evidence to support one or more statutory aggravating circumstances found by the jury did not require reversal if supported by at least one. Spears v. State, 296 Ga. 598, 769 S.E.2d 337 (2015), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

If death to victim does not result, death penalty must be set aside. Thomas v. State, 145 Ga. App. 69, 243 S.E.2d 250 (1978).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) is applicable to multiple murders. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Murder of one victim could be used as the aggravating circumstance supporting imposition of the death penalty for murder of another victim in the same crime. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1987); overruled on other grounds, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661 (2007).

Even though the doctrine of "mutually supporting circumstances" precludes simultaneous use of the murder of one victim to support the death penalty for murder of the second victim and use of the murder of the second to support the death penalty for murder of the first, it is appropriate to select one of the two as the basis for affirming a death sentence. McMichen v. State, 265 Ga. 598, 458 S.E.2d 833 (1995).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) does not require that the underlying felony be one other than murder. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd sub nom. 836 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed sub nom. Zant v. Godfrey, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) does not require simultaneity of action with regard to multiple offenses if there is one continuous course of criminal conduct in a relatively short period of time. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) aggravating circumstance does not require simultaneity of action between the murder and the other capital felony or aggravated battery; § 17-10-30(b)(2) does not require that the murder victim and the kidnapping with bodily injury victim be the same person. Sallie v. State, 276 Ga. 506, 578 S.E.2d 444, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 902, 124 S. Ct. 251, 157 L. Ed. 2d 185 (2003).

Intent to commit other crime may arise before or after murder. — Jury may find the defendant guilty of armed robbery and find that the armed robbery is a statutory aggravating circumstance supporting the death penalty for the victim's murder regardless of whether the defendant's intent to take the victim's property arose before or after the murder. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Evidence was sufficient for application of the aggravating circumstance that murders were committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of kidnapping, even if the kidnapping was an afterthought to the shootings. Raulerson v. State, 268 Ga. 623, 491 S.E.2d 791 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1127, 118 S. Ct. 1815, 140 L. Ed. 2d 953 (1998).

Noncontemporaneous offenses. — If there was no indication in the jury's verdict that the offense of armed robbery was committed contemporaneously with the murder, as the statute requires, and if the jury was not polled as to the aggravating circumstances, the jury's O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) finding was insufficient. Jarrell v. State, 261 Ga. 880, 413 S.E.2d 710 (1992).

Use of capital felony as both aggravating circumstance and basis for felony murder conviction. — When the defendant argued that it was unconstitutional to allow the defendant's armed robbery to serve both as a basis for a conviction of felony murder and as a statutory aggravating circumstance, for in these circumstances the finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance failed to serve the narrowing function described in Zant v. Stephen, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L.Ed.2d 235 (1983); the fact that the prerequisites of a possible death sentence could be satisfied by proof offered at the guilt-innocence phase of the trial was no bar to the imposition of a death sentence, nor an indication that a statutorily-defined aggravating circumstance was not helping to distinguish cases in which the death penalty was imposed from the many cases in which the death penalty was not. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 872, 108 S. Ct. 203, 98 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1987), 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

Supporting capital felony not specified by jury. — If the jury did not specify the supporting capital felony, but the only one charged was armed robbery, absent any objection to the form of the verdict, the jury's finding was sufficiently clear to allow the appellate court to rationally review the verdict. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 872, 108 S. Ct. 203, 98 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1987), 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

Murder committed by wife during rape by husband. — Jury was properly instructed that the jury could find the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) circumstance with the underlying predicate crime of aiding and abetting rape as the jury could properly find that the defendant, a female, committed murder during the commission of a rape by her husband. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695 (11th Cir. 1990).

Murder committed during burglary. — Since the appellant was discovered while still at the scene of the burglary and since the appellant fired at two people in the appellant's attempt to get away, killing one, the court concluded that the murder occurred during the commission of the burglary and that the evidence supported the jury's finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2). Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030 (1983).

Imposition of the death penalty for a murder occurring during the commission of a burglary is not rendered constitutionally infirm by reason of the fact that the murder is the burglary conviction's predicate offense. Cash v. State, 258 Ga. 460, 368 S.E.2d 756 (1988).

Jury was authorized to conclude that the defendant burst through the door of the defendant's mother-in-law's home "without authority" and with the intent to commit the felony of murder, and thus that the defendant committed the offense of burglary, which could properly count in aggravation for imposition of the death penalty. Brantley v. State, 262 Ga. 786, 427 S.E.2d 758 (1993).

Evidence was sufficient to prove that defendant lacked authority to enter the victims' house and that the defendant intended to commit the specified felonies once inside under O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a), and the defendant's argument that the defendant had authority to enter due to the defendant's marriage to one of the victims was not supported by the law; the trial court did not err by refusing to grant the defendant's motion to dismiss the statutory aggravating circumstance based on the defendant's commission of a burglary under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2). Sallie v. State, 276 Ga. 506, 578 S.E.2d 444, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 902, 124 S. Ct. 251, 157 L. Ed. 2d 185 (2003).

Considering the two murders committed by the defendant, the Supreme Court of Georgia determined that the sentences of death were not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases as the defendant murdered a parent and a young child for the purpose of robbing a home; the defendant made the child turn the power back on so that the defendant could see the parent since the parent was still indicating signs of life and the defendant wanted to see to complete the murder; the defendant boasted of raping the child before cutting the child's throat; and, knowing that the child was still alive, the defendant set the house on fire, leaving the pair to burn. O'Kelley v. State, 284 Ga. 758, 670 S.E.2d 388 (2008).

Evidence sufficient to show murder committed along with other crimes. — Evidence supported the jury's O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) findings that the murder of the defendant's spouse was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of the offenses of rape, kidnapping with bodily injury, and burglary. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1987).

Evidence was sufficient to prove that a murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the kidnapping and bodily injury of the victim, an aggravating circumstance under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2); the evidence established that the victim was taken from the victim's home and held at gunpoint by the defendant, that the defendant refused to allow the victim to leave, and that instead the defendant drove the victim to a home where the defendant shot the victim. Dalton v. State, 282 Ga. 300, 647 S.E.2d 580 (2007).

There were sufficient aggravating circumstances to support the defendant's sentencing to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole based on the evidence establishing that the defendant and a codefendant shot and killed a convenience store clerk while the pair were robbing the store. McDougal v. State, 284 Ga. 427, 667 S.E.2d 592 (2008).

Evidence sufficient to find aggravating circumstance of paragraph (b)(4). — Evidence that the defendant sold the victim's ring, stripped the victim's car and attempted to sell various parts of the car, and took the victim's pistol after murdering the victim was sufficient to support a finding of the aggravating circumstance in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(4). Baxter v. State, 254 Ga. 538, 331 S.E.2d 561, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 935, 106 S. Ct. 269, 88 L. Ed. 2d 275 (1985).

Presence of circumstances of paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(7). — State is not precluded from urging the presence of both O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) and (b)(7) simply because rape is a fact supporting both circumstances. Parks v. State, 254 Ga. 403, 330 S.E.2d 686 (1985).

When an aggravated battery is alleged to have been committed upon the person who is also the murder victim, the same limitations should apply to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) circumstance as to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) circumstance. That is, insofar as aggravated battery is concerned, only facts occurring prior to death may be considered; i.e., only facts showing aggravated battery, which are separate from the act causing instantaneous death, will support a finding of aggravated battery. Davis v. State, 255 Ga. 588, 340 S.E.2d 862, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 243, 93 L. Ed. 2d 168 (1986).

Evidence supported a defendant's conviction for aggravated battery as there was evidence supporting an inference that the victim's first wound was non-fatal as the victim managed to flee a short distance into a neighbor's yard before succumbing to the gunfire; the trial court was not required to grant the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on the aggravated battery charge and the trial court did not err by allowing the jury to consider the crime of aggravated battery as an aggravating circumstance of the murder. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Death penalty for kidnapping with bodily injury is not unconstitutional if the victim is killed. Potts v. State, 241 Ga. 67, 243 S.E.2d 510 (1978), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1068, 106 S. Ct. 1386, 89 L. Ed. 2d 610 (1986), 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

Although the state obtained an order of nolle prosequi regarding a kidnapping with bodily injury charge before trial, the offense was sufficiently part of the same criminal transaction to permit the jury to find the statutory aggravating circumstance that the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of kidnapping with bodily injury. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Kidnapping with bodily injury is a capital felony for purposes of aggravating circumstances. — If the victim of the kidnapping is killed, kidnapping with bodily injury is a capital felony for purposes of the statutory aggravating circumstances. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

Death penalty for rape is not unconstitutional if the victim is killed. Moore v. State, 240 Ga. 807, 243 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 903, 99 S. Ct. 268, 58 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Sabel v. State, 248 Ga. 10, 282 S.E.2d 61 (1981).

Marital murderers. — This section did not forbid imposition of the death penalty upon marital murderers. It merely requires that statutory aggravating circumstances exist. Dix v. State, 238 Ga. 209, 232 S.E.2d 47 (1977), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980).

Death penalty for armed robbery alone is excessive. — Under the test provided by former Code 1933, § 27-2537 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35), a death sentence imposed for armed robbery must be considered to be excessive or disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases. Gregg v. State, 233 Ga. 117, 210 S.E.2d 659 (1974), aff'd, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Death sentence for armed robbery must be considered to be excessive or disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases. Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3223, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976).

Death has rarely been imposed for armed robbery offense. — Even if there is no indication that the death sentence was imposed for an armed robbery offense under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, since it has rarely been imposed for that offense, it must be considered to be excessive or disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases. Floyd v. State, 233 Ga. 280, 210 S.E.2d 810 (1974), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 949, 97 S. Ct. 2667, 53 L. Ed. 2d 266 (1977).

Armed robbery is viable aggravating circumstance. — "Capital felony" was used in this section in a generic sense to include those felonies which were capital crimes in this state at the time this section was enacted. Thus, armed robbery remains a viable aggravating circumstance. Bowden v. State, 239 Ga. 821, 238 S.E.2d 905 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 937, 98 S. Ct. 1513, 55 L. Ed. 2d 533 (1978).

Armed robbery is still a capital felony for purposes of aggravating circumstances under this section, even though the death penalty cannot be imposed for armed robbery. Davis v. State, 241 Ga. 376, 247 S.E.2d 45, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 947, 99 S. Ct. 341, 58 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1978); Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Even though the death penalty may no longer be imposed for armed robbery alone, armed robbery is still a capital felony under the aggravating circumstance provisions of this section. Jones v. State, 243 Ga. 820, 256 S.E.2d 907, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 957, 100 S. Ct. 437, 62 L. Ed. 2d 329 (1979).

Armed robbery was still considered a capital offense under paragraph (b)(2) of this section. Simmons v. State, 149 Ga. App. 830, 256 S.E.2d 79 (1979).

Charge on statutory aggravating circumstances was proper, when even if the defendant decided to take the victim's money only after having twice shot the victim in the head, the jury was authorized to find that the offense of murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of the offense of armed robbery. Davis v. State, 255 Ga. 588, 340 S.E.2d 862, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 243, 93 L. Ed. 2d 168 (1986).

Defendant's death sentence was not disproportionate since the defendant's two victims were deliberately killed during the commission of an armed robbery and were shot in the back of the head. Arevalo v. State, 275 Ga. 392, 567 S.E.2d 303 (2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 962, 123 S. Ct. 1749, 155 L. Ed. 2d 515 (2003).

Kidnapping with bodily injury is viable aggravating circumstance. — Crime, such as kidnapping with bodily injury, on which the death penalty cannot be imposed is nevertheless another capital felony for purposes of aggravating circumstances under this section. Cook v. State, 242 Ga. 657, 251 S.E.2d 230 (1978).

Although the death penalty may not be imposed for the offense of kidnapping with bodily injury unless the victim is killed, kidnapping with bodily injury is a capital felony that may be considered by the jury as a O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) statutory aggravating circumstance supporting a death sentence for the offense of murder. Tharpe v. State, 262 Ga. 110, 416 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 506 U.S. 942, 113 S. Ct. 383, 121 L. Ed. 2d 292 (1992).

Even though the trial court directed a verdict of acquittal of kidnapping with bodily injury because the kidnapping occurred in a different county, the jury was authorized to find the statutory aggravating circumstance that the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of kidnapping with bodily injury; the offense of kidnapping with bodily injury was sufficiently part of the same criminal transaction to be considered as and found to be a O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) aggravating circumstance of the murder. Lee v. State, 270 Ga. 798, 514 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 503, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to dismiss the two statutory aggravating circumstances under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) that involved the defendant's commission of the murder while engaged in the commission of the kidnappings with bodily injury of two victims even though the defendant alleged that the kidnappings with bodily injury occurred after the murder, and that the "bodily injury" elements, the rapes, occurred several hours after the murder. Sallie v. State, 276 Ga. 506, 578 S.E.2d 444, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 902, 124 S. Ct. 251, 157 L. Ed. 2d 185 (2003).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to death for murder because the evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's finding of the existence of a statutory aggravating circumstance based on kidnapping with bodily injury beyond a reasonable doubt under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) since the stab wound to the victim's thigh and the victim's strangulation constituted bodily injuries sufficient to complete this statutory aggravating circumstance; the defendant pled guilty to the offense of kidnapping with bodily injury, and the evidence presented at the sentencing trial correlated with the definition of kidnapping. Loyd v. State, 288 Ga. 481, 705 S.E.2d 616, cert. dismissed, 565 U.S. 971, 132 S. Ct. 474, 181 L. Ed. 2d 309 (U.S. 2011).

Death resulting from kidnapping. — Evidence was sufficient for conviction for murder committed during kidnapping, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), as the evidence showed that the defendant had stalked children, possessed a gun and child pornography, had taken two children and taped their mouths shut, and led police to a body, even though the second kidnapping victim in the same incident was not killed. Presnell v. State, 274 Ga. 246, 551 S.E.2d 723 (2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1059, 122 S. Ct. 1921, 152 L. Ed. 2d 829 (2002).

Kidnapping alone is not a statutory aggravating circumstance. Crawford v. State, 256 Ga. 57, 344 S.E.2d 215, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 989, 107 S. Ct. 583, 93 L. Ed. 2d 585 (1986).

"Simple" kidnapping not a statutory aggravating circumstance. — Since kidnapping when no bodily injury occurs was not a capital crime at the time O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 was enacted, such an offense cannot serve as a statutory aggravating circumstance. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567 (1985), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1040, 109 S. Ct. 1098, 103 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1989).

Evidence was sufficient to support finding that murder occurred while defendant was committing rape when the victim was found with her sweater open, her slip pulled up and her pantyhose and panties pulled down, evidence established that there could have been manipulation of the victim's sexual organs, bruises were present on her thigh and there was a tear in the vaginal wall and hemorrhaging around the urethra. Spraggins v. State, 255 Ga. 195, 336 S.E.2d 227 (1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1120, 106 S. Ct. 1982, 90 L. Ed. 2d 664 (1986).

Evidence sufficient to establish aggravated battery. — When the state contended at trial that the offense of murder was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of the offense of aggravated battery, the evidence showed that the victim was struck twice in the head with a heavy stick and then strangled to death with a ligature, one blow to the head left a severe bruise on the victim's left cheek and ear, and the other blow lacerated the victim's scalp and fractured the victim's skull, the evidence was sufficient to establish the commission of an aggravated battery, and to establish that the aggravated battery preceded the killing and was a separate and distinct act from the act causing death. Wade v. State, 258 Ga. 324, 368 S.E.2d 482 (1988), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 112 S. Ct. 941, 117 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1992); Wade v. State, 261 Ga. 105, 401 S.E.2d 701 (1991).

Evidence was sufficient to support a finding of aggravated battery as the defendant invited the victim to the defendant's apartment, attacked the victim without provocation, chased the victim through the apartment, and continued inflicting wounds until the victim died. Perkins v. State, 269 Ga. 791, 505 S.E.2d 16 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798 (1999).

Testimony of a state psychiatrist who examined the defendant is not irrelevant to the statutory aggravating circumstance of murder committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of another capital felony because the psychiatrist testifies in rebuttal to a defense witness who has previously testified as to the defendant's mental condition. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475 (1984), cert. dismissed, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

Evidence supported death penalty for defendant found guilty of being the actual perpetrator of the murder of two unarmed, elderly men during the armed robbery of a convenience store. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1983).

Murder committed during armed robbery. — Evidence supported findings that murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in commission of armed robbery and burglary. Beck v. State, 255 Ga. 483, 340 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 242, 93 L. Ed. 2d 167 (1986), 495 U.S. 940, 110 S. Ct. 2194, 109 L. Ed. 2d 521 (1990).

Petitioner, a death row inmate, in a federal habeas petition argued the death sentence was unconstitutionally imposed because there was insufficient evidence to establish that the murder occurred during the commission of an armed robbery under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41 for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), but this argument was rejected because while the victim's wallet was never found, the wallet was missing, the petitioner had not yet cashed the petitioner's paycheck but nevertheless was in possession of a large sum of cash the night the murder occurred, the petitioner was in possession of an ATM card later determined to belong to the victim, and the petitioner attempted to use the ATM card to withdraw money while wearing a straw hat and sunglasses. Jefferson v. Terry, 490 F. Supp. 2d 1261 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 570 F.3d 1283 (11th Cir. Ga. 2009).

Sufficient aggravating circumstances. — Evidence was sufficient under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(2) to find the statutory aggravating circumstances in order to impose the death sentence on the defendant after finding that the defendant committed, inter alia, malice murder and the jury found that the offense was committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony and that the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of another capital felony, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(1), (3), because the defendant stole a car, robbed a bank at gunpoint, shot a driver while trying to escape, and eventually surrendered. Nance v. State, 280 Ga. 125, 623 S.E.2d 470 (2005).

4. Outrageously or Wantonly Vile, Horrible, or Inhuman Circumstances

Paragraph (b)(7) constitutional. — Structure of the Georgia death penalty is constitutional including the statutory aggravating circumstance established by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7). Mathis v. Zant, 744 F. Supp. 272 (N.D. Ga. 1990), vacated in part on other grounds, 975 F.2d 1493 (11th Cir. 1992).

Defendant abandoned the defendant's claim raised solely in an enumeration of error that the phrases "outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman" and "depravity of mind" in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) were facially unconstitutional because the defendant completely failed to support that claim with any argument or citation of authority in the defendant's brief; further, the claim was without merit as the United States Supreme Court and the Georgia Supreme Court rejected a facial challenge to the constitutionality of the statutory aggravating circumstance set forth in § 17-10-30(b)(7). Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Aggravating circumstance described in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) is not per se unconstitutional. Morgan v. Zant, 582 F. Supp. 1026 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 743 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1984), overruled on other grounds, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 93 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986), 486 U.S. 1009, 108 S. Ct. 1739, 100 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1988).

Paragraph (b)(7) of this section was not unconstitutionally vague. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977); Crowe v. State, 265 Ga. 582, 458 S.E.2d 799 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1148, 116 S. Ct. 1021, 134 L. Ed. 2d 100 (1996).

Paragraph (b)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 was not inherently overbroad or vague and the court acted properly in reading this provision to the jury and instructing the jury that the jury "may consider that one aggravated factor if it is supported by the evidence." Cape v. Francis, 741 F.2d 1287 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 281, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1985).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) circumstance was not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad as applied to a defendant who viciously attacked the defendant's spouse with a knife, cutting the spouse five times in the spouse's face, once on the spouse's hand, another six times in the spouse's chest and back, and slashing the spouse's throat at least seven times so deeply as to nearly decapitate the spouse. Taylor v. State, 261 Ga. 287, 404 S.E.2d 255, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 947, 112 S. Ct. 393, 116 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) has two parts. First, the murder must be "outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman." Second, the offense of murder must involve either torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim (or a combination of these three elements). Black v. State, 261 Ga. 791, 410 S.E.2d 740 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 839, 113 S. Ct. 118, 121 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1992).

Failure to find that murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman. — Because the jury did not make a finding that the murder committed by the defendant was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman, in compliance with the first component of the aggravating circumstance set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7), the statutory aggravating circumstance imposed required vacating that factor; however, the defendant's death sentence was unaffected because the death sentence was supported by the jury's finding of three other statutory aggravating circumstances. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

Defining "outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman." — Words "outrageous or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman" are subject to common understanding and need no clarification. Conklin v. State, 254 Ga. 558, 331 S.E.2d 532, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1038, 106 S. Ct. 606, 88 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1985).

All terms in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) are words of ordinary significance which require no explication with the exception of "aggravated battery" which is a crime defined by statute. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Defining "aggravated battery." — Trial judge need not define any O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) term other than the phrase "aggravated battery." Morgan v. Zant, 582 F. Supp. 1026 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 743 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1984), overruled on other grounds, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 93 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986), 486 U.S. 1009, 108 S. Ct. 1739, 100 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1988).

Defining "depravity of mind." — Absent a request, depravity of mind need not be defined in the court's charge to the jury; however, if the court undertakes to do so the court should do so correctly. West v. State, 252 Ga. 156, 313 S.E.2d 67 (1984).

4. Outrageously or Wantonly Vile, Horrible, or Inhuman Circumstances (Cont'd)

"Depravity of mind" is not catchall for cases when no other statutory aggravating circumstance is raised by the evidence. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977); Johnson v. State, 242 Ga. 649, 250 S.E.2d 394 (1978).

"Depravity of mind" will not be permitted to become a catchall. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

Beating of victim before or after death would support depravity of mind. — In defendant's capital murder trial, counsel was not ineffective for failing to call a forensic pathologist to counter the state's pathologist's testimony that the victim was alive from a gunshot wound when the victim was severely beaten, which supported two aggravating circumstances for the death penalty under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), and (b)(7), because even if the victim was dead when beaten, that evidence would have supported a finding of depravity of mind. Terrell v. GDCP Warden, 744 F.3d 1255 (11th Cir. 2014).

Death penalty is restricted to those cases that lie at the core of statutory aggravating circumstances. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

Upon sentence review, affirmance will be restricted to those cases which lie at the very core of this section. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

Test for presence of this aggravating circumstance. — Aggravating circumstance of paragraph (b)(7) of this section involved both the effect on the victim, viz., torture, or an aggravated battery; and the offender, viz., depravity of mind. As to both parties the test is that the acts were outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

It is not required that a trier of fact find the existence of each disjunctive phrase of the statute, only that at least one phrase of the first clause of the statute exists due to the existence of at least one phrase of the second clause of the statute. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Disjunctive phrases means only one element needs to exist. — In determining whether the evidence supports the jury's or judge's finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance, the evidence must be sufficient to satisfy the first major component of the statutory aggravating circumstance and at least one subpart of the second component. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980); Ledford v. State, 264 Ga. 60, 439 S.E.2d 917 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1085, 115 S. Ct. 740, 130 L. Ed. 2d 641 (1995).

Finding that a murder involved torture, depravity of mind, an aggravated battery, or some combination of those three involved only one aggravating circumstance. Carruthers v. State, 272 Ga. 306, 528 S.E.2d 217, cert. denied, 531 U.S. 934, 121 S. Ct. 321, 148 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863 (2008).

Trial court erred by merely reading the language of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) to the jury without explaining the meaning of "aggravated battery", when a reasonable juror, if properly instructed, could very well have concluded that there was no aggravated battery in the case. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Improper instructions were harmless error. — Improper instruction telling the jury that the jury could find the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) circumstance merely on a finding of "deficiency in moral sense and rectitude" rather than a finding of "utterly corrupt, perverted or immoral" did not require reversal, when the instructions on the other aggravating circumstances were proper, and the defendant did not show that the evidence was insufficient to find those circumstances. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695 (11th Cir. 1990).

Trial court's failure to instruct jury on element of armed robbery permitted the jury to exercise an impermissible "open-ended discretion", as a reasonable juror could have believed that although the defendant intended to take property from a store, the defendant did not intend to take property from the person of the murder victim. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Verdict lacking paragraph (b)(7) findings was insufficient. — Since a jury's O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) verdict cannot be sustained if the verdict completely omits an essential element of the statutory aggravating circumstance, a jury's verdict, failing to find that the murder was "outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman," was insufficient, even though the jury did find depravity of mind and torture. Jarrell v. State, 261 Ga. 880, 413 S.E.2d 710 (1992).

Specific finding as to facts not required. — There is no requirement that the jury make a specific finding as to how the facts support O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7). Rather, it is only required that the form of the verdict set forth the applicable statutory language. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Execution-style murder of unarmed and already wounded innocent man provided an adequate factual basis for a jury's finding an aggravating circumstance under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7). Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Execution-style murder of security guard, an off-duty police officer investigating a disturbance, was an outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, and inhuman murder. Davis v. State, 263 Ga. 5, 426 S.E.2d 844, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 950, 114 S. Ct. 396, 126 L. Ed. 2d 344 (1993).

Lack of standards. — Imposition of the death penalty pursuant to this section does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment even though neither the court nor the jury is given standards to determine whether the offense for which the death penalty is being given is outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that the offense involved torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim. Johnson v. State, 242 Ga. 649, 250 S.E.2d 394 (1978).

In determining whether the evidence shows depravity of mind, the age, and the physical characteristics of the victim may be considered. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980); Rivers v. State, 250 Ga. 303, 298 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Depravity of mind may be shown by facts occurring only prior to death. — When only facts occurring prior to death are relied upon to support a finding of torture or aggravated battery, the fact that the victim was tortured or was the victim of an aggravated battery will also support a finding of depravity of mind of the defendant. That is, a defendant who tortures the victim or subjects the victim to an aggravated battery before killing the victim can be found to have a depraved mind. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

Depravity of mind may be shown by acts committed on body after death. — Defendant who mutilates or seriously disfigures the victim's body after death, or who commits a sex act upon the victim's body after death may be found to have a depraved mind, and such acts would be sufficient to show depravity of mind of the defendant within the meaning of this section. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

Provision satisfied even if relative timing of death and aggravating acts indeterminate. — If it cannot be determined whether the victim was subjected to an aggravated battery or torture before death, or to mutilation or disfigurement after death, because the exact time of death or the precise act causing death cannot be ascertained, the penalty of death nevertheless may be sustained on the basis of aggravated battery, serious physical abuse before death, or depravity of mind demonstrated after death. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

Even though the testimony was inconclusive as to whether the victim, who was shot, was alive when the victim's throat was cut, there was sufficient evidence to support a finding of aggravating circumstances under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) and (b)(7). Drane v. State, 265 Ga. 255, 455 S.E.2d 27 (1995).

In order to constitute aggravated battery, bodily harm must occur before death. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980).

What constitutes torture. — Torture occurs when the victim is subjected to serious physical abuse before death. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980); Collins v. State, 246 Ga. 261, 271 S.E.2d 352 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 990, 66 L. Ed. 2d 829 (1981); Cervi v. State, 248 Ga. 325, 282 S.E.2d 629 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 938, 102 S. Ct. 1995, 72 L. Ed. 2d 457 (1982); Cunningham v. State, 249 Ga. 605, 293 S.E.2d 708 (1982).

Torture also occurs when the victim is subjected to an aggravated battery. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980); Cunningham v. State, 248 Ga. 558, 284 S.E.2d 390 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1038, 102 S. Ct. 1741, 72 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1982).

Torture occurs when the victim is subjected to serious physical abuse before death as when the victim dies from a slow but steady loss of blood a full two hours after being shot in the neck and abandoned by the defendant. Brooks v. State, 246 Ga. 262, 271 S.E.2d 172 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 921, 101 S. Ct. 2000, 68 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1981).

Because the victim, whose hands had been bound with wire, was raped and then shot at point blank range, the evidence supported the finding of depravity of mind on the part of the defendant and that the murder involved torture to the victim and was outrageously and wantonly vile. Johnson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 812, 295 S.E.2d 63 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1228, 103 S. Ct. 1236, 75 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1983).

Defendant who tortures a victim before killing the victim can be found to have a depraved mind. Collins v. State, 246 Ga. 261, 271 S.E.2d 352 (1980), cert. denied 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 900, 66 L. Ed. 2d 829 (1981); Jones v. State, 249 Ga. 605, 293 S.E.2d 708 (1982), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 832, 112 S. Ct. 107, 116 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1991).

Evidence for O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) depraved mind murder was sufficient as the defendant was shown to have stalked elementary school children; planned the defendant's crimes; abducted the eight-year-old victim as the victim was walking home from school; taped the victim's mouth shut; threatened to kill the victim; took the victim to a remote area; made the victim strip naked; forced the victim to watch as the defendant raped and forced other sex acts on the victim's friend; chased the victim as the victim tried to escape; and held the victim's head underwater where the victim struggled for several minutes before dying. Presnell v. State, 274 Ga. 246, 551 S.E.2d 723 (2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1059, 122 S. Ct. 1921, 152 L. Ed. 2d 829 (2002).

Death penalty was properly imposed under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), (7) after the defendant: (1) used the defendant's parent's relationship with a sick, elderly victim to gain access to the victim's house and belongings, steal the victim's checkbook, and forge the victim's checks; (2) plotted the victim's murder when the victim threatened to report the crime; (3) ambushed the victim in the victim's driveway, shot and wounded the victim, chased the victim, knocked the victim down, and shot the victim three more times while standing over the victim; (4) dragged the victim into the bushes, beat, and robbed the victim; and (5) had been convicted of prior crimes involving a calculated, planned murder and an armed robbery, an aggravated battery to the victim before death, or depravity of mind. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 835, 124 S. Ct. 88, 157 L. Ed. 2d 64 (2003).

Although the defendant could not be convicted of both malice murder and three counts of aggravated battery when the same actions by the defendant served as the basis for both the murder and the battery offenses, the jury was nevertheless authorized to find the statutory aggravating circumstances set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2) and the aggravated battery portion of the (b)(7) circumstance because the victim's death was not instantaneous; likewise, the jury's finding of torture was supported by the evidence that the victim's death was not instantaneous but was preceded by serious sexual abuse, as well as the serious physical abuse that constituted the aggravated batteries. Furthermore, the shocking and vicious nature of the victim's murder by stomping and kicking authorized the jury to find that the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman; thus, the evidence was sufficient to support the jury's findings beyond a reasonable doubt of both the paragraph (b)(2) and (b)(7) statutory aggravating circumstances. Ledford v. State, 289 Ga. 70, 709 S.E.2d 239, cert. denied, 565 U.S. 1017, 132 S. Ct. 556, 181 L. Ed. 2d 401 (2011), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 394 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Physical abuse includes psychological abuse resulting in mental anguish to the victim in anticipation of physical harm. Brooks v. State, 246 Ga. 262, 271 S.E.2d 172 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 921, 101 S. Ct. 2000, 68 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1981); Brown v. Francis, 254 Ga. 83, 326 S.E.2d 735, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 865, 106 S. Ct. 186, 88 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1985).

Evidence of psychological abuse by the defendant to the victim before death if it is shown to have resulted in severe mental anguish to the victim in anticipation of physical harm may amount to serious physical abuse, that is, torture of the victim, and also will support a finding of depravity of mind of the defendant. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980); Rivers v. State, 250 Ga. 303, 298 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Even when death instantaneous. — While the death of a victim who dies instantaneously with little or no forewarning does not involve torture or aggravated battery, evidence of psychological abuse by the defendant to the victim prior to death, if it is shown to have resulted in severe mental anguish to the victim in anticipation of physical harm, may amount to serious physical abuse, that is, torture of the victim, and will support a finding of depravity of mind of the defendant. Dampier v. State, 245 Ga. 882, 268 S.E.2d 349, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 938, 101 S. Ct. 337, 66 L. Ed. 2d 161 (1980).

Infliction of mental distress on someone other than victim. — Evidence that the defendant, having shot and killed his estranged wife and her boyfriend, walked his five-year-old child through her mother's blood and left her screaming in a truck overlooking the murder scene while he drank beer at a neighbor's house, was sufficient to support the finding of depravity of mind. McMichen v. State, 265 Ga. 598, 458 S.E.2d 833 (1995).

Physical abuse includes sexual abuse for purposes of proving torture under this section. Brooks v. State, 246 Ga. 262, 271 S.E.2d 172 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 921, 101 S. Ct. 2000, 68 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1981).

Serious sexual abuse may be found to constitute serious physical abuse. Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856, 268 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1067, 101 S. Ct. 796, 66 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1980); Collins v. State, 250 Ga. 303, 298 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Depravity of mind. — When only facts occurring prior to death are relied upon, the fact that the victim was tortured will support a finding of depravity of mind. Brooks v. State, 246 Ga. 262, 271 S.E.2d 172 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 921, 101 S. Ct. 2000, 68 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1981).

Evidence amply supported the statutory aggravating circumstance of torture and depravity of mind as the victim, an elderly woman weighing less than 100 pounds, was raped so forcefully that she received potentially fatal injuries to her vaginal tract, was brutally beaten on the head so hard that she suffered a potentially fatal brain hemorrhage, and kicked in the chest hard enough to break her sternum and several ribs and to cause potentially fatal internal bleeding, and was then strangled to death. Allen v. State, 253 Ga. 390, 321 S.E.2d 710 (1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1059, 105 S. Ct. 1774, 84 L. Ed. 2d 834 (1985).

Defendant convicted of two capital felonies can receive death penalty for both under this section. Johnson v. State, 242 Ga. 649, 250 S.E.2d 394 (1978).

After raping, robbing, and binding victim, defendant put a bullet through victim's head, the sentence of death imposed is not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Execution-style murder of unarmed and wounded armed robbery victim was an outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, and inhuman murder. Jones v. State, 249 Ga. 605, 293 S.E.2d 708 (1982), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 832, 112 S. Ct. 107, 116 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1991).

Finding of strangulation alone is not enough. — Finding of strangulation alone does not, as a matter of law, establish torture of the victim or depravity of mind on the part of the defendant so as to constitute an aggravating circumstance under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7). Baxter v. State, 254 Ga. 538, 331 S.E.2d 561, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 935, 106 S. Ct. 269, 88 L. Ed. 2d 275 (1985), reh'g. denied, 498 U.S. 1041, 111 S. Ct. 714, 112 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1991).

Post-mortem mutilation of the victim's body may show depravity of mind sufficient to support a finding that the "offense of murder" was "outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman." Conklin v. State, 254 Ga. 558, 331 S.E.2d 532, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1038, 106 S. Ct. 606, 88 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1985).

Verdict of "torture, depravity of mind, or aggravated battery" was not insufficiently definitive as, under the circumstances, each of the three components of the finding described essentially the same conduct. Alderman v. State, 254 Ga. 206, 327 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 282, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1985), rehrg. denied, 498 U.S. 1041, 111 S. Ct. 714, 112 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1991).

Death sentence not unconstitutional if defendant murdered rape victim. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) was not applied to the defendant, who raped his victim before murdering her, in violation of his Eighth Amendment rights. Johnson v. Kemp, 759 F.2d 1503 (11th Cir. 1985).

Aggravating circumstance found beyond a reasonable doubt. — See Conklin v. State, 254 Ga. 558, 331 S.E.2d 532, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1038, 106 S. Ct. 606, 88 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1985); Perkins v. State, 269 Ga. 791, 505 S.E.2d 16 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798 (1999).

Evidence showed that the defendant severely beat the victim in the face with a heavy stick, and then killed the victim by crushing the victim's skull with a log after the victim had fallen to the ground, thus, the evidence supported the jury's finding that the offense of murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that it involved an aggravated battery to the victim. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 872, 108 S. Ct. 203, 98 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1987), 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

Evidence supported the jury's O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) finding. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1987).

Application of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) aggravating circumstance held not unconstitutional in view of Georgia Supreme Court's analysis in review of death sentence. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1988).

There was sufficient evidence to support a finding of the statutory aggravating circumstances in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7), namely that the offense was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhumane in that it involved torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim. Alderman v. Zant, 22 F.3d 1541 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1061, 115 S. Ct. 673, 130 L. Ed. 2d 606 (1994).

Defendant committed an aggravated battery against the victim by inflicting a non-fatal gunshot wound to the victim's arm and shoulder, leading the victim into a back bedroom as the victim's sister approached the house, holding the victim alive as the victim's sister asked where the victim was and then murdered the victim, fatally shooting the victim four more times, and finally obtaining another weapon from the codefendant's automobile and shooting the victim again; those facts authorized the jury's finding of the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) statutory aggravating circumstance regarding the victim's murder and the imposition of the death penalty under Georgia law and under the Constitution of the United States. Lucas v. State, 274 Ga. 640, 555 S.E.2d 440 (2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 840, 123 S. Ct. 163, 154 L. Ed. 2d 62 (2002).

Defendant's life without parole sentences for two murders were supported by the existence of the aggravating circumstance set out in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) because: (1) the defendant murdered one victim for the specific purpose of causing emotional distress to the defendant's former wife; (2) the defendant shot a stranger, shot into the home of two other strangers, and murdered another stranger; and (3) the defendant left notes at all the scenes for the purpose of establishing the illusion of an unknown killer working in the area so that when the defendant achieved the ultimate goal of shooting the former wife, suspicion would be diverted from the defendant. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 464, 614 S.E.2d 779 (2005).

Evidence supported the jury's finding of an aggravated battery for purposes of the death penalty under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) after finding petitioner inmate guilty of felony murder because the evidence showed that the petitioner severely beat the victim in the face with a heavy stick, and then finished the victim off by crushing the victim's skull with a log after the victim fell to the ground. Jefferson v. Terry, 490 F. Supp. 2d 1261 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 570 F.3d 1283 (11th Cir. Ga. 2009).

Kidnapping of a murder victim's ten-year-old child along with the victim, the fact that the child witnessed the victim plead for the victim's life, and the fact that the child witnessed the murder, was sufficient to enable the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman. Dalton v. State, 282 Ga. 300, 647 S.E.2d 580 (2007).

Evidence adduced at trial was sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of statutory aggravating circumstances because the jury found the existence of the following statutory aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt; the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of the capital felony of armed robbery, and the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that the murder involved depravity of mind: (1) the defendant initially attacked the victim, who was disabled, in the confined area of a bathroom, where the defendant struck the victim multiple times shortly after the victim emerged from the shower; (2) the defendant continued the attack on the victim even as the victim fell to the floor; (3) the evidence showed that the defendant struck the victim in the head with a hammer and a metal stool at least 12 to 14 times; and (4) the defendant acted for the purpose of obtaining money the victim had just received from cashing the victim's disability check. Arrington v. State, 286 Ga. 335, 687 S.E.2d 438 (2009), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 112, 178 L. Ed. 2d 69 (U.S. 2010).

4. Outrageously or Wantonly Vile, Horrible, or Inhuman Circumstances (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to death for murder because the evidence supported the trial court's finding beyond a reasonable doubt that the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that the murder involved torture to the victim and the depravity of mind of the defendant; the defendant pled guilty to the offenses of cruelty to children, aggravated sodomy, and enticing a child for indecent purposes, and the state presented evidence that the defendant took the three-year-old victim from the defendant's home to an abandoned trailer late at night for the purpose of having sex with the defendant. Loyd v. State, 288 Ga. 481, 705 S.E.2d 616, cert. dismissed, 565 U.S. 971, 132 S. Ct. 474, 181 L. Ed. 2d 309 (U.S. 2011).

Death sentence proportional to other cases involving aggravating factor. — Death sentence imposed on the defendant was not the result of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1), nor was the death sentence excessive or disproportionate under § 17-10-35(c)(3); considering the evidence that the defendant choked and stabbed four female victims to death, that the defendant attempted to kill four other female victims, and that the murder in the instant case involved the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) aggravating factor relating to the fact that the murder was vile and involved a kidnapping, the sentence was proportional to similar cases and was not the result of any arbitrary factor. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Instruction proper. — Because the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) statutory aggravating circumstance was not used as an unlawful "catchall" justification for the death penalty, the trial court properly gave an instruction regarding that statutory aggravating circumstance recommended by the supreme court. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

5. Murder of Peace Officer, Corrections Employee, or Fireman for Purpose of Avoiding, Arrest or Custody =cd.

Knowledge that victim was peace officer or other official. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(8) statutory aggravating circumstance does not require knowledge on the part of the defendant that the victim was a peace officer or other designated official engaged in the performance of official duties. Fair v. State, 284 Ga. 165, 664 S.E.2d 227 (2008).

Murders to prevent arrest and against peace officer in performing duties not necessarily identical. — Murder committed for the purpose of preventing a lawful arrest and murder committed against a peace officer while engaged in the performance of the officer's official duties were not necessarily identical, and therefore did not fall within the inclusion provisions of former Code 1933, §§ 26-505 and 26-506 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6 and 16-1-7), as these sections did not apply to aggravating circumstances but to crimes. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); City of Atlanta v. First Nat'l Bank, 246 Ga. 424, 271 S.E.2d 821 (1980).

Death penalty warranted for murder of peace officer by person in custody. — Death penalty was warranted after the jury found the following statutory aggravating circumstances to exist beyond a reasonable doubt: (1) the offense of murder was committed against a peace officer while engaged in the performance of the officer's official duties; and (2) the offense of murder was committed by a person in the lawful custody of a peace officer. Wallace v. State, 248 Ga. 255, 282 S.E.2d 325 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 927, 102 S. Ct. 1291, 71 L. Ed. 2d 471 (1982).

Murder of off-duty police officer. — Death penalty was warranted under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30 since the defendant shot execution-style an off-duty police officer in the official performance of the officer's duties as a security guard. Davis v. State, 263 Ga. 5, 426 S.E.2d 844, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 950, 114 S. Ct. 396, 126 L. Ed. 2d 344 (1993).

Evidence sufficient. — Imposition of the death sentence and the jury's finding of the aggravators that the offense was committed against a police officer in the performance of the officer's official duties and that the offense was committed for the purpose of avoiding, interfering with, or preventing a lawful arrest were supported by evidence that the defendant shot and killed a police officer during an investigatory stop to prevent the officer from discovering that the defendant was a convicted felon in possession of a weapon, as well as by the defendant's admissions that the defendant shot the officer in the face and again in the back of the head when the defendant heard the officer moan. Henry v. State, 269 Ga. 851, 507 S.E.2d 419 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798 (1999).

Defendant's death sentence was upheld since the committed crimes of malice murder and aggravated battery on a peace officer were committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of an aggravated battery and the murder was committed against a peace officer while the officer was engaged in the performance of official duties. Lawler v. State, 276 Ga. 229, 576 S.E.2d 841, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 934, 124 S. Ct. 356, 157 L. Ed. 2d 243 (2003).

6. Causing or Directing Another to Commit Murder or Committing Murder as Agent or Employee

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(6) is not unconstitutionally vague. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Agency relationship required. — If the defendant was not hired by another person, i.e., was not that person's agent, the death penalty cannot be upheld based on O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(6). Whittington v. State, 252 Ga. 168, 313 S.E.2d 73 (1984).

Terms "agent" and "employee," as used in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(6), should be given their common, everyday meanings; an "employee" is one who is hired by another and an "agent" is one who acts for another. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Murder for hire. — Legislature intended that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(6) be applicable to murders for hire and that the statute be applicable to both the hirer and the one hired. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Defendant who caused or directed a follower or lackey to commit murder was subject to the application of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(6), even if the murder was not for hire. Mize v. State, 269 Ga. 646, 501 S.E.2d 219 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1078, 119 S. Ct. 817, 142 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1999).

7. Great Risk of Death to More than One Person

Defining terms for jury instruction. — Defining the terms "knowingly" and "great risk" in an instruction on the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(3) circumstance was not required. Philpot v. State, 268 Ga. 168, 486 S.E.2d 158 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1054, 118 S. Ct. 706, 139 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1998).

Circumstance held inapplicable. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(3) aggravating circumstance was not meant to apply to a case where the defendant used a shotgun to shoot the victim, who was lying face down on the ground, in the head. Harrison v. State, 257 Ga. 528, 361 S.E.2d 149 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 982, 108 S. Ct. 1281, 99 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1988).

Sufficient evidence. — Evidence that the defendant fired several shots into a crowded night club was sufficient to show that the defendant knowingly created a great risk of death to more than one person in a public place. Philpot v. State, 268 Ga. 168, 486 S.E.2d 158 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1054, 118 S. Ct. 706, 139 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1998).

accused whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act, provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached or (2) the accused has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking prosecution after the remand." This Act became effective April 29, 2009.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 9/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in Section 8 of this Act, the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act."

17-10-31. Requirement of jury finding of aggravating circumstance and recommendation of death penalty prior to imposition; arguments of counsel during sentencing phase; jury instructions; actions of judge in event of failure to reach unanimous verdict.

(a) Where, upon a trial by jury, a person is convicted of an offense which may be punishable by death, a sentence of death shall not be imposed unless the jury verdict includes a finding of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance and a recommendation that such sentence be imposed. Where a statutory aggravating circumstance is found and a recommendation of death is made, the court shall sentence the accused to death. Where a statutory aggravating circumstance is not found or where a statutory circumstance is found but a recommendation of death is not made, the jury shall decide whether to recommend a sentence of life imprisonment without parole or life imprisonment with the possibility of parole. Unless the jury trying the case makes a finding of at least one statutory aggravating circumstance and recommends the death sentence in its verdict, the court shall not sentence the accused to death, provided that no such finding of statutory aggravating circumstance shall be necessary in offenses of treason or aircraft hijacking. This Code section shall not affect a sentence when the case is tried without a jury or when the judge accepts a plea of guilty.

(b) During the sentencing phase before a jury, counsel for the state and the accused may present argument and the trial judge may instruct the jury:

(1) That "life without parole" means that the accused shall be incarcerated for the remainder of his or her natural life and shall not be eligible for parole unless such person is subsequently adjudicated to be not guilty of the offense for which he or she was sentenced; and

(2) That "life imprisonment" means that the accused will be incarcerated for the remainder of his or her natural life but will be eligible for parole during the term of such sentence.

(c) If the jury is unable to reach a unanimous verdict as to sentence, the judge shall dismiss the jury and shall impose a sentence of either life imprisonment or imprisonment for life without parole.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality generally. — Complex statistical study that indicated a risk that racial considerations enter into capital sentencing determinations did not prove that a particular defendant's capital sentence was unconstitutional under the Eighth Amendment or the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1987).

Section applies to sentencing hearing only. — Both former Code 1933, §§ 26-3102 and 27-2-503 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-31) applied only to the sentencing phase of a capital case after conviction. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976).

Indictment need not recite statutory aggravating circumstances. — Death penalty was not unfairly assessed against the defendant because no aggravating circumstances charged to or considered by the jury were alleged in the indictment as there is no requirement that statutory aggravating circumstances be alleged in an indictment against the accused. Dix v. Newsome, 584 F. Supp. 1052 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Discretion to consider mitigating circumstances. — Sentencing authority can assign what the sentencing authority deems the appropriate weight to particular mitigating circumstances. Moreover, with unbridled consideration of mitigating circumstances, the sentencing authority may consider something to be mitigating that others might consider aggravating. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir.), supplemented by 722 F.2d 629 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1084, 104 S. Ct. 1456, 79 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1984).

No need to balance aggravating, mitigating circumstances. — Georgia's post-Furman capital punishment statute does not provide for the balancing of aggravating and mitigating circumstances. Once a single aggravating circumstance is shown, all aggravating and mitigating circumstances are relevant and considered by the jury, but those circumstances are not weighed against each other. Waters v. Thomas, 46 F.3d 1506 (11th Cir. 1995).

Life sentence when aggravating circumstances exist. — Whether sentencing be by judge or jury, life imprisonment may be imposed even though statutory aggravating circumstances are found to exist. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Jury need not find any mitigating circumstance in order to make recommendation of mercy that is binding on the trial court. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

In jury cases, trial judge is bound by jury's recommended sentence. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Under Georgia law, the jury's sentencing recommendation is binding on the trial court which actually sentences the defendant. Burden v. Zant, 975 F.2d 771 (11th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 510 U.S. 132, 114 S. Ct. 654, 126 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1994).

Although a habeas corpus petitioner contended that the prosecution misled the jury into believing that the jury's role with regard to the death penalty was merely advisory, no due process violation was shown. The prosecution accurately characterized the jury's death penalty finding as a recommendation in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(c), and the jury was properly advised that the recommendation was binding on the sentencing court in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-31.

Carr v. Schofield, 364 F.3d 1246 (11th Cir. 2004).

Life sentence absent jury recommendation of death. — If a sentence of death was not recommended by the jury, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-31 required the court to sentence the defendant to life imprisonment. Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

Judge must impose lesser punishment when jury cannot agree. — Jury that convicted must also impose the sentence. Because only two sentences can be imposed, life imprisonment or death, if the convicting jury is unable to agree on which of those two sentences to impose, the trial judge must impose the lesser, life imprisonment. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976); Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

Although the jury did return a finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance, but the jury deadlocked on the question of whether the defendant should be given the death penalty, under Georgia's statutory death-penalty provisions, pretermitting any constitutional question of double jeopardy, the trial judge must impose the lesser sentence of life imprisonment. Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

Instruction as to requirements of section not impermissible expression of opinion. — There is no impermissible expression of opinion if the trial court instructs the jury that the defendant cannot be sentenced to death unless the jury finds at least one statutory aggravating circumstance to exist beyond a reasonable doubt and recommends that the death penalty be imposed. Finney v. State, 242 Ga. 582, 250 S.E.2d 388 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 916, 99 S. Ct. 2017, 60 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1979).

Evidence of parole eligibility. — Trial court did not err by refusing to allow the defendant to present evidence and arguments about the likely date of parole eligibility if the defendant was sentenced to life with the possibility of parole for the murders because such evidence and argument was generally not permitted prior to the addition of life without parole as a sentencing option. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

Retrial as to sentencing where sentence reversed for error. — A new trial on the sentence can be held before a new jury if the jury that convicted the accused also sentenced the accused to death and the sentence was reversed on appeal because of some error that infected the sentence. In such a situation, there can be a remand for a new trial as to the sentence only. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976); Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

Death sentence prohibited on retrial if first jury sentenced defendant to life imprisonment. — If the convicting jury sentences the defendant to life imprisonment, this constitutes an acquittal of the charge that the evidence supports a finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance, and in any retrial the double-jeopardy clause prohibits the defendant's being given the death sentence. Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

Life sentence not required if first jury did not reach penalty phase. — Trial court was not required to impose life imprisonment under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-31 since the first jury did not reach the penalty phase and thus was not called on to decide the defendant's sentence under the death penalty statute. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 835, 124 S. Ct. 88, 157 L. Ed. 2d 64 (2003).

Trial court did not err in giving an Allen charge to a jury considering the death penalty, overruling Legare v. State, 250 Ga. 875 (1983), because the statement that a unanimous verdict was required was technically correct, although it would be better practice to omit that phrase when giving an Allen charge in the penalty phase of a capital case. Humphreys v. State, 287 Ga. 63, 694 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 599, 178 L. Ed. 2d 438 (2010), overruled in part by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Refusal to allow defense comment on death sentence not error. — It is difficult to imagine how a court might commit reversible error by refusing to allow defense counsel to comment on a death sentence that, once the jury has rendered the jury's verdict, is mandatory. Putman v. State, 251 Ga. 605, 308 S.E.2d 145 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 954, 104 S. Ct. 2161, 80 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1984).

Death sentence upheld when each aggravating factor supported by other circumstances. — Defendant's sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor because two statutory aggravating circumstances were found; namely, the murder was committed while engaged in the capital felony of kidnapping with bodily injury and while engaged in the offense of burglary, and an insufficiency of the evidence to support one or more statutory aggravating circumstances found by the jury did not require reversal if supported by at least one. Spears v. State, 296 Ga. 598, 769 S.E.2d 337 (2015), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 8/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, an accused whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act, provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached or (2) the accused has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking prosecution after the remand." This Act became effective April 29, 2009.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 9/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in Section 8 of this Act, the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act."

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 10/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "A person may be sentenced to life without parole without the prosecutor seeking the death penalty under the laws of this state." Ga. L. 2011, p. 752, § 17(3) codified these provisions at Code Section 17-10-16.1.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(a)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that the law as set forth in Section 4 of this Act as it existed prior to April 29, 2009, shall apply to all offenses committed on and before April 29, 2009.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(b)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

17-10-32. Sentencing of person indicted for capital offense to life imprisonment or other punishment upon plea of guilty.

Any person who has been indicted for an offense punishable by death may enter a plea of guilty at any time after his indictment, and the judge of the superior court having jurisdiction may, in his discretion, sentence the person to life imprisonment or to any other punishment authorized by law for the offense named in the indictment; provided, however, that the judge must find one of the statutory aggravating circumstances provided in Code Section 17-10-30 before imposing the death penalty, except in cases of treason or aircraft hijacking.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Duty to inform as to who will impose sentence prior to entry of guilty plea. — Trial court has discretion, after accepting a guilty plea in a death penalty case, to impose sentence or to have a jury do so; however, the defendant should be informed of the trial court's decision regarding who will impose sentence before the defendant enters a guilty plea. Browner v. State, 357 Ga. 321, 357 S.E.2d 559 (1987).

Second sentence of former Code 1933, § 27-704 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-70) relates to guilty pleas upon accusations as well as after indictment. Garmon v. Johnson, 243 Ga. 855, 257 S.E.2d 276 (1979).

Judge not required to impose life sentence or less upon plea of guilty. — This section cannot be construed to mean that, upon entry of plea of guilty, the trial judge must sentence the defendant to life imprisonment or a lesser punishment. The trial judge is merely authorized, in the exercise of judicial discretion, but is not required by the provision of that section to impose such sentence. Massey v. State, 220 Ga. 883, 142 S.E.2d 832 (1965), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 36, 87 S. Ct. 241, 17 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1966).

Assertion on habeas corpus of refusal to accept guilty plea. — Defendant sentenced to death in jury trial may not assert on habeas corpus that the trial judge refused to accept the defendant's guilty plea and required the defendant to plead not guilty and stand trial by jury as the defendant's denial of a motion for new trial had been affirmed by the Supreme Court. Golden v. Balkcom, 214 Ga. 15, 102 S.E.2d 578 (1958).

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(b)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

17-10-33. Imposition of sentence of death upon judgment of death; to whom copies of sentence sent; conveying defendant to state correctional institution; expenses of transporting defendant.

Upon a judgment of death made by a judge, it shall be the duty of the judge to sentence the defendant to death and to indicate the sentence in writing, which writing shall be filed with the papers in the case against the defendant. A certified copy of the sentence shall be sent by the clerk of the court in which the sentence is pronounced to the defendant's attorney of record, to the Attorney General, and to the superintendent of the state correctional institution where the execution is to take place, not less than ten days prior to the time fixed in the sentence of the court for the execution of the defendant. In all cases it shall be the duty of the sheriff of the county in which the defendant is sentenced, together with one deputy or more if in the sheriff's judgment it is necessary, and provided that in all cases the number of guards shall be approved by the trial judge or, if the trial judge is not available, by the judge of the probate court of the county in which the defendant is sentenced, to convey the defendant to the appropriate state correctional institution, not more than 20 days nor less than two days prior to the time fixed in the judgment for the execution of the defendant, unless otherwise directed by the Governor or unless a stay of execution has been caused by an appeal, granting of a new trial, or other order of a court of competent jurisdiction. The expense for transporting the defendant to the state correctional institution for the purpose of execution of the death sentence shall be paid by the county governing authority of the county in which the defendant was convicted, out of any funds on hand in the treasury of the county.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 947, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "It is the intention of the General Assembly to provide for execution by lethal injection for persons sentenced to death after conviction of capital crimes committed on or after May 1, 2000. It is the further intention of the General Assembly that persons sentenced to death for crimes committed prior to the effective date of this Act be executed by lethal injection if the Supreme Court of the United States declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or if the Supreme Court of Georgia declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of Georgia."

This section did not violate U.S. Const., amends. 8 or 14. Mason v. State, 236 Ga. 46, 222 S.E.2d 339, cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3225, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1219 (1976).

Variance between title and subject matter of legislation. — Ga. L. 1924, p. 195 did not contain matter not expressed in its caption, in violation of Ga. Const. 1877, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. VIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III). Howell v. State, 164 Ga. 204, 138 S.E. 206, appeal dismissed, 275 U.S. 576, 48 S. Ct. 114, 72 L. Ed. 435 (1927).

Manner in which capital sentences executed is for legislative enactment. — There being no provision in the Constitution conferring upon sheriffs of counties the power to execute sentences of the courts in capital cases, the manner of execution of such sentences is for legislative enactment. Dunaway v. Gore, 164 Ga. 219, 138 S.E. 213 (1927).

In jury cases, trial judge is bound by jury's recommended sentence. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Custody when execution stayed but no new date set. — Department of Corrections (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation) has authority to accept a prisoner for whom no new execution date has been set. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-188.

O.C.G.A. §§ 42-5-50(a) and 42-5-51(b), inapplicable in death cases. — Supervening events described by former Code 1933, § 27-2514 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-33) did not include the filing of a motion for new trial, so that such nonfinality of conviction which, by the terms of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1399, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-5-50(a)) precluded state penitentiary acceptance of custody of prisoners sentenced to serve time does not in the case of prisoners sentenced to be executed, preclude acceptance of custody. That is to say, the procedure of retention of convicted prisoners in the county jails until their convictions have become final, as provided in Ga. L. 1968, p. 1399, § 1, does not apply to persons sentenced to death, because they are not "sentenced to serve time," as stated in Ga. L. 1968, p. 1399, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-5-51(b)), and therefore do not have "a sentence," in the words of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1399, § 1, and because former Code 1933, § 27-2514 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-33) specifically requires the sheriff to convey them to the penitentiary unless the Governor directs otherwise, a stay has been caused by appeal, a new trial has been granted, or a court orders otherwise. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-188.

When a person is sentenced to the punishment of death, the court shall specify the time period for the execution in the sentence. The time period for the execution fixed by the court shall be seven days in duration and shall commence at noon on a specified date and shall end at noon on a specified date. The time period shall commence not less than 20 days nor more than 60 days from the date of sentencing. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Fixing new date for unexecuted sentence. — When the day fixed by the trial court for the execution of a capital sentence has passed, and the sentence for any reason whatever has not been executed, it is the duty of the judge of the superior court in which the sentence of death was imposed, either in term or in vacation by an order as prescribed by law, to name and fix a new date for the execution of the capital sentence. Authority of court. — Courts may only exercise those powers which are expressly delegated to the courts in setting time or place for execution. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-86.

Fixing new date for execution when original date passed. — If the date for the execution of a convict in a capital case has passed for any reason, the judge has the power to set a new date for the execution of the original sentence, but the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) is not bound by further, more specific time limitations which such court might impose and the department may exercise broad discretion in establishing the specific hour of execution on the date specified. 1980 Op. 17-10-35. Review of death sentences by Supreme Court; forwarding of record and transcript; scope of review; written briefs and oral argument; similar cases to be included in decision; direct appeal to be consolidated with sentence review.

(a) Whenever the death penalty is imposed, upon the judgment becoming final in the trial court, the sentence shall be reviewed on the record by the Supreme Court of Georgia. The clerk of the trial court, within ten days after receiving the transcript, shall transmit the entire record and transcript to the Supreme Court together with a notice prepared by the clerk and a report prepared by the trial judge. The notice shall set forth the title and docket number of the case, the name of the defendant and the name and address of his attorney, a narrative statement of the judgment, the offense, and the punishment prescribed. The report shall be in the form of a standard questionnaire prepared and supplied by the Supreme Court.

(b) The Supreme Court shall consider the punishment as well as any errors enumerated by way of appeal.

(c) With regard to the sentence, the court shall determine:

(1) Whether the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor;

(2) Whether, in cases other than treason or aircraft hijacking, the evidence supports the jury's or judge's finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance as enumerated in subsection (b) of Code Section 17-10-30; and

(3) Whether the sentence of death is excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant.

(d) Both the defendant and the state shall have the right to submit briefs within the time provided by the court and to present oral argument to the court.

(e) The court shall include in its decision a reference to those similar cases which it took into consideration. In addition to its authority regarding correction of errors, the court, with regard to review of death sentences, shall be authorized to:

(1) Affirm the sentence of death; or

(2) Set the sentence aside and remand the case for resentencing by the trial judge based on the record and argument of counsel. The records of those similar cases referred to by the Supreme Court in its decision and the extracts prepared as provided for in subsection (a) of Code Section 17-10-37 shall be provided to the resentencing judge for his consideration.

(f) The sentence review shall be in addition to direct appeal, if taken, and the review and appeal shall be consolidated for consideration. The court shall render its decision on legal errors enumerated, the factual substantiation of the verdict, and the validity of the sentence.

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — This section was not unconstitutional. Young v. State, 237 Ga. 852, 230 S.E.2d 287 (1976), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1123, 106 S. Ct. 1991, 90 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1986).

This section is not subject to constitutional attack under U.S. Const., amends. 8 and 14. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

As to constitutionality, see House v. State, 232 Ga. 140, 205 S.E.2d 217 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3221, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976); Floyd v. State, 233 Ga. 280, 210 S.E.2d 810 (1974), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 949, 97 S. Ct. 2667, 53 L. Ed. 2d 266 (1977); Stephens v. State, 237 Ga. 259, 227 S.E.2d 261, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 986, 97 S. Ct. 508, 50 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1976); McMichen v. State, 265 Ga. 598, 458 S.E.2d 833 (1995).

Structure of the Georgia death penalty statute is constitutional. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Habeas corpus petitioner failed to assert in the original petition, the amended petition, or the post-hearing brief a constitutional or statutory challenge to the Supreme Court of Georgia's method of proportionality review as provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c); therefore, the petitioner's challenge was waived. Hall v. Lee, 286 Ga. 79, 684 S.E.2d 868 (2009).

Need for review by Supreme Court. — Although the defendant wrote to the trial court asking that the defendant's appeal "be stopped," the Supreme Court must review a death penalty case under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35. Patillo v. State, 258 Ga. 255, 368 S.E.2d 493, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 378, 102 L. Ed. 2d 367 (1988).

New approach in considering sufficiency sua sponte in non-death penalty cases. — Georgia Supreme Court's new approach of not automatically considering sufficiency sua sponte in non-death penalty cases was held to begin with cases docketed to the term of court that begins in December 2020, and the Court's new approach did not preclude the Court from exercising the Court's discretion to consider sufficiency sua sponte when specific circumstances warrant such review. Davenport v. State, No. S20A0035, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 479 (July 2, 2020).

Section deals with sentence review regardless of form of plea. — This section did not relate to the alternatives available to a defendant when a defendant is called upon to enter a plea but instead concerns the standard to be used by the Supreme Court in reviewing the death sentence, regardless of whether the sentence was imposed after a guilty or not guilty plea. Ross v. State, 233 Ga. 361, 211 S.E.2d 356 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976).

Review of improper argument contentions. — Supreme Court's statutory duty to ensure that the sentence of death has not been imposed due to passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factor, a duty applicable only in the review of cases in which the death sentence has been imposed, is the basis for the court's decision to expressly limit to death penalty cases the exception to the appellate practice of declining to review improper argument contentions which were not brought to the attention of the trial court. Metts v. State, 270 Ga. 481, 511 S.E.2d 508 (1999).

Under the review required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1) in death penalty cases, even if improper arguments have not been timely objected to at trial, reversal is required if there was a reasonable probability that the improper arguments changed the jury's exercise of discretion in choosing between life imprisonment or death. Ford v. Tate, 307 Ga. 383, 835 S.E.2d 198 (2019).

Court may examine other convictions of defendant. — Nothing in this section foreclosed the Supreme Court during the course of its independent review from examining nonappealed cases and cases in which the defendant pled guilty to a lesser offense. Ross v. State, 233 Ga. 361, 211 S.E.2d 356 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976).

Questionnaire to be completed by trial judge. — Questionnaire supplied by Supreme Court to superior court judges under this section, which called for subjective evaluation of the defendant's mental and physical state, and of the evidence was required to be completed by the trial court judge, not by the defense attorney. Greene v. State, 240 Ga. 804, 242 S.E.2d 587 (1978).

Counsel's duty to client not relieved by review under section. — Duty of the Supreme Court to review the record to determine whether the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor in no way relieves counsel of diligence on behalf of a client. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977), modified on other grounds, 243 Ga. 244, 253 S.E.2d 707 (1979).

Duty of state to provide indigents access to appellate process. — Duty of the state is not to duplicate the legal arsenal that may be privately retained by a criminal defendant in a continuing effort to reverse the defendant's conviction, but only to assure the indigent defendant an adequate opportunity to present the defendant's claims fairly in the context of the state's appellate process. Ross v. State, 233 Ga. 361, 211 S.E.2d 356 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976).

Failure to transcribe closing arguments not error. — Trial court's failure to transcribe the closing arguments at a sentencing hearing does not prevent reviewing courts from examining the imposition of a death sentence with full disclosure of the basis for the sentence when the record containing the transcript of the imposition of sentence does not refer to any undisclosed aspect of the proceeding on which the judge relied in imposing sentence. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir.), supplemented by 722 F.2d 629 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1084, 104 S. Ct. 1456, 79 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1984).

Review of state court's proportionality review by federal habeas court. — Federal habeas court should not undertake a review of the state Supreme Court's proportionality review and, in effect, "get out the record" to see if the state court's findings of fact, their conclusion based on a review of similar cases, was supported by the "evidence" in similar cases. Its review remains confined to whether the state sentencing procedure both on its face and as applied violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511 (11th Cir.), supplemented by 722 F.2d 629 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1084, 104 S. Ct. 1456, 79 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1984).

Five aggravators supported death sentence for malice murder. — Death sentence based on O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2), (b)(4), (b)(7), and O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1), (c)(3) aggravators for malice murder was supported by sufficient evidence, was not the result of ineffective counsel or an improperly selected jury, and was not disproportionate to other depraved, wantonly vile, and tortuous murders. Defendant's counsel's withholding of alleged mitigating evidence (by presenting the evidence to the trial court under seal) so that the state could not use that evidence against the defendant in the event of a new trial could not be used to assess whether counsel was ineffective for withholding the evidence. Franks v. State, 278 Ga. 246, 599 S.E.2d 134 (2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 1058, 125 S. Ct. 870, 160 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2005).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to death for murder because death was not excessive or disproportionate punishment within the meaning of Georgia law and was not unconstitutional; the sentence was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, the evidence presented at the defendant's sentencing trial was clearly sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of each of the statutory aggravating circumstances found in the defendant's case, the defendant's crimes could be called "premeditated" because the defendant already knew what the defendant was going to do when the defendant took the victim away from home. Loyd v. State, 288 Ga. 481, 705 S.E.2d 616, cert. dismissed, 565 U.S. 971, 132 S. Ct. 474, 181 L. Ed. 2d 309 (U.S. 2011).

Death sentence was supported by the jury's finding beyond a reasonable doubt that the murders were committed during a burglary and were outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that they involved torture, depravity of mind, and an aggravated battery against the victims. Rice v. State, 292 Ga. 191, 733 S.E.2d 755 (2012), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Defendant's sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor because two statutory aggravating circumstances were found; namely, the murder was committed while engaged in the capital felony of kidnapping with bodily injury and while engaged in the offense of burglary, and an insufficiency of the evidence to support one or more statutory aggravating circumstances found by the jury did not require reversal if supported by at least one. Spears v. State, 296 Ga. 598, 769 S.E.2d 337 (2015), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Presumption of correctness denied state court comment. — State trial court's comment appearing in a standard post-conviction report that the defendant's nephew, represented by the same counsel as the defendant, testified against the defendant under a grant of immunity was not entitled to a presumption of correctness because this material fact was not adequately developed before the trial court. Burden v. Zant, 975 F.2d 771 (11th Cir. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 510 U.S. 132, 114 S. Ct. 654, 126 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1994).

Waiver of appeal. — Criminal defendant may waive the defendant's statutory right to appeal a conviction in return for the state's waiver of the right to seek the death penalty. Thomas v. State, 260 Ga. 262, 392 S.E.2d 520 (1990).

Absence of a notice of appeal was not fatal to the defendant's appeal in a case involving imposition of the death penalty. Lance v. State, 275 Ga. 11, 560 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1050, 123 S. Ct. 620, 154 L. Ed. 2d 525 (2002), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Verdict should have been returned in conjunctive but sentence appropriate. — Because the jury's recommendation of death for the defendant's murder conviction was sufficiently based on other valid statutory aggravating factors, the fact that the jury returned a disjunctive finding of torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim, whereas this finding should have been returned in the conjunctive to ensure unanimity concerning the necessary elements of the circumstances under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7), no reversal was required. Rivera v. State, 282 Ga. 355, 647 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

Factors Reviewed by Court

1. Passion, Prejudice, or Other Arbitrary Factor

Evidence of plea bargain not admissible. — Testimony of a former district attorney in rebuttal to the defendant's evidence presented in mitigation at the sentencing phase of the defendant's trial, i.e., that the defendant offered to plead guilty to all charges in exchange for the state's agreement not to seek the death penalty, was not inflammatory or highly prejudicial requiring reversal of the sentence; however, in the future, offers by the defendants to plead guilty and testimony of prosecutors regarding such offers are no longer admissible. Mobley v. State, 265 Ga. 292, 455 S.E.2d 61 (1995).

Argument of state for death penalty if plausible reasons offered. — Arguments of the prosecutor during the sentencing phase of a murder trial does not influence the jury to impose the death sentence through passion and prejudice, as those terms were used in this section, if the prosecutor argues for the death penalty and offers plausible reasons for the prosecutor's position. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Effect of improper argument if evidence overwhelming. — If the evidence in a murder and rape trial shows that the defendant raped a 13-year-old girl in a vacant house and then murdered her by inflicting multiple stab wounds to her face, chest, and abdomen, the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, even though the prosecuting attorney, in closing argument, paraphrased to the jury sentiments on imposition of the death penalty and attributed these sentiments to a noted justice as the evidence against the defendant is so overwhelming. Bowen v. State, 244 Ga. 495, 260 S.E.2d 855 (1979).

Reading by state of dicta from other cases. — Prosecutor may read dicta from other cases when used not for the purpose of persuading the jury to impose the death penalty, but when addressing the court, though it is preferable that such arguments are conducted outside of the jury's presence. Drake v. State, 241 Ga. 583, 247 S.E.2d 57 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 928, 99 S. Ct. 1265, 59 L. Ed. 2d 485 (1979).

Implication by state that Georgia Supreme Court would uphold death penalty. — Practice of influencing a jury to impose the death penalty by implying that justices of the Georgia Supreme Court would approve such a sentence is error, though sometimes harmless, under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Zant v. Campbell, 245 Ga. 368, 265 S.E.2d 22, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 891, 101 S. Ct. 252, 66 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1980).

Remark by prosecution that sentence reviewable and may be set aside. — It is reversible error for the prosecutor to mention to the jury in the prosecutor's arguments during the death penalty phase that any sentence of death will be reviewed by the trial judge and the Supreme Court, and that the sentence can be set aside. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977).

Prosecutor comments that jury can pass on sentencing responsibility. — Jury is given the heavy burden of making the decision of whether the defendant will live or die. Comments about appellate safeguards on the death penalty suggest to the jury that the jury can pass the responsibility for the death sentence on to the Supreme Court. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 177, 62 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979).

Possibility of jury imposing more severe punishment. — If one of the jury's functions is to impose punishment for crime, a reference by the prosecutor to the defendant's right to appeal is more likely to be considered reversible error if a death penalty is subsequently imposed, for the reason that in the weighing of imponderables it cannot be concluded that the jury was not influenced by such statements to impose more severe punishment than their unbiased judgment would have given. Prevatte v. State, 233 Ga. 929, 214 S.E.2d 365 (1975).

Jury exposed to remarks about appellate review. — If the jury is exposed to comments about appellate review of the death penalty, the trial court should explain to the jury that it is the responsibility of each juror to decide whether the defendant will be executed, and that the jury cannot pass that responsibility on to anyone else. The jury should be told to decide on the penalty as if there was no possibility of any review of the sentence. Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37 (1977), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 177, 62 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1979).

Court must consider unfavorable publicity even if defendant did not raise it. — Even if a defendant did not make any motion for a continuance or change of venue at the trial because of unfavorable publicity, this matter still must be considered pursuant to the court's duty in a death case to consider the punishment as well as any errors enumerated by way of appeal. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977), modified on other grounds, 243 Ga. 244, 253 S.E.2d 707 (1979).

Video tape of confession. — Since the part of the video taped confession in which the defendant was seen handcuffed was only a brief part of the tape, and the tape was only a brief part of the trial, and the jury had the opportunity to observe the defendant at trial, the video tape recording did not create passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factor such as would influence the jury to impose the penalty of death. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Handcuffing of defendant in view of jury. — If a suspect was being transported away from the jail where the suspect was being held, it was natural for the police to have the suspect handcuffed for security reasons and the jury would not have been shocked to see it, and it was not error to deny a motion for mistrial. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Issue of mental retardation. — Procedure requiring the defendant to prove the defendant's mental retardation by a preponderance of the evidence in a jury trial was not unconstitutional merely because it was accomplished by appellate judges rather than a jury. Morrison v. State, 276 Ga. 829, 583 S.E.2d 873 (2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 940, 124 S. Ct. 1662, 158 L. Ed. 2d 363 (2004), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Showing jury "no-billed" and inapplicable counts. — When the state's exhibit included a copy of a prior six-count indictment, the first five counts charging four defendants, including the present defendant, with three counts of armed robbery, one count of receiving stolen property, a .45 pistol, and one count of possession of LSD, and the last count charging one of the present defendant's codefendants with being a repeat offender, and the exhibit showed on its face that the grand jury no-billed the possession of LSD count (Count 5), Counts 5 and 6 should have been deleted, but absent a proper objection, there was no reversible error. Showing the jury one count plainly marked "no-billed" and another count not even charging the present defendant with a crime did not result in a death sentence imposed as the result of passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factor. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 872, 108 S. Ct. 203, 98 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1987), 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

Charge that jury not to base verdict on sympathy for defendant. — It was reversible error for the trial court to charge the jury that the jury was not to base the jury's verdict on sympathy for the defendant. Legare v. State, 250 Ga. 875, 302 S.E.2d 351 (1983), overruled in part, Humphreys v. State, No. 2010 Ga. LEXIS 227, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 227 (Ga. 2010).

Prosecutorial argument not improper. — Prosecutor's closing argument at the sentencing phase that if the jury returned a verdict recommending death, the jury would not be responsible for the defendant's execution did not introduce "passion, prejudice or any other arbitrary factor," nor did the argument tend to diminish the jury's sense of responsibility or deny the defendant fundamental fairness. Hance v. State, 254 Ga. 575, 332 S.E.2d 287, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1038, 106 S. Ct. 606, 88 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1985).

When the prosecutor in closing argument in the guilt/innocence phase referred to a Bible verse that "the wicked flee when no man pursueth," asked the jurors not to decide to "let the Lord handle it," and stated that the jury might be "the Lord's fisherman to handle" the defendant's accountability, these arguments did not result in the imposition of the death penalty through the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor; the arguments simply urged the jury to accept the jury's legal duty to pass judgment rather than abdicating that role. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 774, 653 S.E.2d 439 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 481, 172 L.Ed.2d 344 (2008), overruled on other grounds, No. S10P1859, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 267 (Ga. 2011).

No reasonable probability prosecutor's remarks affected jury's discretion in determining sentence. — Prosecutor's remark that the defendant's conviction "would say enough to this dual killer," in conjunction with the state's demonstrative aid indicating that the defendant was a "mass killer," did not constitute an improper future dangerousness argument at the guilt/innocence phase of the trial because the remark was not an argument that the defendant posed a threat of future dangerousness if not found guilty but was a reasonable inference from the evidence; even assuming that the prosecutor's comment was improper, there is no reasonable probability that it affected the jury's exercise of discretion in determining the defendant's death sentence. Arrington v. State, 286 Ga. 335, 687 S.E.2d 438 (2009), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 112, 178 L. Ed. 2d 69 (U.S. 2010).

Testimony that the defendant spoke of leaving no witnesses, following a prior armed robbery, if the defendant ever committed another such robbery, added nothing inflammatory to a record that included testimony from a codefendant that, on the night of the armed robbery in question, the defendant stated that the defendant did not intend to leave any witnesses. Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 977, 104 S. Ct. 414, 78 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1983).

Victim impact evidence not improper. — Testimony of the spouse of a murder victim, who sobbed while testifying, was not improper because the passion shown was not the product of any arbitrary factor but was the direct result of the defendant's own actions. Jones v. State, 267 Ga. 592, 481 S.E.2d 821, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 953, 118 S. Ct. 376, 139 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1997).

Crying by jurors during sentencing does not indicate that the death penalty was imposed under the influence of passion or prejudice. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Closing arguments. — Review by the Supreme Court under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35 includes review of closing arguments. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661 (2007).

Death penalty need not be reversed simply because some portion of the closing argument might have been subject to some objection never made. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661 (2007).

References to religion. — Defendant's right to due process as secured by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35, the Georgia Constitution, and the Constitution of the United States was abridged when the trial court allowed the inappropriate arguments from the Bible over objection. Carruthers v. State, 272 Ga. 306, 528 S.E.2d 217, cert. denied, 531 U.S. 934, 121 S. Ct. 321, 148 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863 (2008).

Defendant's death sentence was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1) and was not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in other similar cases, considering both the crimes and the defendant under § 17-10-35(c)(3) since the defendant: (1) planned the crimes and was armed with a gun and handcuffs; (2) broke into the defendant's in-laws' house after severing their phone line; (3) shot and killed the defendant's father-in-law and wounded the defendant's mother-in-law while they lay in bed; (4) handcuffed the defendant's bleeding mother-in-law to her nine-year-old son and left them tethered to a bed rail in a room with her dead husband and the defendant's two-year-old son; and (5) abducted the defendant's estranged wife and her 17-year-old sister to a mobile home where the defendant made them take showers while the defendant watched, and then raped them both. Sallie v. State, 276 Ga. 506, 578 S.E.2d 444, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 902, 124 S. Ct. 251, 157 L. Ed. 2d 185 (2003).

Death sentence upheld. — Defendant's death sentence for malice murder was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor and the evidence was clearly sufficient to authorize the jury to find the statutory aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Death sentence for the killing of a police officer in the performance of the officer's duties was not disproportionate since the death sentence was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, and the evidence was sufficient to authorize the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt three statutory aggravating circumstances that supported the death sentence for the murder. Brannan v. State, 275 Ga. 70, 561 S.E.2d 414, cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1021, 123 S. Ct. 541, 154 L. Ed. 2d 429 (2002).

2. Aggravating Circumstances

Failure of one aggravating circumstance does not invalidate others. — If two or more statutory aggravating circumstances are found by the jury, the failure of one circumstance, or more, does not taint the proceedings so as to invalidate the other aggravating circumstance found and the sentence of death based thereon. Burger v. State, 245 Ga. 458, 265 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 988, 100 S. Ct. 2975, 64 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1980).

The O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(10) statutory aggravating circumstance found as to each of two murder victims was not supported by the evidence based on the state's argument that killing a witness to a crime was a means of avoiding, interfering with, or preventing lawful arrest, and that once a defendant obtained the victims' ATM cards and PINs, the defendant murdered the victims because the defendant knew that the defendant would be apprehended if the victims were left alive. However, the invalidation of this statutory aggravating circumstance did not affect the death sentences imposed. Humphreys v. State, 287 Ga. 63, 694 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 599, 178 L. Ed. 2d 438 (2010), overruled in part by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Improper to use crimes as evidence in aggravation of each other. — If armed robberies are held to be aggravating circumstances authorizing death penalties as to murders, the murders cannot then be used in aggravation of the armed robberies. Gregg v. State, 233 Ga. 117, 210 S.E.2d 659 (1974), aff'd, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Although under the test provided for comparison by subsection (c)(3) of this section, two sentences of death for murder and rape are not excessive or disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases, the actual imposition of the two death sentences on the basis of mutually aggravating circumstances cannot be upheld. If the rape offense serves as the aggravating circumstance authorizing the death penalties as to the murder, the murder cannot then be used in aggravation of the rape. Gibson v. State, 236 Ga. 874, 226 S.E.2d 63, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 986, 97 S. Ct. 507, 50 L. Ed. 2d 598 (1976).

Death can be imposed if sentences each supported by other circumstances. — Imposition of two death sentences on the basis of mutually aggravating circumstances cannot be upheld. However, if the death sentences are legally and factually supported by additional aggravating circumstances, no violation is present. Potts v. State, 241 Ga. 67, 243 S.E.2d 510 (1978), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1068, 106 S. Ct. 1386, 89 L. Ed. 2d 610 (1986), 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

Death penalty for kidnapping. — Death penalty for kidnapping with bodily injury is not unconstitutional if the victim is killed. Potts v. State, 241 Ga. 67, 243 S.E.2d 510 (1978), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1068, 106 S. Ct. 1386, 89 L. Ed. 2d 610 (1986), 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

Death sentence held not disproportionate or excessive. — Considering both defendant and the clearly egregious facts of the torture and double murder case, the defendant's death sentences were not excessive or disproportionate punishment as compared to the penalty imposed in similar cases. Sealey v. State, 277 Ga. 617, 593 S.E.2d 335 (2004), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Failure to adequately charge on mitigating circumstances. — If the court errs in failing to adequately charge on mitigating circumstances and in failing to make clear to the jury that the jury could recommend a life sentence even though the jury found a statutory aggravating circumstance, the sentences of death for murder must be set aside, and a new trial allowed on the issue of punishment. Holton v. State, 243 Ga. 312, 253 S.E.2d 736, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 925, 100 S. Ct. 263, 62 L. Ed. 2d 181 (1979).

Consideration of defendant's prior record. — Defendant's prior record is a factor properly taken into consideration by juries. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Statutory aggravating circumstances found by jury supported by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Because the defendant admitted that, while the children were sleeping and to scare a girlfriend, the defendant used a cigarette lighter to set fire to the bedding on the corner of the defendant's son's bed, causing a fire in a trailer that killed the son and two daughters, the evidence was sufficient to enable a rational trier of fact to find that the defendant was, beyond a reasonable doubt, guilty of three counts of malice murder, three counts of felony murder, and two counts of arson in the first degree; thus, the evidence was sufficient to authorize the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of statutory aggravating circumstances that support death sentences for the malice murders under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(2). Riley v. State, 278 Ga. 677, 604 S.E.2d 488 (2004).

Because the evidence showed that the defendant was the gunman and apparent leader in the carjacking, kidnapping, and execution-style murder of one victim and the attempted execution-style murder of a second victim, the evidence was sufficient to enable the jury to find proof beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt of malice murder, felony murder, aggravated battery, aggravated assault, false imprisonment, theft by taking, possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon and to authorize the jury to find three statutory aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

Evidence was sufficient under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(2) to find the statutory aggravating circumstances in order to impose the death sentence on the defendant after finding that the defendant committed, inter alia, malice murder, and the jury found that the offense was committed by a person with a prior record of conviction for a capital felony and that the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of another capital felony, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(1), (3), because the defendant stole a car, robbed a bank at gunpoint, shot a driver while trying to escape, and eventually surrendered. Nance v. State, 280 Ga. 125, 623 S.E.2d 470 (2005).

Evidence, including testimony by a co-defendant and eyewitness testimony by the victim's spouse, was sufficient to support a finding of the aggravating circumstances that the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in an armed robbery, that the murder was committed for the purpose of receiving money or a thing of monetary value, and that the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that the murder involved depravity of mind. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 774, 653 S.E.2d 439 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 481, 172 L.Ed.2d 344 (2008), overruled on other grounds, No. S10P1859, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 267 (Ga. 2011).

Evidence adduced at trial was sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of statutory aggravating circumstances because the jury found the existence of the following statutory aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt; the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of the capital felony of armed robbery, and the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that the murder involved depravity of mind: (1) the defendant initially attacked the victim, who was disabled, in the confined area of a bathroom, where the defendant struck the victim multiple times shortly after the victim emerged from the shower; (2) the defendant continued the attack on the victim even as the victim fell to the floor; (3) the evidence showed that the defendant struck the victim in the head with a hammer and a metal stool at least 12 to 14 times; and (4) the defendant acted for the purpose of obtaining money the victim had just received from cashing the victim's disability check. Arrington v. State, 286 Ga. 335, 687 S.E.2d 438 (2009), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 112, 178 L. Ed. 2d 69 (U.S. 2010).

Death penalty warranted for murder of peace officer by person in custody. — Death penalty was warranted after the jury found the following statutory aggravating circumstances to exist beyond a reasonable doubt: (1) the offense of murder was committed against a peace officer while engaged in the performance of the officer's official duties; and (2) the offense of murder was committed by a person in the lawful custody of a peace officer. Wallace v. State, 248 Ga. 255, 282 S.E.2d 325 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 927, 102 S. Ct. 1291, 71 L. Ed. 2d 471 (1982).

Evidence supported Supreme Court's conclusions concerning aggravating circumstance. See Morgan v. Zant, 582 F. Supp. 1026 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 743 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1984), overruled on other grounds, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 93 L. Ed. 2d 371, 479 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 93 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986), 486 U.S. 1009, 108 S. Ct. 1739, 100 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1988).

Evidence supported findings of aggravated circumstances. — See Patillo v. State, 258 Ga. 255, 368 S.E.2d 493, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 378, 102 L. Ed. 2d 367 (1988); Holiday v. Evidence was sufficient to enable the jury to find the existence of the following statutory aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(2): (1) the offense of murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of a burglary; and (2) the offense of murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in the commission of the kidnappings with bodily injury of the murder victim's two daughters. Sallie v. State, 276 Ga. 506, 578 S.E.2d 444, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 902, 124 S. Ct. 251, 157 L. Ed. 2d 185 (2003).

Defendant was properly sentenced to death for murder and arson in the first degree because the evidence adduced at trial was sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of the statutory aggravating circumstances found in the case; the death sentences were not disproportionate punishment within the meaning of Georgia law. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

3. Excessive or Disproportionate Sentences

Whether sentence is excessive or disproportionate not a jury question. — Decision whether the sentence of death is excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases is not one to be made as such by the jury. Blake v. State, 239 Ga. 292, 236 S.E.2d 637, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 960, 98 S. Ct. 492, 54 L. Ed. 2d 320 (1977).

Whether sentence is one of cruel and unusual punishment is for court to decide. Blake v. State, 239 Ga. 292, 236 S.E.2d 637, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 960, 98 S. Ct. 492, 54 L. Ed. 2d 320 (1977).

Due process does not require jury determination of the excessive or disproportionate penalty question. Blake v. State, 239 Ga. 292, 236 S.E.2d 637, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 960, 98 S. Ct. 492, 54 L. Ed. 2d 320 (1977).

If past juries have imposed life sentence, death sentence should be set aside. — If prior cases indicate that the past practice among juries faced with similar factual situations to that being reviewed and like aggravating circumstances has been to impose only the sentence of life imprisonment for an offense, rather than death, the Supreme Court has no alternative, under the language of this section, except to set aside the sentence of death. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

Sentence "substantially out of line." — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(3), the appellate court will set aside a sentence of death that is "substantially out of line" with sentences imposed for similar crimes, focusing on how prior sentencers have responded to acts similar to those committed by the defendant whose case is being reviewed; because the jury in the defendant's first trial never considered what sentence should be imposed, the jury's actions in the first trial were not considered in determining whether the defendant's current death sentence was disproportionate to sentences for other similar crimes involving a similar defendant. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 835, 124 S. Ct. 88, 157 L. Ed. 2d 64 (2003).

Court need not consider decisions if life sentences imposed. — Proportionality review conducted by the Georgia Supreme Court was not constitutionally defective because it allegedly did not consider those appellate decisions in which life sentences were imposed. Cape v. Francis, 741 F.2d 1287 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 281, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1985).

When reaction is substantially out of line with reactions of prior sentences, then the Supreme Court must set aside the death penalty as excessive. Ross v. State, 233 Ga. 361, 211 S.E.2d 356 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976).

Different sentences for codefendants. — As to propriety of death sentence if not imposed upon all participants in same transaction, see Hall v. State, 241 Ga. 252, 244 S.E.2d 833 (1978).

There is no simplistic rule that a codefendant may not be sentenced to death when another defendant receives a lesser sentence. McClesky v. State, 245 Ga. 108, 263 S.E.2d 146 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 891, 101 S. Ct. 253, 66 L. Ed. 2d 119 (1980).

In view of the extent of the defendant's participation in a homicide, and the defendant's culpability, the defendant's death sentence was not disproportionate to the life sentence that a codefendant received only because the state didn't have as strong a case against the codefendant as the state did against the defendant. Beck v. State, 255 Ga. 483, 340 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 242, 93 L. Ed. 2d 167 (1986), 495 U.S. 940, 110 S. Ct. 2194, 109 L. Ed. 2d 521 (1990).

Given the defendant's degree of participation in the crimes and the defendant's apparent lack of remorse, a death sentence was not disproportionate to the life sentence of the codefendant. Carr v. State, 267 Ga. 547, 480 S.E.2d 583, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 921, 118 S. Ct. 313, 139 L. Ed. 2d 242 (1997).

Defendant's death sentence was not impermissibly disproportionate to the sentence of a coindictee as the coindictee obeyed the defendant out of fear of what the defendant would do to the coindictee and did not participate in finding out where the victim lived, in forcing the victim into the car, in removing the victim from the car, or in shooting the victim, nor was the coindictee present when the victim was shot; the defendant was the prime mover in the planning and execution of the victim's murder and then sought to conceal the defendant's part in the crime, and the fact that an accomplice had not been tried and might not be sentenced to death did not make the defendant's death sentence disproportionate. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Life sentence changed to death sentence upon retrial. — If the same defendant was tried previously on the same charges and the jury imposed a life sentence, the death sentence in the case under review was obviously disproportionate to the life sentence previously imposed against the same defendant in the same case. Ward v. State, 239 Ga. 205, 236 S.E.2d 365 (1977).

In a capital case, if a defendant is sentenced to life on the first trial and later retried, a death sentence cannot be imposed at the conclusion of the second trial. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Death penalty for armed robbery is excessive or disproportionate. — Under the test provided by paragraph (c)(3) of this section, a death sentence imposed for armed robbery must be considered to be excessive or disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases. Gregg v. State, 233 Ga. 117, 210 S.E.2d 659 (1974), aff'd, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976); Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3223, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976).

If the Supreme Court has previously reviewed a death sentence on direct appeal in order to determine whether the sentence was excessive or disproportionate to the sentences imposed in similar cases, it will decline to take it up again in a habeas corpus appeal. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475 (1984).

Role of federal courts. — It is not the role of the federal courts to dictate to the state courts the method of conducting a proportionality review in a death penalty case so long as the state supreme court's review and result do not rise to the level of unconstitutional action. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1984).

Failure to challenge sentencing report. — Since proportionality reviews are not required by the constitution in death penalty cases, it is difficult to see actual and substantial prejudice caused by counsel's failure to review and correct mistakes in the trial judge's post-trial sentencing report, even if such failure would constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338 (N.D. Ga. 1984), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. McCleskey v. Kemp, 753 F.2d 877 (11th Cir. 1985), aff'd, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1987), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1282, 112 S. Ct. 38, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1118 (1991).

Death sentences upheld. — Sentences of death imposed for the murder of three people unknown to the defendant, including two children, one of whom was sexually assaulted, were neither excessive nor disproportionate. Rivers v. State, 250 Ga. 303, 298 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

Sentence of death imposed in a murder for hire case was not excessive or disproportionate to sentences imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant, since, although the defendants who were hired to commit murder have been given life sentences, other cases show that juries find the death penalty to be appropriate punishment in contract murder cases. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Sentence of death for a murder committed during an armed robbery was not excessive or disproportionate to sentences imposed in similar cases when the defendant stated before the robbery began that the defendant intended to leave no witnesses and the defendant thereafter shot unresisting, unarmed victims and, in addition, the defendant had been convicted previously of armed robbery. Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 977, 104 S. Ct. 414, 78 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1983).

Review of cases shows that juries find the death penalty to be appropriate when an adult defendant commits murder during the commission of an armed robbery. Roberts v. State, 252 Ga. 227, 314 S.E.2d 83, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 228, 83 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1984).

Death penalty was held appropriate punishment since the defendant committed murder during the armed robbery. Ingram v. State, 253 Ga. 622, 323 S.E.2d 801 (1984), cert. denied, 473 U.S. 911, 105 S. Ct. 3538, 87 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1985).

Defendant's sentence of death was not disproportionate to the life sentence given a codefendant as the defendant admitted striking the victim with a baseball bat, taking a gun offered by a codefendant and shooting the victim in the head, assisting in dismembering and burying the body, and concealing the crime. Hittson v. State, 264 Ga. 682, 449 S.E.2d 586 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1129, 115 S. Ct. 2005, 131 L. Ed. 2d 1005 (1995).

Death sentence was not imposed as the result of impermissible passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, and it was not disproportionate, where the defendant shot and killed a police officer during the performance of the officer's official duties and in order to avoid arrest. Henry v. State, 269 Ga. 851, 507 S.E.2d 419 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798 (1999).

Upon examination of the entire trial record, the Georgia Supreme Court concluded that the absence of the prosecuting attorney's violation of the Golden Rule, which was a marginal one whose impropriety was not obvious from prior case law, would not in reasonable probability have changed the jury's sentencing verdict. Spears v. State, 296 Ga. 598, 769 S.E.2d 337 (2015), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Death sentences imposed were not disproportionate punishment within the meaning of Georgia law. Hulett v. State, 296 Ga. 49, 766 S.E.2d 1 (2014), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 2358, 192 L. Ed. 2d 153 (U.S. 2015).

Death sentence proper. — See Pye v. State, 269 Ga. 779, 505 S.E.2d 4 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1767, 143 L. Ed. 2d 797 (1999); Perkins v. State, 269 Ga. 791, 505 S.E.2d 16 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798 (1999).

Death sentence imposed on the defendant was not the result of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1), nor was the death sentence excessive or disproportionate under § 17-10-35(c)(3); considering the evidence that the defendant choked and stabbed four female victims to death, that the defendant attempted to kill four other female victims, and that the murder in the instant case involved the O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) aggravating factor relating to the fact that the murder was vile and involved a kidnapping, the sentence was proportional to similar cases and was not the result of any arbitrary factor. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

In a capital murder case, because the evidence showed that the defendant carefully planned the crime of robbing an armored truck and killed a guard without mercy and for monetary gain, the death sentence imposed against the defendant for the murder in the case was neither excessive nor disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases in the State of Georgia and was upheld. Tollette v. State, 280 Ga. 100, 621 S.E.2d 742 (2005).

Defendant's death sentence for the killing of a driver while the defendant was trying to escape after robbing a bank was not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases based on the Georgia Supreme Court's proportionality review under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(1); the defendant had previously robbed two banks and had threatened to kill bank employees, had other convictions, and similar cases supported imposition of the death penalty in the defendant's murder conviction. Nance v. State, 280 Ga. 125, 623 S.E.2d 470 (2005).

Attack on the death sentence citing numerous other murder cases where the defendant did not receive a death sentence was unsuccessful because the state supreme court, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(3), had already determined that the inmate's death sentence was not excessive or disproportionate to penalties imposed in similar cases, and the federal habeas court deferred to that factual determination because the inmate had not put forth clear and convincing evidence to show the state court was incorrect. Crowe v. Terry, 426 F. Supp. 2d 1310 (N.D. Ga. 2005).

Defendant's death sentence for malice murder was affirmed as the sentence was neither excessive nor disproportionate to the penalties imposed in similar cases in Georgia as the defendant murdered at least four persons and attempted or planned to murder several other people; the defendant's death sentence was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor. Williams v. State, 281 Ga. 87, 635 S.E.2d 146 (2006), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1004, 128 S. Ct. 2046, 170 L. Ed. 2d 793 (2008).

Death sentence for malice murder was not disproportionate or excessive where although a codefendant had been sentenced only to life, the evidence showed that the defendant was the more culpable party, and the codefendant was mentally retarded; furthermore, other cases cited by the court involved a deliberate plan to kill and killing for the purpose of receiving something of monetary value. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 774, 653 S.E.2d 439 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 481, 172 L.Ed.2d 344 (2008), overruled on other grounds, No. S10P1859, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 267 (Ga. 2011).

Considering the two murders committed by the defendant, the Supreme Court of Georgia determined that the sentences of death were not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases as the defendant murdered a parent and a young child for the purpose of robbing a home; the defendant made the child turn the power back on so that the defendant could see the parent since the parent was still indicating signs of life and the defendant wanted to see to complete the murder; the defendant boasted of raping the child before cutting the child's throat; and, knowing that the child was still alive, the defendant set the house on fire, leaving the pair to burn. O'Kelley v. State, 284 Ga. 758, 670 S.E.2d 388 (2008).

Following the defendant's convictions of malice murder, aggravated sodomy, kidnapping with bodily injury, and aggravated assault after the defendant grabbed a woman who was riding a bike, dragged her to a concealed area, and sexually assaulted, beat, stomped, and killed her, the jury's imposition of a death sentence was not disproportionate punishment in light of the shocking details of the murder and in light of the defendant's long history of criminal acts against numerous women, including rape, several attempted rapes, and sexually-deviant behavior directed toward women including a 14-year-old female relative. Ledford v. State, 289 Ga. 70, 709 S.E.2d 239, cert. denied, 565 U.S. 1017, 132 S. Ct. 556, 181 L. Ed. 2d 401 (2011), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 394 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Death penalty is appropriate punishment after a defendant is found to have been the actual perpetrator of, or active participant in, double murders committed upon victims who are unrelated to the defendant, such as the robbery and murder of vacationing couples asleep in their cars. Putman v. State, 251 Ga. 605, 308 S.E.2d 145 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 954, 104 S. Ct. 2161, 80 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1984).

Death sentence was not disproportionate under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35(c)(3) since the defendant: (1) used the mother's relationship with a sick, elderly individual to gain access to the individual's house and belongings, steal the individual's checkbook, and forge the individual's checks; (2) plotted the victim's murder when the victim threatened to report the crime; (3) ambushed the victim in the victim's driveway, shot and wounded the victim, chased the victim, knocked the victim down, and shot the victim three more times while standing over the victim; (4) dragged the victim into the bushes, beat, and robbed the victim; and (5) had been convicted of prior crimes involving a calculated, planned murder and armed robbery, an aggravated battery to the victim before death, or depravity of mind. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 835, 124 S. Ct. 88, 157 L. Ed. 2d 64 (2003).

Seriousness of prior record and of instant offense. — Sentence of death was not excessive or disproportionate to sentences imposed in similar cases since the defendant had an extensive, serious prior record and committed an armed robbery during the course of which the defendant killed one person, seriously wounded another, shot another, and kidnapped still another. Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1132, 105 S. Ct. 816, 83 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1985).

Excessiveness not shown. — Sentence of death was not excessive or disproportionate punishment for a vicious and brutal murder committed by a defendant with a prior conviction of a capital felony. Death sentence upon conviction on three counts of murder was neither excessive nor disproportionate to sentences imposed in similar cases as the jury found that each offense was outrageously and wantonly vile, horrible and inhuman in that the offense involved torture and an aggravated battery to the victim. 17-10-35.1. Review of pretrial proceedings when death penalty is sought; reports investigating reversible error; transmittal of reports to Supreme Court; orders regarding review; Attorney General assistance; res judicata; applicability; waiver of rights.

(a) In cases in which the death penalty is sought, there may be a review of all pretrial proceedings by the Supreme Court upon a determination by the trial judge under Code Section 17-10-35.2 that such review is appropriate. The review shall be initiated by the trial judge's filing in the office of the clerk of superior court and delivering to the parties a report certifying that all pretrial proceedings in the case have been completed and that the case stands ready for trial. Within ten days after the filing of the report or the receipt of transcripts of the proceedings, whichever is later, the prosecutor and the defendant may each file with the clerk of superior court and serve upon the opposing party a report identifying all areas of the pretrial proceedings with respect to which reversible error may arguably have occurred. Either party may consolidate with such report an application for appeal with respect to any order, decision, or judgment entered in the case. Any such application for appeal shall be in the form otherwise appropriate under subsection (b) of Code Section 5-6-34, but:

(1) Any such application for appeal shall be filed with the clerk of superior court rather than the clerk of the Supreme Court;

(2) The opposing party shall not be required or permitted to respond to such an application for appeal; and

(3) No certificate of immediate review shall be required for the filing of such application for appeal.

(b) The reports of the trial judge, prosecutor, and defendant under subsection (a) of this Code section shall be in the form of standard questionnaires prepared and supplied by the Supreme Court. Such questionnaires shall be designed to determine whether there is arguably any existence of reversible error with respect to any of the following matters:

(1) Any proceedings with respect to change of venue;

(2) Any proceedings with respect to recusal of the trial judge;

(3) Any challenge to the jury array;

(4) Any motion to suppress evidence;

(5) Any motion for psychiatric or other medical evaluation; and

(6) Any other matter deemed appropriate by the Supreme Court.

(c) Upon the filing of the reports of the parties, the clerk of superior court shall transmit to the Supreme Court the report of the trial judge, the transcripts of proceedings, and the reports of the parties together with any application for appeal consolidated therewith. A copy of all of the foregoing shall also be delivered by the clerk of superior court to the Attorney General.

(d) The Supreme Court shall issue an order granting review of the pretrial proceedings, or portions thereof, or denying review within 45 days of the date on which the case was received. The order of the Supreme Court shall identify the matters which shall be subject to review, and such matters may include, but need not be limited to, any matters called to the court's attention in any of the reports or in any application for appeal. No notice of appeal shall be required to be filed if review of the pretrial proceedings is granted. An order granting review of pretrial proceedings shall specify the period of time within which each party shall file briefs and reply briefs with respect to the matters identified in the Supreme Court's order granting review. The Supreme Court may order oral argument or may render a decision on the record and the briefs.

(e) If requested by the district attorney, the Attorney General shall assist in the review and appeal provided for in this Code section.

(f) Review of any matter under this Code section shall, as to any question passed on in such review, be res judicata as to such question and shall be deemed to be the law of the case.

(g) The procedure under this Code section shall not apply to any ruling or order made, invoked, or sought subsequent to the filing of the report of the trial judge.

(h) The failure of either party to assert the rights given in this Code section, or the failure of the Supreme Court to grant review, shall not waive the right to posttrial review of any question review of which could be sought under this Code section and shall not constitute an adjudication as to such question.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Victim-impact evidence warranted death sentence reversal. — Prosecutor's use of victim-impact evidence concerning the personal characteristics of the victim and the psychological, emotional, and physical impact of the crime on the victim's family attempted to introduce evidence of a kind never before approved by the court without pretrial, interim appellate review warranting reversal of the death sentence in accordance with Sermons v. State, 262 Ga. 286 (1992). Moore v. State, 263 Ga. 11, 427 S.E.2d 766 (1993).

Cash, 302 Ga. 587, 807 S.E.2d 405 (2017).

17-10-35.2. Hearing to determine appropriateness of interim appellate review of pretrial rulings.

Prior to the filing of a report by the trial judge under Code Section 17-10-35.1 certifying that pretrial proceedings are complete, the court shall conduct a hearing to determine if an interim appellate review of pretrial rulings is appropriate. The court shall hear from the state and the defense as to whether the delay to be caused by interim appellate review outweighs the need for such review. The court shall order such review and initiate the procedure contained in Code Section 17-10-35.1 unless the court concludes and enters an order to the effect that interim appellate review would not serve the ends of justice in the case. An order obviating interim appellate review shall not be appealable.

17-10-36. Establishment of unified review procedure by Supreme Court; effect on habeas corpus.

(a) The Supreme Court of Georgia shall establish, by rules, a new unified review procedure to provide for the presentation to the sentencing court and to the Supreme Court of all possible challenges to the trial, conviction, sentence, and detention of defendants upon whom the sentence of death has been or may be imposed, which challenges before July 1, 1988, have been presented for review by the former unified review procedure under this subsection. Such new unified review procedure shall govern both pretrial and posttrial appellate review of death penalty cases.

(b) The Supreme Court shall establish, by rules, a series of check lists to be utilized by the trial court, the prosecuting attorney, and defense counsel prior to, during, and after the trial of cases in which the death penalty is sought to make certain that all possible matters which could be raised in defense have been considered by the defendant and defense counsel and either asserted in a timely and correct manner or waived in accordance with applicable legal requirements, so that, for purposes of any pretrial review and the trial and posttrial review, the record and transcript of proceedings will be complete for a review by the sentencing court and the Supreme Court of all possible challenges to the trial, conviction, sentence, and detention of the defendant.

(c) Nothing in this Code section or in the rules of the Supreme Court shall limit or restrict the grounds of review or suspend the rights or remedies available through the procedures governing the writ of habeas corpus.

(d) The procedures governing the writ of habeas corpus may be employed to assert rights or seek remedies if the procedures established in the rules of the Supreme Court as applied to the petitioner are inadequate or ineffective in any constitutional sense.

Analysis

General Consideration
To What Proceedings Section Applicable

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Unified appeal procedure under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36 does not violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 in that the procedure fails to provide a defendant with reciprocal rights of discovery, nor does the procedure violate the equal protection clause of the same amendment. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982); Putman v. Turpin, 53 F. Supp. 2d 1285 (M.D. Ga. 1999).

Defendant's conviction for malice murder, aggravated battery, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony were affirmed as the Unified Appeal Procedure under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36 was not unconstitutional; it was designed for the benefit, not the detriment of a defendant, and it did not interfere with the attorney-client relationship. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Purpose of procedure is to prevent and correct error. — Purpose of the unified appeal procedure under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36 is not to force a waiver of any rights. Rather, the procedure is designed to prevent the occurrence of error to the maximum extent feasible and to correct as promptly as possible any error that nonetheless may occur. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982).

Making all available rights known to defendant. — Unified appeal procedure benefits criminal defendant against whom death penalty is sought by ensuring that all state and federal rights available to the defendant are made known to the defendant. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982).

Defendant offered numerous opportunities to state dissatisfaction with attorney. — Defendant has not suffered the denial of a constitutional right under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36 when a defendant is offered the opportunity, prior to and during trial, to state that the defendant is dissatisfied with the defendant's attorney's assistance. By affording a defendant numerous opportunities to raise questions or objections concerning the defendant's counsel's assistance, the unified appeal procedure recognizes that prior to or during trial the problem of ineffective assistance of counsel may be more suitably remedied than after conviction and the imposition of the death sentence. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982).

To What Proceedings Section Applicable

Procedure designed to protect defendant during each phase of judicial process. — Unified appeal procedure is designed to protect the criminal defendant in this potentially precarious situation during each phase of the judicial process which may ultimately result in a conviction and sentence of death. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982).

Applicability to death penalty cases. — Proceedings under unified appeal procedure are applicable only in cases in which death penalty is sought, and commence at earliest possible opportunity after indictment. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982).

Habeas corpus. — Georgia's Unified Appeal Procedure, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36, setting forth rules promulgated by the Georgia Supreme Court that prescribed procedures to be utilized in death penalty cases by the trial court, defense counsel, and the prosecutor prior to, during, and after trial, did not violate a state death row inmate's right to silence by requiring the inmate to answer the court's questions about the inmate's satisfaction with defense counsel and the manner in which the defense was being conducted. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326 (11th Cir. Ga. 2008).

Unified motion for review procedure. — Unified appeal procedure establishes unified motion for review procedure; this "motion" encompasses pretrial, trial, and certain review proceedings. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1982).

Challenges to indictment. — Because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36 did not grant the Supreme Court of Georgia with the power to abrogate or interfere with an otherwise-valid statutory enactment, such as the statutory procedure by which prosecutors procured indictments and conducted criminal prosecutions through them, the trial court did not err in refusing to quash the indictment filed against the defendant, despite the fact that a 6.04 percentage point under-representation of white persons on the grand jury list from which the defendant's grand jury was selected violated the standard outlined in Ga. Unif. R. Super. Ct. 34, Unif. App. P. II(E). Edwards v. State, 281 Ga. 108, 636 S.E.2d 508 (2006).

17-10-37. Appointment of assistant to Supreme Court to review death sentences; employment of staff to compile data.

(a) There shall be an assistant to the Supreme Court who shall be an attorney appointed by the Chief Justice and who shall serve at the pleasure of the court. The assistant shall assist the Supreme Court in the review of all death sentences.

(b) The court shall be authorized to employ an appropriate staff and such methods to compile such data as are deemed by the Chief Justice to be appropriate and relevant to the statutory questions concerning the validity of the sentence reviewed in accordance with Code Section 17-10-35.

History. — Code 1933, § 27-2537, enacted by Ga. L. 1973, p. 159, § 4; Ga. L. 2010, p. 420, § 2/HB 323.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2010, p. 420, § 3/HB 323, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that the amendment of this Code section shall apply to any case docketed on or after July 1, 2010.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — This section was not subject to constitutional attack under U.S. Const., amends. 8 and 14. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

As to constitutionality of this section, see House v. State, 232 Ga. 140, 205 S.E.2d 217 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3221, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976); Floyd v. State, 233 Ga. 280, 210 S.E.2d 810 (1974), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 949, 97 S. Ct. 2667, 53 L. Ed. 2d 266 (1977); Stephens v. State, 237 Ga. 259, 227 S.E.2d 261, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 986, 97 S. Ct. 508, 50 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1976).

This section was not unconstitutional. Young v. State, 237 Ga. 852, 230 S.E.2d 287 (1976).

Examination of defendant's other convictions. — Nothing in this section foreclosed the Supreme Court during the course of its independent review from examining nonappealed cases and cases in which the defendant pled guilty to a lesser offense. Ross v. State, 233 Ga. 361, 211 S.E.2d 356 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976).

Duty of state to provide indigents access to appellate process. — Duty of the state is not to duplicate the legal arsenal that may be privately retained by a criminal defendant in a continuing effort to reverse the defendant's conviction, but only to assure the indigent defendant an adequate opportunity to present the defendant's claims fairly in the context of the state's appellate process. Ross v. State, 233 Ga. 361, 211 S.E.2d 356 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3222, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1217 (1976).

17-10-38. Death sentences generally.

(a) All persons who have been convicted of a capital offense and have had imposed upon them a sentence of death shall suffer such punishment by lethal injection. Lethal injection is the continuous intravenous injection of a substance or substances sufficient to cause death into the body of the person sentenced to death until such person is dead.

(b) In all cases in which the defendant is sentenced to death, it shall be the duty of the trial judge in passing sentence to direct that the defendant be delivered to the Department of Corrections for execution of the death sentence at a state correctional institution designated by the department.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, prescription, preparation, compounding, dispensing, or administration of a lethal injection authorized by a sentence of death by a court of competent jurisdiction shall not constitute the practice of medicine or any other profession relating to health care which is subject by law to regulation, licensure, or certification.

(d) No state agency, department, or official may, through regulation or otherwise, require or compel a physician to participate in the execution of a death sentence. "To participate in the execution of a death sentence" means any of the following actions: selecting injection sites; starting an intravenous line or lines as a port for a lethal injection device; prescribing, preparing, administering, or supervising injection drugs or their doses or types; inspecting, testing, or maintaining lethal injection devices; or consulting with or supervising lethal injection personnel.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 947, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "It is the intention of the General Assembly to provide for execution by lethal injection for persons sentenced to death after conviction of capital crimes committed on or after May 1, 2000. It is the further intention of the General Assembly that persons sentenced to death for crimes committed prior to the effective date of this Act be executed by lethal injection if the Supreme Court of the United States declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or if the Supreme Court of Georgia declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of Georgia."

Ga. L. 2000, p. 947, § 6, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Section 3 of this Act shall apply to persons sentenced to death for crimes committed on or after May 1, 2000. Code Section 17-10-38 as it existed prior to its amendment by Section 3 of this Act shall continue to apply with respect to crimes committed prior to May 1, 2000, except that Section 3 of this Act shall apply to all persons sentenced to death for crimes committed prior to May 1, 2000, if the Supreme Court of the United States declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or if the Supreme Court of Georgia declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of Georgia."

For challenge of Ga. L. 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 330, § 1 on ex post facto grounds, see Benton v. State, 187 Ga. 149, 199 S.E. 749 (1939).

Allegation that section violates separation of powers provision. — Allegation that this section was unconstitutional, null, and void because the statute supposedly violated Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III), presented no question for judicial determination since the statute failed to point out wherein the Act was repugnant to and in conflict with that constitutional provision. Williams v. State, 187 Ga. 415, 1 S.E.2d 27 (1939).

Ga. L. 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 330, § 1 not unconstitutional. — This section was not unconstitutional as violative of Ga. Const. 1877, Art. III, Sec. I, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV) to the effect that no law shall be amended or repealed by mere reference to its title or section number. Williams v. State, 187 Ga. 415, 1 S.E.2d 27 (1939).

Variance between title and subject matter of legislation. — Ga. L. 1924, p. 195 did not contain matter not expressed in its caption, in violation of Ga. Const. 1877, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. VIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III). Howell v. State, 164 Ga. 204, 138 S.E. 206, appeal dismissed, 275 U.S. 576, 48 S. Ct. 114, 72 L. Ed. 435 (1927).

Manner in which capital sentences executed is for legislative enactment. — There being no provision in the Constitution conferring upon sheriffs of counties the power to execute sentences of the courts in capital cases, the manner of execution of such sentences is for legislative enactment. Dunaway v. Gore, 154 Ga. 219, 138 S.E. 213 (1927).

Constitutionality of electrocution. — As electrocution inflicts purposeless violence and needless mutilation, in violation of the proscription of cruel and unusual punishments of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XV., future executions of death sentences are to be carried out by lethal injection only. Dawson v. State, 274 Ga. 327, 554 S.E.2d 137 (2001).

Relationship to O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33. — In a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case in which a death row inmate challenged Georgia's three-drug lethal injection method, the complaint was untimely; the complaint was governed by the two-year statute of limitations found in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33, and the inmate's claim accrued in 2001 when the General Assembly adopted lethal injection as Georgia's method of execution of death sentences as found in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-38. Alderman v. Donald, No. 08-12550, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 19072 (11th Cir. Sept. 3, 2008) (Unpublished).

Changes made in 2013 to O.C.G.A. § 42-5-36 were not substantial changes to Georgia's execution protocol and the defendant's method-of-execution claim accrued in October 2001 and must have been filed by October 2003 to be timely; the defendant's federal complaint challenging lethal injection, filed on May 12, 2017, was over ten years too late. Ledford v. Comm'r, Ga. Dep't of Corr., 856 F.3d 1312 (11th Cir. 2017).

17-10-39. Procedure for determination if female sentenced to death is pregnant; suspension of execution of sentence; issuance of new order for execution of sentence; entry of order upon minutes of court.

After a sentence of death has been imposed, if a female defendant so sentenced is believed to be pregnant, the sheriff of the county in which the defendant is imprisoned, with the concurrence and assistance of the judge of the probate court, shall select one or more physicians who shall conduct an examination. If the female is found to be pregnant, the sheriff shall suspend the execution of the sentence and make a report of the examination and suspension of execution to the presiding judge of the circuit, who shall cause the report and suspension to be entered on the minutes of the superior court of the county where the sentence was imposed. When the defendant is no longer pregnant, the judge shall issue a new order as provided in Code Section 17-10-40 directing the sheriff to execute the sentence at such date and place as the judge may appoint and direct in the order, which the sheriff shall be bound to do accordingly. The judge shall cause the new order and other proceedings in the case to be entered on the minutes of the court in which the sentence was imposed.

17-10-40. Change of time period for execution when time period set for execution has passed; recordation on court minutes; length of and time limitation for new time period for execution; setting day and time for execution.

(a) Where the time period for the execution of any convicted person in a capital case has passed by reason of a supersedeas incident to appellate review, a stay of execution by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, or for any other reason, a judge of the superior court of the county where the case was tried shall have the power and authority to pass an order fixing a new time period for the execution of the original sentence without requiring the convicted person to be brought before him by a writ of habeas corpus. The order shall be recorded on the minutes of the court and a certified copy of the order shall be sent immediately to the convicted person's attorney of record, to the Attorney General, and to the superintendent of the state correctional institution at the place of execution.

(b) The new time period for the execution shall be seven days in duration and shall commence at noon on a specified date and shall end at noon on a specified date. The new time period for the execution fixed by the judge shall commence not less than ten nor more than 20 days from the date of the order.

(c) The Department of Corrections shall set the day and time for execution within the time period designated by the judge of the superior court. If the execution is not carried out on the day and at the time originally set by the Department of Corrections, the Department of Corrections is authorized to set new dates and times for execution within the period designated by the judge of the superior court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Disclosure of identifying information of persons and entitites involved in executions. — Georgia Supreme Court held that it is was not unconstitutional for the State of Georgia to maintain the confidentiality of the names and other identifying information of the persons and entities involved in executions, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 42-5-36(d), including those who manufacture the drug or drugs to be used. Owens v. Hill, 295 Ga. 302, 758 S.E.2d 794 (2014).

Trial judge can exercise the jurisdiction vested in the judge under this section in vacation. Mallory v. Chapman, 158 Ga. 228, 122 S.E. 884, 34 A.L.R. 310 (1924).

Effect of involuntary absence of defendant. — Order of a trial judge fixing a new date for execution of sentence, after the original date has passed, is not void because the defendant is involuntarily absent and has not waived or authorized anyone else to waive the defendant's right to be present at the time and place of resentencing, and the passage of such order is not violative of the defendant's rights under the several provisions of the state and federal Constitutions. McBurnett v. Balkcom, 207 Ga. 452, 62 S.E.2d 180 (1950).

Absence of defendant when new date set does not violate due process. — Although it was necessary for the defendant to have been present in court when the original sentence of execution was pronounced, as well as during other proceedings throughout the trial, in the absence of waiver, no violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 appears, when the attack is not on the original sentence, but merely on an order fixing a new date of execution, entered in the defendant's absence, which order became necessary after the date fixed in the original sentence had passed because supersedeas pending the determination of a writ of error, since setting a new date of execution is not a new sentence of the defendant, as to which the judge has no discretion, but merely setting the time. Fowler v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 84, 31 S.E.2d 174, cert. denied, 323 U.S. 784, 65 S. Ct. 266, 89 L. Ed. 626 (1944).

Setting of new date when sheriff has allowed date for execution to elapse. — Prisoner who has been convicted and sentenced to be executed will not be discharged on habeas corpus because the sheriff permitted the date assigned for the execution to elapse; instead a new date will be assigned. Mallory v. Chapman, 158 Ga. 228, 122 S.E. 884, 34 A.L.R. 310 (1924).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Authority to transport defendant for physical examination. — Person in the custody of the sheriff, who has not actually been transported to the penitentiary and delivered to the director, remains with the superior court, and the Board of Pardons and Paroles or the State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) would have no jurisdiction, authority, or power to pass any order directing such a person to be transported to another place for physical examination. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 434.

Custody of Department of Offender Rehabilitation. — Once the Department of Offender Rehabilitation has obtained custody of a prisoner whose execution date has been stayed and no new execution date has been set, it remains until execution and so long as the sentence is valid. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-188.

Requirements for order establishing new execution date. — To constitute a facially valid order establishing a new execution date for a condemned person where the original execution date has passed, the order must establish a new execution date within limits set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-40. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-105.

17-10-41. Persons required to be present at executions.

There shall be present at the execution of a convicted person the superintendent of the state correctional institution or a deputy superintendent thereof, at least three executioners, two physicians to determine when death supervenes, and other correctional officers, assistants, technicians, and witnesses as determined by the commissioner of corrections. In addition, the convicted person may request the presence of his or her counsel, a member of the clergy, and a reasonable number of relatives and friends, provided that the total number of witnesses appearing at the request of the convicted person shall be determined by the commissioner of corrections.

It is the further intention of the General Assembly that persons sentenced to death for crimes committed prior to the effective date of this Act be executed by lethal injection if the Supreme Court of the United States declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or if the Supreme Court of Georgia declares that electrocution violates the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of Georgia."

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Other persons admitted only with defendant's consent. — Since this section explicitly enumerated who may be witnesses at an execution, it was conclusive that the General Assembly intended to exclude any other witnesses except the condemned person's counsel, relatives, and such clergy and friends as the condemned may desire. This exception for designated persons requires a determination by the condemned person, which must be conveyed to the Department of Corrections (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation) within a reasonable time before the execution. If the condemned person should express a desire to have some member of the press present the department would be legally authorized to admit the press. Otherwise, the department was required by this section to restrict those present to the ones named in this section, and others requested by the condemned. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 346.

Discretion as to who may be present. — The only person with any discretion in deciding who shall be present at an execution is the condemned person personally. Further, the condemned person has no discretion as to individual members of the general public who are not the condemned's counsel, relatives, and such clergy and friends as the condemned may desire. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 354.

Residence of electrician immaterial. — No reference was made by this section to the residence of the electrician. The indefinite article "an" was used and therefore the place of residence of the electrician used in electrocutions was immaterial under the law. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 281.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Instructions to physician regarding insanity of one convicted of a capital felony. — In view of the fact that the inquiry under former Code 1933, § 27-2602 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-61) was directed to the alleged insanity occurring subsequent to the conviction, the definitions of insanity in former Code 1933, §§ 26-702 and 26-703 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 16-3-2 and 16-3-3) were inapplicable and should not be given in written instructions to physicians appointed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 27-2602. Those instructions should inform the physicians that the issue was the present sanity of the individual and should be determined on the basis of whether the individual is capable of presently understanding the nature and object of the proceedings going on against the individual and rightly comprehends the individual's own condition in reference to such proceedings, and was capable of rendering the individual's attorneys such assistance as a proper defense to the proceedings preferred against the individual demands. Since the basic issue is the individual's sanity at a time subsequent to conviction, or, in effect, the individual's present sanity, the appropriate test should be that as employed upon a special plea of insanity under former Code 1933, § 27-1502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130). 1976 Op. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Habeas corpus proceeding. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-60 et seq. is the exclusive procedure for raising a mentally incompetent to be executed challenge after sentencing, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-62, and creates a rebuttable presumption against re-litigation of a finding of competency instead of applying the stricter habeas procedural default standard, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-69; accordingly, this issue should not arise in habeas proceedings in Georgia. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335 (2011), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

17-10-63. Filing of application; contents.

(a) An application brought under this article must be filed in the superior court of the county in which the applicant is being detained.

The named respondent shall be the person having actual custody of the applicant.

(b) An application brought under this article shall identify the proceeding in which the applicant was convicted, give the date of the rendition and the final judgment complained of, set forth the fact that a time period for execution has been set, give the date of the signing of the order and the dates of the designated time period for execution, and shall clearly set forth alleged facts in support of the assertion that the applicant is presently mentally incompetent to be executed. The application shall have attached thereto affidavits, records, or other evidence supporting its allegations or shall state why the same are not attached. The application shall identify any previous proceedings that the applicant may have taken challenging his mental competency to be executed or challenging his mental condition in relation to the conviction and sentence in question. Arguments and citations of authority shall be omitted from the application. The application must be verified with the oath of the applicant or of some other person in his behalf.

(a) By filing an application under this article, the applicant specifically consents to submit to a state examination for the purposes of assessing mental competency to be executed.

(b) Simultaneously with the filing of the application, the applicant, if he or she wishes the court to consider any request for appointment of an expert, shall file such a request and shall state specific facts in support of that request so that the court may determine if the applicant's mental competency to be executed is in fact a significant issue. The applicant shall further submit with the motion a specific statement as to the particular expert requested, the nature of the examination to be conducted, the time period within which an examination can be conducted, and an estimate of the expenses to be incurred.

(c) If the applicant has filed a request for an examination as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section and the applicant makes a sufficient showing that his or her mental competency to be executed is a significant issue, the court shall appoint an expert to make an examination of the applicant, with such examination to be conducted as soon as possible. Payment for such expert shall be made by the Department of Corrections unless otherwise designated by the General Assembly.

17-10-67. When application to be filed.

An application under this article shall not be filed until completion of direct appeal and until an order has been signed by a judge of the trial court setting a time period for the execution.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-67, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 1003, § 2.

17-10-68. Proof; disposition.

(a) The court may receive proof by depositions, oral testimony, sworn affidavits, or other evidence.

(b) The taking of depositions shall be governed by Code Sections 9-11-26 through 9-11-32 and 9-11-37.

(c) If a sworn affidavit is to be introduced into evidence by either party, the party intending to introduce such an affidavit shall cause it to be served upon the opposing party at least five days in advance of the date set for a hearing in the case or, in the event a hearing is set less than five days from the date of the filing of the application, as soon as possible so that opposing counsel has the opportunity to review the affidavit prior to the hearing. The affidavit so served shall be accompanied by notice of the party's intention to introduce it into evidence. The superior court judge considering the application may resolve disputed issues of fact upon the basis of sworn affidavits standing by themselves.

(d) After reviewing the pleadings and evidence offered at the hearing, the judge of the superior court hearing the case shall make written findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which the judgment is based. The findings of fact and conclusions of law shall be recorded as part of the record in the case.

(e) If the court finds in favor of the applicant by finding that the applicant has proven his or her mental incompetence to be executed by a preponderance of the evidence, the court shall enter an appropriate order with respect to any scheduled execution time period and shall enter such supplementary orders as necessary and proper. If the court denies the application, the court shall direct that immediate telephonic notification be given to the parties and any stay presently entered under this article shall be dissolved instanter.

17-10-69. Prior adjudication as presumption of mental competency.

If an applicant is determined to have previously filed an application under this article and has previously been determined to be mentally competent to be executed, such prior adjudication shall act as a presumption of mental competency and the applicant shall not be entitled to a new hearing on the question of mental competency to be executed absent the applicant's making a prima-facie showing of a substantial change in circumstances sufficient to raise a significant question as to the applicant's mental competency to be executed at the time of filing of any subsequent applications.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-69, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 1003, § 2.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Habeas corpus proceeding. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-60 et seq. is the exclusive procedure for raising a mentally incompetent to be executed challenge after sentencing, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-62, and creates a rebuttable presumption against re-litigation of a finding of competency instead of applying the stricter habeas procedural default standard, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-69; accordingly, this issue should not arise in habeas proceedings in Georgia. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708

S.E.2d 335 (2011), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

17-10-70. Appeals.

(a) Appeals in cases brought under this article shall be governed by Chapter 6 of Title 5 except that as to final orders of the court which are adverse to the applicant, no appeal shall be ordered unless the Supreme Court of this state issues a certificate of probable cause for the appeal.

(b) If an unsuccessful applicant desires to appeal, he or she must file a written application for a certificate of probable cause to appeal with the clerk of the Supreme Court within three days of the entry of the order denying relief. The applicant shall also file within the same period a notice of appeal with the clerk of the concerned superior court. The Supreme Court shall either grant or deny the application within a reasonable time after filing. In order for the Supreme Court to consider fully the request for a certificate, the clerk of the concerned superior court shall forward, as in any other case, the record and transcript, if designated, to the clerk of the Supreme Court when a notice of appeal is filed. The clerk of the concerned superior court need not prepare and retain and the court reporter need not file a copy of the original record and a copy of the original transcript of proceedings. The clerk of the Supreme Court shall return the original record and transcript to the clerk of the concerned superior court upon completion of the appeal if the certificate is granted. If the Supreme Court denies the application for a certificate of probable cause, the clerk of the Supreme Court shall return the original record and transcript and shall notify the clerk of the concerned superior court and the parties to the proceedings below of the determination that probable cause does not exist for appeal.

(c) If the trial court finds in favor of the applicant, no certificate of probable cause need be obtained by the respondent as a condition precedent to appeal. A notice of appeal filed by the respondent shall act as a supersedeas and shall stay the judgment of the superior court until there is a final adjudication by the Supreme Court.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-70, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 1003, § 2.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1988, a comma was inserted following "to the applicant" in subsection (a).

17-10-71. Procedure upon convicted person's regaining mental competency.

If a convicted person under sentence of death who is found to be mentally incompetent to be executed under this article regains his or her mental competency, the fact shall be certified at once by the appropriate mental health official to the court initially making the finding of mental incompetency. Upon such certification, that court shall enter an appropriate order noting receipt of certification and vacating any previously entered stay of execution. A copy of such order shall be sent to the sentencing court, at which time the sentencing court shall fix a new time period for execution as provided in Code Section 17-10-40. The judge of the court which made the determination on the issue of mental competency shall cause the new order and other proceedings in the case to be presented on the minutes of the court.

If convicted, judgment may be entered against the defendant for all costs accruing in the committing and trial courts and by any officer pending the prosecution. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Misdemeanor prosecutions. — O.C.G.A. § 17-11-1 applies to misdemeanor prosecutions. Gibson v. State, 187 Ga. App. 769, 371 S.E.2d 413, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 371 S.E.2d 413 (1988).

"Trial" defined. — "Trial" means such trial in the court having original trial jurisdiction of the case as is the basis of the entry of judgment finally disposing of the action in such court and does not apply to proceedings in an appellate court. Wynne v. Stonecypher, 146 Ga. 5, 90 S.E. 284 (1916).

Judge has no discretion in the matter of taxing costs. — While the word "may" ordinarily denotes permission and not command, the use of that word in the second sentence of this section cannot be construed to mean that the trial judge is vested with discretion in the matter of taxing the costs against the convicted defendant. There is no provision of law for the payment of the fees of the officers of the court when the judge in the judge's discretion fails to tax the costs against the convicted defendant, and it cannot be assumed that it was ever intended that the compensation of these officers should rest in the discretion of the judge. Pound v. Faulkner, 193 Ga. 413, 18 S.E.2d 749 (1942).

Judge's duty to enter judgment for costs. — Since the law allows the judge no discretion as to entering judgment for costs against the convicted defendant, but imposes the burden of paying costs as an incident to conviction, the verdict of guilty against the defendant imposes upon the judge the duty of entering judgment against the defendant for the costs. Pound v. Faulkner, 193 Ga. 413, 18 S.E.2d 749 (1942).

Amendment of judgment to provide for costs. — If a defendant is convicted, but the judge fails to enter a judgment for costs, it is proper for the judge to enter a nunc pro tunc order amending the former judgment to provide for the payment of costs after the expiration of the term at which the judgment was entered, and even after an execution for the costs has issued. Pound v. Faulkner, 193 Ga. 413, 18 S.E.2d 749 (1942).

Judgment for other costs illegal. — It is illegal for a magistrate to give judgment against the prisoner for costs other than those of the prisoner's own witnesses or the prisoner's commitment. Hayden v. State, 40 Ga. 476 (1869).

Costs of bailiffs and jurors are not taxable to criminal defendants. Walden v. State, 258 Ga. 503, 371 S.E.2d 852 (1988); Smith v. State, 262 Ga. 67, 414 S.E.2d 653 (1992).

Fees paid for special grand jurors, traverse jurors, and bailiffs could not properly be included in the sum which the defendant was ordered to pay the defendant's victim as restitution. Martin v. State, 189 Ga. App. 483, 376 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

Assessment of court costs. — Sum which convicted defendant was ordered to pay represented court costs, rather than fine, which trial court is allowed to assess. Carpenter v. State, 167 Ga. App. 634, 307 S.E.2d 19 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 79, 310 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Costs in cases which have been nol prossed. — No officer has the right to demand or receive of one accused of crime costs on a criminal case which has been nol prossed. Hunter v. State, 104 Ga. App. 576, 122 S.E.2d 172 (1961).

If acquitted on subsequent trial no longer liable for costs. — If one accused of crime is convicted but, upon a subsequent trial granted, is thereafter acquitted, the defendant is no longer liable for the costs. Land v. Jolley, 175 Ga. 788, 166 S.E. 217 (1932).

Amount paid by defendant who is eventually acquitted is without consideration. — Due bill given by the defendant to the clerk in settlement of a bill for costs before there had been any conviction of the accused, who was eventually acquitted, was without legal consideration. Wells v. Potter, 120 Ga. 889, 48 S.E. 354 (1904).

Costs to which district attorney entitled if defendant escapes. — If a prisoner escapes before trial, the solicitor general (now district attorney) is only entitled to the costs which have accrued up to the time of such escape. Robinson v. Smith, 57 Ga. 332 (1876).

Witness costs. — Payment of hotel and airline ticket costs for witnesses come within the meaning of "all costs accruing in the . . . trial courts." Smith v. State, 236 Ga. App. 548, 512 S.E.2d 19 (1999), overruled on other grounds by State v. Turnquest, 305 Ga. 758, 827 S.E.2d 865 (2019).

There is no specific statutory authorization for assessing a criminal defendant for the lodging and airfare costs of witnesses for the state. Smith v. State, 272 Ga. 83, 526 S.E.2d 59 (2000).

Procedure for objecting to amounts claimed by witnesses. — If the clerk issues an execution for the costs due witnesses, and the defendant meets the execution with an affidavit of illegality on the ground that the witnesses have claimed and procured the execution to issue for more fees than the witnesses are entitled to receive, it is incumbent upon the defendant to pay amounts appearing to be due in order to authorize the levying officer to stay further proceedings. State v. Everett, 93 Ga. 575, 20 S.E. 73 (1894).

Costs may not be demanded before providing transcript for appeal, if trial not had. — If the accused excepts to the overruling of a demurrer (now motion to dismiss) to the indictment, and brings the case to the Supreme Court before there has been any trial on the merits, the clerk of the court in which the case is pending has no right to demand, as a condition precedent to sending up a transcript of the record, the payment of accrued costs. Wells v. Potter, 120 Ga. 889, 48 S.E. 354 (1904).

If no supersedeas is obtained, the clerk of the trial court is entitled to have judgment awarded against the defendant for the costs accruing in connection with the defendant's prosecution of a writ of error (see O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-49, 5-6-50) to the Court of Appeals, while the defendant's case is pending in that court. Wynne v. Stonecypher, 146 Ga. 5, 90 S.E. 284 (1916).

Costs are not recoverable in proceeding to recover forfeited recognizance. — Costs of the criminal case out of which a recognizance arises are not recoverable in a proceeding by scire facias to enforce the recognizance as forfeited. When such costs have been taxed in the judgment rendered in the scire facias proceeding a motion to retax, so as to exclude from that judgment these nontaxable costs, should be granted. Cade v. Gordon, 88 Ga. 461, 14 S.E. 706 (1892).

Imprisonment for failure to pay costs. — One adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor and sentenced to pay the costs of the prosecution, and in default of the payment thereof to be confined in the chain gang for a stated term, cannot be held in custody or compelled to labor on the chain gang for fees due officers of court for services which the officers were required by law to render in proceedings instituted by that person, subsequently to the person's conviction and sentence, to review and reverse such judgment and sentence, though liable under the judgment for such fees as costs. Alexander v. Walton, 151 Ga. 645, 107 S.E. 862 (1921).

Extent and priority of lien generally. — All the property of a person arrested and convicted upon a criminal charge, or who may escape from jail, or from any officer, owned by the person at the time of the arrest, is bound for the costs of prosecution, by statutory lien, which attaches also upon the proceeds of the property, when identified. This lien overrides a title to property made by the person, upon the sale for professional services, after the person's arrest and before conviction. Morgan v. Collier, 13 Ga. 493 (1853).

Costs are collectible by levy of fi. fa. — Costs in a criminal prosecution are collectible of the defendant by the levy of a fi. fa. at the termination of a prosecution, if it finally results in the conviction of the defendant. Land v. Jolley, 175 Ga. 788, 166 S.E. 217 (1932).

Judge has the power to order the clerk to issue an execution against the property of the defendant to enforce the collection of the fine and costs. McMeekin v. State, 48 Ga. 335 (1873).

Lien for costs puts purchasers on notice. — If the vendor of an interest in real property is in prison, the vendee is put on notice of the lien for costs, or notice of a fact which, if diligently investigated, would have disclosed the lien. Pound v. Faulkner, 193 Ga. 413, 18 S.E.2d 749 (1942).

Cost of paternity blood test in child abandonment case. — When the state requests pretrial paternity blood testing for a defendant charged with child abandonment, the state must initially pay the cost. A verdict incorporating a finding of parentage would authorize the court to tax the cost of the blood test against the defendant, or under certain circumstances against the prosecutor/prosecutrix or complainant. State v. Slavny, 195 Ga. App. 818, 395 S.E.2d 56 (1990).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Ultimate responsibility for costs will fall upon the defendant, the prosecutor, or the fine and forfeiture fund, depending upon the circumstances. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-42.

Court of inquiry is not trial. — This section meant that the costs allowed an officer cannot be collected from a defendant until after the defendant's conviction on trial, and the court of inquiry was not the trial. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 265.

Costs of feeding prisoner while prisoner is imprisoned awaiting trial are part of court costs collectible from defendant. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 121.

Application fee for warrant. — Fee for application for an arrest or search warrant under O.C.G.A. § 15-10-82 is not part of the costs. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-24.

Fee for issuance of criminal warrant. — Affiant (prosecutor) may not be required to pay the fee for the issuance of a criminal warrant at the time of such issuance. A clear intent is shown to determine the responsibility for such payment at a subsequent time, rather than at the time of the issuance of the criminal warrant. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-364.

Claim of county for fees of county officers. — In cases which are never signed by the defendant or a judge, which are not nol prossed and which are transmitted to the clerk's office prior to the return of the indictment against the officer, the county does not have a claim for any portion of the money received in the clerk's office from an officer of the court based on chargeable fees of the county's officers. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-90.

17-11-4. Imposition of costs and jail fees upon prosecutor or complainant.

(a) The prosecutor's name shall be endorsed on every indictment, and he shall be compelled to pay all costs and jail fees upon the acquittal or discharge of the person accused when:

(1) The grand jury, by its foreman, on returning "no bill," expresses as its opinion that the prosecution was unfounded or malicious;

(2) A jury on the trial of the prosecution finds it to be malicious; or

(3) The prosecution is abandoned before trial. When it is thus abandoned, the officer who issued the warrant shall enter a judgment against the prosecutor for all the costs and enforce it by an execution in the name of the state or by an attachment for contempt.

(b) A magistrate may, in his discretion, assess costs and jail fees against the person who instigated the prosecution when, at a committal hearing, the action is dismissed for want of probable cause and the magistrate finds that the complaint was unfounded and malicious. This subsection shall not apply to law enforcement personnel.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

"Prosecutor" defined. — "Prosecutor," for purposes of this section, was one who instigates a prosecution by making an affidavit charging a named person with the commission of a penal offense on which a warrant was issued or an indictment or accusation was based. Sampson v. State, 43 Ga. App. 89, 157 S.E. 915 (1931); In re Herring, 185 Ga. App. 541, 365 S.E.2d 139 (1988).

"Prosecutor" for purposes of this section was the person who voluntarily goes before the grand jury with the prosecutor's complaint. Sampson v. State, 43 Ga. App. 89, 157 S.E. 915 (1931).

Evidence that return of "no bill, malicious prosecution" is not well-founded. — When a prosecutor is required by rule to show cause why the prosecutor should not be compelled to pay the costs of a criminal case, because of a return by the grand jury of "no bill, malicious prosecution" upon a bill of indictment, it is not incompetent for the prosecutor to show by evidence that such return was not well-founded in the fact. Green v. State, 112 Ga. 52, 37 S.E. 93 (1900).

Whether paragraph (a)(2) or (a)(3) is applicable depends on attachment of jeopardy. — Paragraph (3) (see paragraph (a)(3)) of this section applied when the prosecution is abandoned before the trial, that is, before the trial has reached such a stage as to put the defendant in jeopardy. Paragraph (2) of the section (see paragraph (a)(2)) applied when the trial has reached such a stage as to put the defendant in jeopardy and the jury to find the prosecution to be malicious. Thus, if before the defendant is put in jeopardy the prosecutor abandons the prosecution, the prosecutor may be liable for the costs, but, if the trial before the jury has reached such a stage as to put the defendant in jeopardy it then becomes a jury question whether or not the prosecution is malicious, and, if the jury finds the prosecution is malicious, the costs may be assessed against the prosecutor. Rainey v. State, 50 Ga. App. 256, 177 S.E. 757 (1934).

Failure to endorse prosecutor's name on indictment. — Fact that the name of the prosecutor was not endorsed upon the indictment as required by this section did not involve any right and privileges of a defendant, but only affected the prosecutor, who must pay costs upon the acquittal or discharge of the person accused under circumstances set forth in that section, and any error in this regard was not harmful to a defendant. Lewis v. State, 144 Ga. App. 847, 242 S.E.2d 725 (1978).

Execution on warrant when prosecution abandoned before trial. — When a prosecution is abandoned before trial, the officer who issued the warrant is authorized to enter a judgment against the prosecutor for all costs and enforce the judgment by an execution in the name of the state. An execution on such judgment issued in the name of the accused in the warrant is void. Underwood v. Harvey, 106 Ga. 268, 32 S.E. 124 (1898).

Consent agreement and dismissal of prosecution for child abandonment. — If the prosecuting attorney in a child abandonment case, and not the mother (who was the prosecuting witness), made the determination to enter into a consent agreement and to permit the dismissal of the action against the putative father, the state could not then cast the costs against the prosecuting witness, the trial court having made no finding that the mother abandoned the prosecution. In re Herring, 185 Ga. App. 541, 365 S.E.2d 139 (1988).

Cost of paternity blood test in child abandonment case. — When the state requests pretrial paternity blood testing for a defendant charged with child abandonment, the state must initially pay the cost. A verdict incorporating a finding of parentage would authorize the court to tax the cost of the blood test against the defendant, or under certain circumstances against the prosecutor/prosecutrix or complainant. State v. Slavny, 195 Ga. App. 818, 395 S.E.2d 56 (1990).

Payment of costs may be enforced by imprisonment. Green v. State, 112 Ga. 52, 37 S.E. 93 (1900).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Ultimate responsibility for costs will fall upon the defendant, the prosecutor, or the fine and forfeiture fund, depending upon the circumstances. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-42.

"Discharge before trial" occurs at any time before the trial has reached such a stage as to put the accused in jeopardy. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-364.

Fee for issuance of criminal warrant. — Affiant (prosecutor) may not be required to pay the fee for the issuance of a criminal warrant at the time of such issuance. A clear intent is shown to determine the responsibility for such payment at a subsequent time than at the time of the issuance of the criminal warrant. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-364.

17-11-21. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Capital felony case" means a criminal case in which the death penalty may be imposed upon the defendant under the laws of this state.

(2) "Capital felony expenses" means expenses incurred by a county and paid from county funds as a direct result of a capital felony case being tried by a superior court. The term includes expenses from the date of the arrest of the defendant to the date of the superior court conviction, expenses from the date of the conviction until the date of the last appellate court affirmance of the conviction, expenses from the last appellate court reversal to any subsequent superior court convictions or retrials, expenses from any retrials to the last appellate court action on the conviction, expenses from the date of the arrest of the defendant to the date of the defendant's release if there is no conviction or if the conviction is reversed and there is no retrial, or expenses during any combination of these periods. The term shall not include the following expenses:

(A) Any expenses reimbursed by or pursuant to state law;

(B) The salaries, compensation, and expenses of all county officers and employees, except for any compensation and expenses of temporary employees employed as a direct result of the capital felony case or extraordinary expenses incurred by county officers and employees as a direct result of the capital felony case; and

(C) County paid supplements to the salaries or compensation of state officers and employees.

(3) "Commissioner" means the commissioner of community affairs.

(4) "County revenue" means the most current available total of adjusted taxes as determined from the annual financial report relating to local government finances filed by the county with the Department of Community Affairs pursuant to Code Section 36-81-8.

17-11-22. Basis for reimbursement of counties for capital felony expenses.

(a) Each county which is responsible for the costs of a capital felony case will be reimbursed for capital felony expenses as provided in this Code section. With respect to one or more capital felony cases, expenses from the date of arrest will be accumulated. When one or more capital felony cases result in capital felony expenses, the accumulation of which is more than 5 percent of county revenue for the calendar year in which the superior court conviction occurs or in which the defendant is released if not convicted, the county will be reimbursed for all such accumulated capital felony expenses in excess of the 5 percent level. After a county has qualified or been reimbursed for capital felony expenses for any calendar year, the county shall be eligible for any capital felony expenses resulting from such case or cases in subsequent calendar years prior to the appeal of such case or cases. County revenues shall not be applicable in determining the amount of reimbursement for capital felony expenses occurring in such subsequent years prior to the appeal of the case or cases.

(b) If one or more capital felony cases are appealed, expenses from the date of the superior court conviction will be accumulated. When the appeal of one or more capital felony cases results in capital felony expenses, the accumulation of which is more than 5 percent of county revenue for the calendar year in which the last appellate court action on the conviction occurs, the county will be reimbursed for all such capital felony expenses in excess of the 5 percent level. If the county chooses not to seek reimbursement for capital felony expenses from the date of arrest to the date of the superior court conviction and instead seeks reimbursement for its capital felony expenses through the last appellate court action, the county will be reimbursed for all accumulated capital felony expenses in excess of the 5 percent level.

(c) If a capital felony case is appealed and the conviction is reversed, capital felony expenses for any subsequent retrial and appeals will be handled in accordance with the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section.

(d) No capital felony expenses for which reimbursement has already been made will again be included in any subsequent calculations or reimbursement requests.

17-11-23. When reimbursement payments to be made; manner of reimbursement where requests exceed funds appropriated.

(a)(1) Reimbursement payments for eligible capital felony expenses under this article will be made to the governing authority of each county incurring capital felony expenses. The payments will be made during the second quarter of a calendar year for capital felony expenses eligible for reimbursement during the immediately preceding calendar year; provided, however, that, if a county is reimbursed during the second quarter of a calendar year and has additional capital felony expenses eligible for reimbursement during the remainder of such calendar year resulting from the same case or cases, payments will be made during the fourth quarter of such calendar year for the additional capital felony expenses eligible for reimbursement.

(2) Reimbursement payments shall be made from funds appropriated for such purpose pursuant to subsection (a) of Code Section 17-11-24, and no payments are required to be made if funds are not available or have not been appropriated.

(b)(1) In the event that requests for reimbursement exceed the amount appropriated for this article, the commissioner shall have the right to reduce each request proportionally so that the total amount of requests shall not exceed the total amount of funds available for reimbursement payments at the time of the request.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this Code section, during the first payment cycle of a state fiscal year (fourth quarter of a calendar year) not more than one-half of the funds available for reimbursement will be expended for reimbursement purposes.

History. — Ga. L. 1979, p. 504, § 5; Ga. L. 1983, p. 395, § 3; Ga. L. 1988, p. 1859, § 3.

17-11-24. Administration of article generally; adoption of rules and regulations; maintenance of records of capital felony expenses by clerks of superior courts.

(a) The commissioner shall administer this article and shall make payments to counties for the reimbursement of capital felony expenses as provided by this article. The payments shall be made from funds appropriated to the Department of Community Affairs specifically for the purpose of making reimbursements pursuant to this article.

(b) The commissioner shall adopt rules and regulations for the administration of this article. The rules and regulations shall be distributed to the county governing authorities and to the clerks of the superior courts.

(c) The clerks of the superior courts will be the local administrators of this article; and, consistent with rules and regulations promulgated by the commissioner as provided by subsection (b) of this Code section, the clerks will maintain records of capital felony expenses for the purposes of this article. Based on such records, the clerk of each superior court will certify to the commissioner, during the first quarter of each calendar year, capital felony expenses eligible for reimbursement during the preceding calendar year.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the issues dealt with, decisions under former Ga. L. 1968, p. 999, and T. 17, C. 12, Art. 1 are included in the annotations for this article.

Article not exclusive method for providing indigents right to counsel. — While the former Georgia Criminal Justice Act should have provided effective means of affording counsel to indigent defendants, it was not the exclusive method for accomplishing that end. Perry v. State, 120 Ga. App. 304, 170 S.E.2d 350 (1969) (decided under former Ga. L. 1968, p. 999).

Inadequacy of "Declaration of Indigency" form as indirectly denying defendant right to appointed counsel. — See Stapp v. State, 249 Ga. 289, 290 S.E.2d 439 (1982) (decided under former Ga. L. 1968, p. 999).

Remand was required since the record did not show how it was determined that the defendant did not qualify for appointed legal assistance and revealed that the trial court failed to exercise the court's affirmative duty of determining whether the defendant exercised reasonable diligence in attempting to retain counsel. McQueen v. State, 228 Ga. App. 732, 492 S.E.2d 720 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. T. 17, C. 12, Art. 1).

Insufficiency of record on appeal. — Since it was not clear from the record that when the defendant received the court's order the defendant was required to provide proof of indigency, whether the court considered the defendant's proof of indigency, or whether the court found that the court could not determine indigency due to the defendant's failure or refusal to provide the necessary proof of indigency, the case was remanded for a hearing to determine whether or not the defendant was indigent. Mapp v. State, 199 Ga. App. 47, 403 S.E.2d 833 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. T. 17, C. 12, Art. 1).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction with former § 17-12-10. — Georgia Indigent Defense Act, in replacing former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-10(c), did not preclude a trial court from ordering restitution of attorney fees as part of the court's general power to impose reasonable conditions of probation under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35; thus, a defendant was properly ordered to reimburse the costs of the defendant's legal representation and that aspect of the defendant's sentence was not a nullity. State v. Pless, 282 Ga. 58, 646 S.E.2d 202 (2007).

Failure to exercise diligence in procuring counsel. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by proceeding with trial and refusing to delay the proceedings after concluding that the defendant did not exercise reasonable diligence in procuring counsel because the record showed that the defendant repeatedly claimed, over a period of three months, that the defendant was in the process of retaining counsel, and the defendant was advised on multiple occasions by the trial court to make a better effort to do so.

Hatcher v. State, 320 Ga. App. 366, 739 S.E.2d 805 (2013).

Transcript costs for indigents. — It was error to hold that under O.C.G.A. § 17-12-34 of the Georgia Indigent Defense Act of 2003, the Georgia Public Defender Standards Council was required to pay for indigent defendants' costs of transcripts in criminal cases; under laws existing before the act, counties were required to pay for such transcripts, and the act does not repeal these laws by implication. Ga. Public Defender Stds. Council v. State of Ga., 284 Ga. App. 660, 644 S.E.2d 510 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Placement of Georgia Public Defenders Standards Council in executive branch. — General Assembly was authorized to place the Georgia Public Defenders Standards Council (GPDSC) in the executive branch. A suit by GPDSC, whether by pro bono counsel or otherwise, against the state for so placing the GPDSC in the executive branch (or for any other reason) would be ultra vires and illegal. 2009 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2009-2.

Responsibilities of Director of Georgia Public Defender Standards Council. — Director of the Georgia Public Defender Standards Council has broad authority and is responsible for the day to day operation of the agency. The Council's limited responsibilities, to be carried out concurrently with the director, include setting standards, conducting audits, making financial disclosures, receiving funds, providing for legal education, reporting to the General Assembly, and providing procedures for the appointment of conflict council. 2009 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2009-5.

17-12-2. Definitions.

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) "Assistant public defender" means an attorney who is employed by any circuit public defender.

(2) "Circuit public defender" means the head of a public defender office providing indigent defense representation within any given judicial circuit of this state.

(3) "Circuit public defender office" means the office of any of the several circuit public defenders.

(4) "Council" means the Georgia Public Defender Council.

(5) "Director" means the director of the Georgia Public Defender Council.

(6) "Indigent person" or "indigent defendant" means:

(A) A person charged with a misdemeanor, violation of probation, or a municipal or county offense punishable by imprisonment who earns less than 100 percent of the federal poverty guidelines unless there is evidence that the person has other resources that might reasonably be used to employ a lawyer without undue hardship on the person or his or her dependents;

(B) A juvenile charged with a delinquent act or a violation of probation punishable by detention whose parents earn less than 125 percent of the federal poverty guidelines unless there is evidence that the juvenile or his or her parents have other resources that might reasonably be used to employ a lawyer without undue hardship on the juvenile, his or her parents, or the parent's dependents; and

(C) A person charged with a felony who earns or, in the case of a juvenile, whose parents earn, less than 150 percent of the federal poverty guidelines unless there is evidence that the person has other resources that might reasonably be used to employ a lawyer without undue hardship on the person, his or her dependents, or, in the case of a juvenile, his or her parents or the parent's dependents.

In no case shall a person whose maximum income level exceeds 150 percent of the federal poverty level or, in the case of a juvenile, whose household income exceeds 150 percent of the federal poverty level be an indigent person or indigent defendant.

(7) "Legislative oversight committee" means the Legislative Oversight Committee for the Georgia Public Defender Council.

(8) "Public defender" means an attorney who is employed in a circuit public defender office or who represents an indigent person pursuant to this chapter.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-12-2, enacted by Ga. L. 2003, p. 191, § 1; Ga. L. 2006, p. 752, § 4/SB 503; Ga. L. 2008, p. 846, § 15/HB 1245; Ga. L. 2015, p. 519, § 7-2/HB 328.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Indigency determination factoring in parents income appropriate. — While the issue of a defendant's indigency for the purposes of obtaining court-appointed counsel could not be reviewed, it was not inappropriate to consider under O.C.G.A. § 17-12-2(6)(A), along with the defendant's income, the income of the defendant's parents as the defendant still lived at home. Thomas v. State, 297 Ga. App. 416, 677 S.E.2d 433 (2009).

Inquiry into eligibility for appointed counsel. — Trial court did not commit reversible error in failing to conduct a specific inquiry to determine the defendant's eligibility for appointed counsel because the defendant had not previously applied for appointed counsel and expressly rejected the opportunity to do so. Longo v. City of Dunwoody, 351 Ga. App. 735, 832 S.E.2d 884 (2019), cert. denied, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 255 (Ga. 2020).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1968, p. 999, § 4, and former §§ 17-12-60 and 17-12-61, are included in the annotations for this Code Section.

Purpose of Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1 insofar as that law related to appeals in forma pauperis was to ensure that no person convicted of a capital felony shall be denied the right of appeal because of that person's poverty. McCrary v. State, 229 Ga. 733, 194 S.E.2d 480 (1972).

Lack of counsel after sentenced to death violates right to counsel. — Lack of counsel after the death sentence is imposed deprives the accused of the accused's vital constitutional right to counsel and renders the accused's trial and sentence void. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766 (1964) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 2).

Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1 et seq. was not unconstitutional as violating Ga. Const. 1945, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. VIII; Art. VI, Sec. IX, Para. I; Art. VII, Sec. IV, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III; Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V; Art. IX, Sec. IV, Para. I). Bibb County v. Hancock, 211 Ga. 429, 86 S.E.2d 511 (1955).

Section superseded by O.C.G.A. § 17-12-44. — With the enactment of O.C.G.A. § 17-12-44, it would seem that former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-60 had been, in effect, superseded. Straughan & Straughan v. Douglas, 260 Ga. 821, 400 S.E.2d 906 (1991) (decided under former § 17-12-60).

State may not force counsel on defendant. — State may not constitutionally hale the person into the state's criminal courts and there force a lawyer upon the person, when the person insists that the person wants to conduct the person's own defense. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768 (1980) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1).

Judge has no duty to force counsel on defendant. — Trial judge does not have a duty to attempt to force unwanted counsel upon a defendant who has resolutely declared the defendant's purpose to dismiss that counsel. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768 (1980) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1).

Appointment of counsel. — Trial court acted within the court's discretion in replacing the defendant's appointed private attorneys with salaried counsel from the capital defender's division of the Georgia Public Defender Standards Council (GPDSC) because retaining the defendant's current counsel would perpetuate the funding problems that had plagued the case; evidence was presented that the GPDSC, and possibly the county, currently had funds available for travel and other investigative expenses. Phan v. State, 290 Ga. 588, 723 S.E.2d 876 (2012).

Compensation under § 17-12-5. — Although an attorney applies for appointment under former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-12-60 and 17-12-61, this does not preclude an attorney from seeking compensation under O.C.G.A. § 17-12-5(b). In re Whatley, 256 Ga. 289, 347 S.E.2d 602 (1986) (decided under former §§ 17-12-60 and 17-12-61).

Compensation under § 17-12-5(b). — Although an attorney applies for appointment under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-12, this did not preclude the attorney from seeking compensation under § 17-12-5(b). In re Whatley, 256 Ga. 289, 347 S.E.2d 602 (1986).

Constitutional right to counsel. — Indigent defendant was constitutionally entitled to the appointment of counsel at the defendant's upcoming murder trial even if the defendant was currently being provided pro bono representation by an attorney who was receiving compensation from sources other than the defendant. Roberts v. State, 263 Ga. 764, 438 S.E.2d 905 (1994) (decided under former § 17-12-60).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

No requirement existed that counsel be appointed for indigent habeas corpus petitioner. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-147 (decided under former law).

Construction with constitutional duty to render certain services without compensation. — Under Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV), when a person is charged with a crime in this state, and the court is satisfied that the defendant by reason of the defendant's poverty is indigent and unable to the pay attorney's fee, it is then the duty of the judge to appoint a member of the bar to investigate such a defendant without compensation. However, under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1, counsel may be paid for counsel's service when the defendant has been charged with a capital felony and is unable to pay counsel. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 80 (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1).

Amended motion for new trial would fall under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 119 (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 478, § 1).

17-12-12.1. Payment of attorney in event of conflict of interest in capital cases; number of attorneys appointed; county governing authority's financial responsibility; expenses.

(a) If there is a conflict of interest such that the Georgia capital defender division is unable to defend any indigent person accused of a capital felony for which the death penalty is being sought, the director shall determine and appoint counsel to represent the defendant. The director shall establish the contractual agreement with the defendant's counsel for payment of representing the defendant, and, when feasible and prudent, a flat fee structure shall be utilized.

(b) A maximum of two attorneys shall be paid by the council pursuant to a contractual agreement or at an hourly rate established by the council with state funds appropriated to the council. State funds shall be appropriated to the council for use by the Georgia capital defender division for the first $150,000.00 paid for each death penalty case. Funding for attorney's fees and expenses between $150,000.01 and $250,000.00 for each death penalty case shall be paid through state appropriations for 75 percent of such attorney's fees and expenses, and the county governing authority where the indictment was returned shall pay 25 percent of such attorney's fees and expenses. Funding for all attorney's fees and expenses in excess of $250,000.00 for each death penalty case shall be paid through state appropriations for 50 percent of such attorney's fees and expenses, and the county governing authority where the indictment was returned shall pay 50 percent of such attorney's fees and expenses.

(c) The council, with the assistance of the Georgia capital defender division, shall establish guidelines for all expense requests for cases in which the death penalty is sought, including, but not limited to, attorney's fees, expert witness fees, investigative fees, travel and accommodation expenses, and copy and transcription costs.

(d) A county governing authority may provide supplemental compensation to counsel appointed pursuant to this Code section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Because appointment of counsel to represent a defendant in a death penalty case occurred before the statute's effective date, the application of former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-127(b) regarding payment of costs and attorney's fees by the Georgia Public Defender Standards Council did not violate the prohibition on the state's assumption of prior debts as set forth in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. IV, Para. X. Ga. Pub. Defender Stds. Council v. State, 285 Ga. 169, 675 S.E.2d 25 (2009).

County was not responsible to pay portion of costs that were not ordinarily incurred in a courtroom proceeding. Fulton County v. State, 282 Ga. 570, 651 S.E.2d 679 (2007).

County was responsible to pay fees and costs. — Georgia Public Defender Standards Council was required to pay attorney's fees and expenses in a death penalty case to appointed counsel pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-127(b) because nothing in former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-124 required that the Council fund representation only for defendants who were indicted or sent a death penalty notice after a certain date and counsel were appointed after the effective date of former § 17-12-127(b). 17-12-20. Public defender selection panel for each circuit; appointment of public defender; removal; vacancies.

(a) On and after July 1, 2011, there is created in each judicial circuit in this state a circuit public defender supervisory panel to be composed of three members, all of whom shall be attorneys who regularly practice in that particular judicial circuit. The chief judge of the superior court of the circuit shall appoint one member. The Governor shall appoint one member. In a single county judicial circuit, the chairperson of the governing authority or sole commissioner shall appoint one member; in multicounty judicial circuits, the chairpersons of the governing authorities or sole commissioners shall caucus and appoint one member. When a caucus is needed to appoint a member of the supervisory panel, the chairperson or sole commissioner of the largest county by population in the judicial circuit shall convene the caucus. Members of the circuit public defender supervisory panel shall be individuals with significant experience working in the criminal justice system or who have demonstrated a strong commitment to the provision of adequate and effective representation of indigent defendants. A prosecuting attorney as defined in paragraph (6) of Code Section 19-13-51, any employee of a prosecuting attorney's office, or an employee of the Prosecuting Attorneys' Council of the State of Georgia shall not serve as a member of the circuit public defender supervisory panel after July 1, 2005. On and after July 1, 2008, no employees of the council shall serve as a member of the circuit public defender supervisory panel. Members of the circuit public defender supervisory panel shall reside in the judicial circuit in which they serve. The circuit public defender supervisory panel members shall serve for a term of five years. Any vacancy for an appointed member shall be filled by the appointing authority within 60 days of the vacancy occurring.

(b)(1) By majority vote of its membership, the circuit public defender supervisory panel shall annually elect a chairperson and secretary. The chairperson shall conduct the meetings and deliberations of the panel and direct all activities. The secretary shall keep accurate records of all the meetings and deliberations and perform such other duties as the chairperson may direct. The panel may be called into session upon the direction of the chairperson or by the council.

(2) By majority vote of its membership, the circuit public defender supervisory panel shall nominate not more than five people to serve as the circuit public defender in the circuit. The director shall select the circuit public defender from the panel's list of nominees. A circuit public defender shall serve a term for up to four years and may be appointed for successive terms but shall not be reappointed if he or she was removed pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section.

(c) A circuit public defender may be removed for cause by the director. If a circuit public defender wants to appeal such removal, he or she may appeal the decision to the council. By a vote of two-thirds of the members of the entire council, the council may overturn the director's decision. Any appeal regarding a removal request shall be submitted to the council within 15 days of the effective date of the removal, and the council shall take action in hearing the appeal at its next regularly scheduled meeting and take final action within 30 days thereafter. A circuit public defender who has been removed by the director who has filed an appeal with the council shall continue to serve as the circuit public defender until the council reaches a decision on the appeal.

(d) A circuit public defender supervisory panel may convene at any time during its circuit public defender's term of office and shall convene at least annually for purposes of reviewing the circuit public defender's job performance and the performance of the circuit public defender office. The director and circuit public defender shall be notified at least two weeks in advance of the convening of the circuit public defender supervisory panel. The circuit public defender shall be given the opportunity to appear before the circuit public defender supervisory panel and present evidence and testimony. The chairperson shall determine the agenda for the annual review process, but, at a minimum, such review shall include usage of state and local funding, expenditures, and budgeting matters. The chairperson shall make an annual report on or before the thirtieth day of September of each year concerning the circuit public defender supervisory panel's findings regarding the job performance of the circuit public defender and his or her office to the director on a form provided to the panel by the director. If at any time the circuit public defender supervisory panel finds that the circuit public defender is performing in a less than satisfactory manner or finds information of specific misconduct, the circuit public defender supervisory panel may by majority vote of its members adopt a resolution seeking review of its findings and remonstrative action by the director. Such resolution shall specify the reason for such request. All evidence presented and the findings of the circuit public defender supervisory panel shall be forwarded to the director within 15 days of the adoption of the resolution. The director shall initiate action on the circuit public defender supervisory panel's resolution within 30 days of receiving the resolution. The director shall notify the circuit public defender supervisory panel, in writing, of any actions taken pursuant to submission of a resolution under this subsection.

(e) If a vacancy occurs for the position of circuit public defender, the director shall appoint an interim circuit public defender to serve until the director has appointed a replacement. Within 30 days of the vacancy occurring, the circuit public defender supervisory panel shall meet and nominate not more than five people to serve as a replacement circuit public defender. The director shall select the replacement circuit public defender from the panel's list of nominees.

L. 2003, p. 191, Section 17 of this Act shall become effective upon approval of this Act by the Governor or upon its becoming law without such approval." To be eligible to fill the position of circuit public defender, a person must:

(1) Have attained the age of 25 years;

(2) Have been duly admitted and licensed to practice law in the superior courts for at least three years;

(3) Be a member in good standing of the State Bar of Georgia; and 17-12-22. Procedure for appointment of attorneys for indigent defendants in event of public defender's conflict of interest; identification of conflict.

(a) The director, with input from the council, shall establish a procedure for providing legal representation in cases where the circuit public defender office has a conflict of interest. Such procedure may include, but shall not be limited to, the appointment of individual counsel on a case-by-case basis or the utilization of another circuit public defender office. Whatever procedure the director establishes for each circuit's conflict of interest cases shall be adhered to by the circuit public defender office. It is the intent of the General Assembly that the director consider the most efficient and effective system to provide legal representation where the circuit public defender office has a conflict of interest.

(b) The circuit public defender shall establish a method for identifying conflicts of interest at the earliest possible opportunity. If there is a conflict of interest such that the circuit public defender office cannot represent a defendant and an attorney who is not employed by the circuit public defender office is appointed, such attorney shall have a contractual relationship with the council to represent indigent persons in conflict of interest cases, and such relationship may include, but shall not be limited to, a flat fee structure.

(c) Attorneys who seek appointment in conflict cases shall have such experience or training in the defense of criminal cases as is necessary in light of the complexity of the case to which he or she is appointed and shall meet such qualifications and standards for the representation of indigent defendants as are established by the council.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Authority of trial court over withdrawal determination. — O.C.G.A. § 17-12-22 of the Indigent Defense Act of 2003, O.C.G.A. § 17-12-1 et seq., did not remove a trial court's authority to determine whether a conflict of interest between an indigent criminal defendant and a public defender who was assigned to represent the defendant's interest required withdrawal of the defender as it only removed the appointment of assigned counsel from the trial court's authority; there was no conflict between § 17-12-22 and Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 4.3, as § 17-12-22 was enacted to facilitate the identification of conflicts before a public defender undertook representation, and when a conflict arose or was discovered after representation had commenced, a trial court still had authority to determine the issue of withdrawal. Odum v. State, 283 Ga. App. 291, 641 S.E.2d 279 (2007).

17-12-23. Cases in which public defender representation required; timing of representation; juvenile divisions; contracts with local governments.

(a) The circuit public defender shall provide representation in the following actions and proceedings:

(1) Any case prosecuted in a superior court under the laws of the State of Georgia in which there is a possibility that a sentence of imprisonment or probation or a suspended sentence of imprisonment may be adjudged;

(2) A hearing on a revocation of probation in a superior court;

(3) Any juvenile court case where the juvenile may face a disposition of confinement, commitment, or probation; and

(4) Any direct appeal of any of the proceedings enumerated in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this subsection.

(b) In each of the actions and proceedings enumerated in subsection (a) of this Code section, entitlement to the services of counsel begins not more than three business days after the indigent person is taken into custody or service is made upon him or her of the charge, petition, notice, or other initiating process and such person makes an application for counsel to be appointed.

(c) Each circuit public defender shall establish a juvenile division within the circuit public defender office to specialize in the defense of juveniles.

(d) A city or county may contract with the circuit public defender office for the provision of criminal defense for indigent persons accused of violating city or county ordinances or state laws. If a city or county does not contract with the circuit public defender office, the city or county shall be subject to all applicable policies and standards adopted by the council for representation of indigent persons in this state.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-12-4 and 17-12-11 are included in the annotations for this Code Section.

Duty exists whether felony or misdemeanor charged. — Former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4 required that counsel be appointed for indigent defendants, whether charged with a felony or misdemeanor, if such persons could be imprisoned under the state law of Georgia if found guilty. Lowrance v. State, 183 Ga. App. 421, 359 S.E.2d 196 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Procedure used by county in appointing attorney for indigent did not violate due process since, in the event the public defender's office was unavailable, attorneys were appointed from an alphabetical list in an equitable manner and special considerations were given in death penalty cases. Lewis v. State, 255 Ga. 101, 335 S.E.2d 560 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Court's discretion. — While the court does not have the duty to appoint counsel for defendants who do not meet the indigency standard, the court does have the discretion to do so and this discretion must be affirmatively exercised, based on the individual circumstances of each case; the court cannot simply deny all such requests as a matter of policy. Flanagan v. State, 218 Ga. App. 598, 462 S.E.2d 469 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Trial court erred in denying a nonindigent defendant's request for appointed counsel and proceeding to trial without first ascertaining whether the defendant exercised reasonable diligence in attempting to retain counsel or considering other special circumstances. Flanagan v. State, 218 Ga. App. 598, 462 S.E.2d 469 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to appoint counsel for a nonindigent defendant. Pierce v. State, 222 Ga. App. 245, 474 S.E.2d 112 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

If a trial court did not hold a plea withdrawal hearing and did not make a record of the court's determination of the defendant's indigency for appeal, the appellate court could not determine if the trial court abused the court's discretion or followed the procedures of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-12-2(5), 17-12-31, 17-12-4(a) and Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 29.2, 29.3, 29.5. Schlau v. State, 261 Ga. App. 303, 582 S.E.2d 243 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Trial court's failure to delay trial long enough to ascertain whether retained defense counsel's absence was attributable to reasons beyond the defendant's control violated the defendant's right to counsel of the defendant's choosing. Turman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 570, 613 S.E.2d 126 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-11).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by proceeding with trial and refusing to delay the proceedings after concluding that the defendant did not exercise reasonable diligence in procuring counsel because the record showed that the defendant repeatedly claimed, over a period of three months, that the defendant was in the process of retaining counsel, and the defendant was advised on multiple occasions by the trial court to make a better effort to do so. Hatcher v. State, 320 Ga. App. 366, 739 S.E.2d 805 (2013).

Effect of execution of eligibility form for court-appointed counsel. — Defendant's execution of an "eligibility affidavit form," essentially a financial statement made for the purpose of informing county indigent defense program of an accused's financial condition, constituted a request for court-appointed counsel once judicial proceedings were initiated and did not constitute an invocation of the right to counsel for Fifth Amendment purposes; thus, a statement given to police while in custody was not taken in violation of the defendant's constitutional rights because at the time the defendant completed the form, no adversarial criminal proceeding had been initiated against the defendant and no Sixth Amendment concerns had come into play; reversing Hatcher v. State, 212 Ga. App. 46, 441 S.E.2d 673 (1994). State v. Hatcher, 264 Ga. 556, 448 S.E.2d 698 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1038, 115 S. Ct. 1405, 131 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Noncompliance held denial of counsel. — Failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4 and implementing rules effectively denied the defendant counsel since no inquiry was made of the defendant regarding the defendant's efforts to retain an attorney and the defendant's inability to pay the required retainer. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 401 S.E.2d 43 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-4).

Mandamus is proper remedy for failure of public defender's office to appoint appellate counsel. — Trial court properly held that the trial court did not have authority to appoint appellate counsel for a defendant because, under the Georgia Indigent Defense Act of 2003, a defendant was required to direct a request for indigent representation directly to the public defender's office. It appeared that the defendant, who had been sentenced to prison, would be eligible under O.C.G.A. § 17-12-23; although the defendant claimed that the public defender's office would not heed the defendant's requests, the defendant was not without a remedy as the defendant could apply for a writ of mandamus under O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20. Bynum v. State, 289 Ga. App. 636, 658 S.E.2d 196 (2008).

Right to appointed counsel on direct appeal. — Convicted defendant had the right to appointed counsel on direct appeal; therefore, a trial court was required to determine that the defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the defendant's right to counsel prior to allowing the defendant's appointed counsel to withdraw. A remand was required for consideration of whether the waiver was knowing and voluntary. Calmes v. State, 312 Ga. App. 769, 719 S.E.2d 516 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0538, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 324 (Ga. 2012).

17-12-24. Financial eligibility for indigent defense services representation; operation of public defender's office.

(a) The circuit public defender, any other person or entity providing indigent defense services, or the system established pursuant to Code Section 17-12-80 shall determine if a person or juvenile arrested, detained, or charged in any manner is an indigent person entitled to representation under this chapter.

(b) The circuit public defenders shall administer and coordinate the day-to-day operations of their respective offices and shall supervise the assistant public defenders and other staff serving in the office.

(c) The circuit public defender shall keep and maintain appropriate records, which shall include the number of persons represented, including cases assigned to other counsel based on conflict of interest; the offenses charged; the outcome of each case; the expenditures made in carrying out the duties imposed by this chapter; and any other information requested by the council.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code Section 17-12-2 are included in the annotations for this Code Section.

"Indigent person." — If defendant retains trial counsel and then claims indigence on appeal, the defendant bears the burden of making that fact known to the trial court or some responsible state official. Seay v. State, 220 Ga. App. 418, 469 S.E.2d 496 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-2).

Because the trial court did not hold a plea withdrawal hearing and did not make a record of the court's determination of the defendant's indigency for appeal, the appellate court could not determine if the trial court abused the court's discretion or followed the procedures of former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-12-2(5), 17-12-32, 17-12-4(a) and Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 29.2, 29.3, 29.5. Schlau v. State, 261 Ga. App. 303, 582 S.E.2d 243 (2003).

Defendant failed to show that the trial court abused the court's discretion in determining that the defendant was not entitled to a transcript free of charge and, contrary to the defendant's claim, the trial court was not required as a matter of law to follow the public defender's determination of indigence for that purpose. Roberson v. State, 335 Ga. App. 606, 782 S.E.2d 671 (2016), aff'd, 300 Ga. 632, 797 S.E.2d 104 (2017).

17-12-25. Salary of public defender; private practice prohibited.

(a) Each circuit public defender shall receive an annual salary of $99,526.00, and cost-of-living adjustments may be given by the General Assembly in the General Appropriations Act by a percentage not to exceed the average percentage of the general increase in salary as may from time to time be granted to employees of the executive, judicial, and legislative branches of government; provided, however, that any increase for such circuit public defender shall not include within-grade step increases for which classified employees as defined by Code Section 45-20-2 are eligible. Any increase granted pursuant to this subsection shall become effective at the same time that funds are made available for the increase for such employees. The Office of Planning and Budget shall calculate the average percentage increase. Each circuit public defender may also be entitled to an accountability court salary supplement as set forth in Code Section 17-12-25.1.

(b) The county or counties comprising the judicial circuit may supplement the salary of the circuit public defender in an amount as is or may be authorized by local Act or in an amount as may be determined by the governing authority of the county or counties, whichever is greater.

(c) No circuit public defender shall engage in the private practice of law for profit or serve concurrently in any judicial office.

"(2) If funds are so appropriated, then Part I of this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2015, for purposes of making the initial appointments of the Court of Appeals Judges created by Part I of this Act, and for all other purposes, Part I of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2016.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, T. 27, C. 32 and former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-5 are included in the annotations for this Code Section.

Additional compensation when representation protracted. — Local rule authorizing a trial judge to approve compensation in addition to a fee schedule if there was protracted representation due to extraordinary circumstances was consistent with the former Georgia Criminal Justice Act. Dickens v. State, 147 Ga. App. 25, 248 S.E.2d 36 (1978).

Attorney applying for appointment under former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-12-60 and 17-12-61 was not precluded from seeking compensation. In re Whatley, 256 Ga. 289, 347 S.E.2d 602 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-12-5).

In appealing compensation, mandamus is proper remedy. — Proper remedy for appointed counsel to pursue in appealing compensation for a criminal case is mandamus against the governing authority of the county. Davis v. Bomar, 123 Ga. App. 493, 181 S.E.2d 509 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 32, T. 27).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under Ga. L. 1968, p. 999, § 6, are included in the annotations for this Code Section.

Public defender may practice private civil law, but not private criminal law. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-60 (decided under Ga. L. 1968, p. 999, § 6).

Judge of the recorder's court was engaged in the practice of criminal law for the purposes of the former provisions. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U73-120 (decided under Ga. L. 1968, p. 999, § 6).

17-12-25.1. Accountability court supplement.

(a) Whenever a circuit has implemented a drug court division, mental health court division, or veterans court division, then on and after January 1, 2016, the state shall pay the circuit public defender in such circuit an annual accountability court supplement of $6,000.00. Such supplement shall be paid from state funds by the Georgia Public Defender Council in equal monthly installments as regular compensation.

(b) Notwithstanding Code Sections 17-12-27 and 17-12-28, the accountability court salary supplement paid pursuant to this Code section shall not be included in any calculation of compensation paid to assistant circuit public defenders or investigators that is measured as a percentage of a circuit public defender's salary.

(c) When a local law provides for a salary to be paid based on a percentage of, total compensation for, or similar mathematical relationship to a circuit public defender's salary, the accountability court salary supplement paid pursuant to this Code section shall not be included in the calculation of compensation to be paid by a county, municipality, or consolidated government.

(d) Notwithstanding subsection (b) of Code Section 17-12-25 and Code Section 17-12-30, on and after January 1, 2016, no county or counties comprising the circuit shall increase an aggregate county salary supplement paid to the circuit public defender or a state-paid position appointed pursuant to this article, if such supplement is $50,000.00 or more.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2015, p. 919, § 4-1(b)(1) and (2)/HB 279, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "(b)(1) Part I of this Act shall become effective only if funds are appropriated for purposes of Part I of this Act in an appropriations Act enacted at the 2015 regular session of the General Assembly.

17-12-26. Budget of the council.

The council shall prepare and submit to the director of the Office of Planning and Budget its budget estimate necessary for fulfilling the purposes of this chapter in accordance with Code Section 45-12-78. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2008, p. VO1, which amended this Code section, was passed by the General Assembly as HB 529 at the 2007 regular session but vetoed by the Governor on May 30, 2007. The General Assembly overrode that veto on January 28, 2008, and the Act became effective on that date.

(g) In the event the council disapproves an alternative delivery system either in its initial application or annual review, such system may appeal such decision to the council under such rules and procedures as shall be prescribed by the council.

The term shall not include payment by a county or municipality for office space and other supplies as set forth in Code Section 17-12-34.

17-12-51. Repayment of attorney's fees as condition of probation.

(a) When a defendant who is represented by a public defender, who is paid in part or in whole by a county, enters a plea of nolo contendere, first offender, or guilty or is otherwise convicted, the court may impose as a condition of probation repayment of all or a portion of the cost for providing legal representation and other expenses of the defense if the payment does not impose a financial hardship upon the defendant or the defendant's dependent or dependents. The defendant shall make the payment through the community supervision officer to the county.

(b) When a defendant who is represented by a public defender, who is paid in part or in whole by a municipality, enters a plea of nolo contendere, first offender, or guilty or is otherwise convicted, the court may impose as a condition of probation repayment of all or a portion of the cost for providing legal representation and other expenses of the defense if the payment does not impose a financial hardship upon the defendant or the defendant's dependent or dependents. The defendant shall make the payment through the community supervision officer to the municipality.

(c) If a defendant who is represented by a public defender, who is paid for entirely by the state, enters a plea of nolo contendere, first offender, or guilty or is otherwise convicted, the court may impose as a condition of probation repayment of all or a portion of the cost for providing legal representation and other costs of the defense if the payment does not impose a financial hardship upon such defendant or such defendant's dependent or dependents. Such defendant shall make such payment through the community supervision officer to the Georgia Public Defender Council for payment to the general fund of the state treasury.

(d) In determining whether or not a payment imposed under this Code section imposes a financial hardship upon a defendant or defendant's dependent or dependents and in determining the amount of the payment to impose, the court shall consider the factors set forth in Code Section 17-14-10. The public defender may provide the court with an estimate of the cost for providing to the defendant the legal representation and other expenses of the defense. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Legislative intent. — Defendant sentenced in 2005 for conduct occurring in 2004 was properly required to reimburse a county for court-appointed attorney fees; the Georgia Supreme Court held that such authority was inherent in a trial court's broad sentencing powers and that O.C.G.A. § 17-12-51(a), which was enacted in 2006, indicated some legislative intent to authorize imposition of such a condition. Pless v. State, 286 Ga. App. 235, 648 S.E.2d 752 (2007).

17-12-52. Recovery of payment or reimbursement by a county or municipality.

(a) A county or municipality may recover payment or reimbursement from a person who has received legal assistance from a public defender paid in part or in whole by the county or municipality:

(1) If the person was not eligible to receive such legal assistance; or

(2) If the person has been ordered to pay for the legal representation and other expenses of the defense pursuant to Code Section 17-12-51 and has not paid for the legal services.

(b) An action shall be brought within four years after the date on which the legal services were received.

(c) In determining the amount of the payment imposed under this Code section, the court shall consider the factors set forth in Code Section 17-14-10. The public defender may provide the court with an estimate of the cost for providing to the defendant the legal representation and other expenses of the defense.

(d) This Code section shall not apply to proceedings involving a child pursuant to Chapter 11 of Title 15, relating to juvenile proceedings.

17-13-1. Requirements as to applications for requisitions for extradition of fugitives from justice of this state.

In addition to rules adopted by the Governor, the following rules shall be observed as a condition precedent to obtaining a requisition by him for the extradition of any fugitive from the justice of this state:

(1) The application for a requisition shall be made to the Governor by a district attorney, prosecuting attorney of a state court, judge of a city or state court, or the mayor of any municipal corporation of this state and must show the full name of the fugitive for whom extradition is asked, the crime charged, the state or territory to which he has fled, the full name of the person suggested to act as agent of this state to receive and convey the fugitive to this state, the agent in no case to be the prosecutor; but the Governor may, in his discretion, appoint some other suitable person as agent of this state to receive and convey the fugitive. The application must also show that the ends of public justice require that the fugitive shall be brought back to this state for trial and that the requisition is not wanted for the purpose of enforcing the collection of a debt or for any private purpose whatever but solely for the purpose of a criminal prosecution as provided by law;

(2) The application shall be accompanied by the affidavit of the prosecutor, if any, stating that the requisition is wanted for the sole purpose of punishing the accused and not in any way to collect a debt or money or to enforce the payment thereof;

(3) If the fugitive has been indicted, two certified copies of the indictment or presentment shall be forwarded to the Governor with the application; and

(4) If no indictment has been preferred and an affidavit is the basis of the requisition, the affidavit shall describe the crime committed, with all the particularity required in an indictment, and two certified copies of the affidavit shall accompany the petition for the requisition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Standard of review for asylum state. — Court considering release on habeas corpus can do no more than decide whether extradition documents on their face are in order, whether petitioner has been charged with a crime in the demanding state, whether the petitioner is the person named in the request for extradition, and whether the petitioner is a fugitive. The court may not look beyond the demanding state's charges to determine if the extradition request was a pretext to enable that state to commit the petitioner civilly. Oliver v. Barrett, 269 Ga. 512, 500 S.E.2d 908 (1998).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Person who goes from one state to another before serving full sentence. — If a person is convicted of a felony committed by that person in one state, and the person goes into another state, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, before serving the full term for which the person was sentenced, the person thereby becomes a fugitive from justice. Brown v. Lowry, 185 Ga. 539, 195 S.E. 759 (1937); Frazier v. Grimes, 221 Ga. 375, 145 S.E.2d 39 (1965).

If a person is convicted of a felony committed by that person in one state, and the person goes into another state, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, before serving the full term for which the person was sentenced, the person thereby becomes a fugitive from justice within the meaning of U.S. Const., Art. IV, Sec. II. King v. Mount, 196 Ga. 461, 26 S.E.2d 419 (1943).

Extradition of convict whose parole revoked. — Paroled convict whose parole has been revoked because of a violation of the conditions of parole may be extradited from one state to another on the ground that the convict is a convict whose sentence has not expired and who therefore is charged with a crime. Frazier v. Grimes, 221 Ga. 375, 145 S.E.2d 39 (1965).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In habeas corpus case, burden is on petitioner to show why extradition warrant should not be executed. — When, in the trial of a habeas corpus case, it appears that the respondent is holding the petitioner in custody under an executive warrant based upon an extradition proceeding, and the warrant is regular on the warrant's face, the burden is cast upon the petitioner to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed since there is a presumption that the Governor complied with the Constitution and law, and this presumption continues until the contrary appears. Law reviews. — For comment on Watson v. Grimes, 218 Ga. 631, 129 S.E.2d 795 (1963), see 26 Ga. B.J. 92 (1963).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

O.C.G.A. T. 17, C. 13, A. 1 is an enactment of the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act. Fain v. Thurman, 247 Ga. 569, 277 S.E.2d 503 (1981).

Construction with Interstate Detainer Agreement. — Prisoner incarcerated in a jurisdiction that has adopted the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act is entitled to the procedural protections of that act particularly the right to a pretransfer hearing before being transferred to another jurisdiction, pursuant to Art. IV of the Detainer Agreement. Lambert v. Jones, 250 Ga. 603, 299 S.E.2d 716 (1983).

Constitutionality of extradition procedures. — Interstate extradition is intended to be a summary proceeding. Therefore, its summary nature does not offend any constitutional guarantees to which the fugitive is entitled. McCullough v. Stynchcombe, 243 Ga. 24, 252 S.E.2d 453 (1979).

O.C.G.A. T. 17, C. 13, A. 1 is not unconstitutional on the grounds that the statute does not provide for notice, hearing, and adjudication of the issues of identity of the accused as the offender, whether the accused was sufficiently charged in the demanding state, and whether the accused is a fugitive from justice as to the demanding state prior to the accused's delivery up and removal from this state to the demanding state. Fain v. Thurman, 247 Ga. 569, 277 S.E.2d 503 (1981).

Double jeopardy. — No double jeopardy can arise out of a decision in an extradition proceeding. Broughton v. Griffin, 244 Ga. 365, 260 S.E.2d 75 (1979).

Summary nature of extradition procedures. — Once a habeas corpus court has found extradition papers to be legally sufficient, any further consideration of the petitioner's defenses, including any defense based on an enforceable judgment, violates the clear intention of the legislature in enacting the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-13-20 et seq., that an extradition proceeding be of a summary nature. Prince v. Mitchell, 257 Ga. 30, 354 S.E.2d 422 (1987).

Issue to be properly decided by demanding state. — While a mother's right to custody awarded by a Georgia court under former § 19-9-40 et seq. may certainly be raised as a defense to Tennessee charges of kidnapping the child and may even be dispositive of the issue of whether the mother and grandmother took the child unlawfully, that issue nonetheless was to be properly decided in Tennessee, the court of the demanding state, not by a court in the asylum state, Georgia. Prince v. Mitchell, 257 Ga. 30, 354 S.E.2d 422 (1987).

Cited in Harmon v. State, 222 Ga. 845, 152 S.E.2d 861 (1967); Stynchcombe v. Boulware, 240 Ga. 295, 240 S.E.2d 86 (1977).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Arrest of fugitives in this state generally. — Unless the fugitive from a foreign state commits some criminal act in this state, a Georgia court will not issue a warrant for the fugitive's arrest except pursuant to this article, in which case the sheriff is then required, under extradition procedures, to deliver the fugitive before the proper Georgia court where the fugitive has the right to contest the fugitive's extradition by writ of habeas corpus. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-24.

Penalty for delivery of fugitive to foreign bondsman rather than proper court. — If the sheriff fails to deliver the fugitive before the proper court, and instead delivers the fugitive up to the foreign bondsman, the fugitive will be subject to criminal prosecution. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-24.

Pick up and return of parolees. — Parolees under supervision in this state pursuant to the former Uniform Act for Out-of-State Parolee Supervision could be picked up and returned to the sending state upon compliance with the requirements of the Act and without necessity of extradition proceedings. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-39.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Habeas petition dismissed. — Trial court properly dismissed an inmate's petition for habeas corpus for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted based on a finding that such was prematurely filed in that no governor's warrant had been issued or served from the seeking state at the time the petition was filed and the inmate had only been arrested for Georgia offenses; moreover, to the extent that the inmate might have been seeking to challenge an arrest without a warrant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, insufficient facts were pled which supported such a claim. 17-13-22. Duty of Governor to have fugitives from justice arrested and delivered to executive authorities of other states.

Subject to this article, the Constitution of the United States, and any and all acts of Congress enacted in pursuance thereof, it is the duty of the Governor of this state to have arrested and delivered up to the executive authority of any other state any person charged in that state with treason, felony, or other crime, who has fled from justice and is found in this state.

History. — Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 2.

Use of "demand" not required. — Actual use of the word "demand" in the requisition is not required. Pahno v. Mathews, 226 Ga. 216, 173 S.E.2d 704 (1970).

Use of "request" constitutes a demand. — Requisition of the Governor of another state using the word "request" rather than "demand," constitutes a demand by that state upon this state to return the prisoner, as is required by this section. Pahno v. Mathews, 226 Ga. 216, 173 S.E.2d 704 (1970).

Misdemeanor conviction is extraditable. Graham v. State, 231 Ga. 820, 204 S.E.2d 630 (1974).

Offenses for which fugitive may be tried. — Fugitive from justice may be tried for any offense committed in the state to which the fugitive is returned, though the offense may have been committed before the demand and surrender, and though it be not the particular offense on account of which the fugitive was brought back for trial. Lascelles v. State, 90 Ga. 347, 16 S.E. 945, 35 Am. St. R. 216 (1892), aff'd, 148 U.S. 537, 13 S. Ct. 687, 37 L. Ed. 549 (1893).

Not a fugitive from justice if not in demanding state at time of indictment. — Person for whose delivery a demand has been made under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 2, and who shows conclusively, and upon conceded facts, that the person was not within the demanding state at the time stated in the indictment, nor at any time when the acts were, if ever, committed, is not a fugitive from justice. Dawson v. Smith, 150 Ga. 350, 103 S.E. 846 (1920) (superseded by later cases, see Aikens v. Turner, 241 Ga. 401, 245 S.E.2d 660 (1978); Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539 (1979)).

Applicability to persons who voluntarily enter state. — Neither the language of Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 2 nor former Penal Code 1910, § 1352 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-13-4 or O.C.G.A § 17-13-22) limited the arrest and rendition to one who voluntarily comes within this state. Kelly v. Mangum, 145 Ga. 57, 88 S.E. 556 (1916).

Warrant is but prima facie evidence sufficient to hold accused. — In extradition proceedings, if the Governor of the state upon whom the demand is made issues a warrant for the apprehension and delivery of such a person, the warrant is but prima facie sufficient to hold the accused, and it is open to the accused, on habeas corpus proceedings, to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed, the presumption being that the Governor has complied with the law. Dawson v. Smith, 150 Ga. 350, 103 S.E. 846 (1920).

Guilt not in issue on writ of habeas corpus. — Courts of the asylum state cannot, upon a writ of habeas corpus, inquire into the guilt or innocence of the accused. Barranger v. Baum, 103 Ga. 465, 30 S.E. 524, 68 Am. St. R. 113 (1898); Blackwell v. Jennings, 128 Ga. 264, 57 S.E. 484 (1907).

Burden in habeas corpus case of showing why warrant should not be executed. — When, in the trial of a habeas corpus case, it appears that the respondent holds the petitioner in custody under an executive warrant based upon an extradition proceeding, and the warrant is regular on the warrant's face, the burden is cast upon the petitioner to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed. The presumption is that the Governor has complied with the Constitution and the law, and this presumption continues until the contrary appears. Mathews v. Foster, 209 Ga. 699, 75 S.E.2d 427 (1953); Baldwin v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 390, 116 S.E.2d 207 (1960).

Allegations insufficient to bar extradition. — Allegations that the state waited a year and half to send a warrant and that the conviction was only a misdemeanor, and that the petitioner had obtained work, married, and now has a family, and has incurred obligations, even if proved, are not sufficient to act as a bar to extradition proceedings. Graham v. State, 231 Ga. 820, 204 S.E.2d 630 (1974).

Cited in Hart v. Mangum, 146 Ga. 497, 91 S.E. 543 (1917); Powell v. Brown, 281 Ga. 609, 641 S.E.2d 519 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

General Assembly intended that misdemeanors be covered. — This section, by the use of the words "other crime," clearly expresses the intention of the General Assembly that the Governor shall extradite persons charged with a misdemeanor in other states. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 251.

17-13-23. Form of demand for extradition of person charged with crime in another state.

No demand for the extradition of a person charged with a crime in another state shall be recognized by the Governor unless in writing, alleging, except in cases arising under Code Section 17-13-25, that the accused was present in the demanding state at the time of the commission of the alleged crime and that thereafter he fled from the state, and accompanied by a copy of an indictment found, or by information supported by affidavit in the state having jurisdiction of the crime, or by a copy of an affidavit made before a magistrate there, together with a copy of any warrant which was issued thereupon, or by a copy of a judgment of conviction or of a sentence imposed in execution thereof, together with a statement by the executive authority of the demanding state that the person claimed has escaped from confinement or has broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole. The indictment, information, or affidavit made before the magistrate must substantially charge the person demanded with having committed a crime under the law of the state; and the copy of the indictment, information, affidavit, judgment of conviction, or sentence must be authenticated by the executive authority making the demand.

History. — Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 3.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

How presence of accused in demanding state when crime committed ascertained. — Whether or not the accused was present in the demanding state at the time of the commission of the crime may be ascertained from the demand as well as from the accompanying documents. Mitchell v. Dodd, 238 Ga. 638, 235 S.E.2d 15 (1977).

All reasonable presumptions are indulged to sustain the sufficiency of the instrument charging the crime. Baker v. Smith, 233 Ga. 644, 212 S.E.2d 819 (1975).

Mere defects overlooked so long as charge constitutes a crime. — So long as the charge made against one whose extradition is sought legally constitutes a crime, mere defects in the indictment as an instrument of criminal proceedings will be disregarded. Baker v. Smith, 233 Ga. 644, 212 S.E.2d 819 (1975).

Demand based solely on warrant for arrest is insufficient. — Demand for extradition must be based not on a warrant for arrest but on an indictment, on information supported by affidavit, or on an affidavit made before a magistrate together with any warrant for arrest issued thereon. The thrust of this rule is not directed so much to the recitals in the extradition warrant as to the fact that an arrest warrant without more is not sufficient. Carver v. Stynchcombe, 243 Ga. 477, 254 S.E.2d 856 (1979).

Indictment for escape not required. — There is no requirement that the fugitive be separately indicted for escape or that there be an affidavit before a magistrate attesting to the escape. McLeod v. Barrett, 271 Ga. 569, 522 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

If indictment accompanies requisition, this state will make no further determination as to probable cause. — If a copy of an indictment accompanies the requisition, no further determination of the existence of probable cause to arrest will be made by this state for in the interest of comity and the expeditious administration of justice the state will rely on the official representation that probable cause to arrest has been constitutionally found in the demanding state. Batton v. Griffin, 241 Ga. 548, 246 S.E.2d 667 (1978).

Foreign state's indictment sufficient to describe circumstance of crime's committal. — Indictment from another state substantially charging the person demanded with having committed a crime under the law of the foreign state, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-13-23, sufficiently describes the "circumstance of its committal" as required by the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-13-20 et seq. Grubbs v. Stynchcombe, 251 Ga. 39, 302 S.E.2d 552 (1983).

Requirement that signature of prosecutor or prosecuting officer appear on indictment. — It is not necessary that the requisition show that the prosecutor's name has been endorsed on the back of the indictment or that the indictment has been signed by the proper prosecuting officer, although these matters may be required by the statutes of the demanding state. Baker v. Smith, 233 Ga. 644, 212 S.E.2d 819 (1975).

Witnesses need not be listed on the information. Baker v. Smith, 233 Ga. 644, 212 S.E.2d 819 (1975).

Recitation in requisition that it is accompanied by affidavit. — It is not necessary that the requisition or the governor's warrant recite that the requisition is accompanied by an affidavit made before a magistrate. Wollweber v. Martin, 226 Ga. 20, 172 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

No warrant need accompany affidavit, unless warrant was issued. — Affidavit is a supporting document of the Governor's requisition. It does not need to be accompanied by a warrant unless in fact a warrant was issued. Gramlick v. Griffin, 230 Ga. 20, 195 S.E.2d 446 (1973).

Affidavit not rendered insufficient by reason of fact that warrant does not issue. — If no warrant is in fact issued upon the affidavit which accompanies the requisition, then the affidavit is not rendered insufficient by reason of that fact. Gramlick v. Griffin, 230 Ga. 20, 195 S.E.2d 446 (1973).

Affidavit made and sworn to by the prosecuting attorney, which asserts that the prosecutor knows the contents of the information and believes the contents to be true, is sufficient. Baker v. Smith, 233 Ga. 644, 212 S.E.2d 819 (1975).

Necessity for certification of affidavit by judge or clerk of court. — If the affidavit of complaint upon which extradition is sought shows that it was made before a magistrate, it is not necessary that a judge or clerk of court certify that such was the case. Wollweber v. Martin, 226 Ga. 20, 172 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

Sufficiency of information supported by affidavit which lacks notarial seal. — Information supported by affidavits which are executed in the presence of a notary public and authenticated by the Governor of another state, although lacking a notarial seal, is sufficient to authorize the warrant of the Governor of Georgia. Baker v. Smith, 233 Ga. 644, 212 S.E.2d 819 (1975).

Affidavit sworn to before a named person designated as "notary public, county prosecutor or county judge" is a description sufficient to show that such person was a "magistrate" within the meaning of Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 3 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-13-23). Bryant v. Griffin, 220 Ga. 154, 137 S.E.2d 640 (1964).

Evidentiary facts need not be stated in the affidavit. Wollweber v. Martin, 226 Ga. 20, 172 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

Sufficiency of averment that relator was in demanding state when crime committed. — When a requisition for extradition incorporates by reference an attached authenticated copy of an indictment of the demanding state, specifically charging the relator with having committed a crime in that state on a day certain, and if the requisition asserts that the relator fled from the demanding state, the requisition has sufficiently averred that the relator was in the demanding state at the time the crime was committed. Mitchell v. Dodd, 238 Ga. 638, 235 S.E.2d 15 (1977).

Sufficiency of papers supported by affidavit executed before notary public. — Extradition papers, otherwise admittedly in order, are not insufficient if accompanied by an information and an affidavit in support thereof executed in the presence of a notary public rather than an affidavit executed before a magistrate. Nevil v. Tyson, 230 Ga. 438, 197 S.E.2d 340 (1973).

Habeas corpus petition to challenge warrant. — Detainee who was arrested pursuant to a fugitive warrant could challenge through a petition for habeas corpus the factual basis of the allegation that the detainee was present in the demanding state at the time of the crime. St. Lawrence v. Bartley, 269 Ga. 94, 495 S.E.2d 18 (1998).

Not error to deny habeas corpus and remand for delivery to demanding state if section complied with. — If no question is presented or raised as to the legality or the sufficiency of the documents originally transmitted by the Governor of the demanding state, and if those documents, together with the demand of the Governor of the demanding state for extradition, comply in all respects with the requirements of this section, it is not error for the trial court to deny the habeas corpus and to remand the petitioner to the custody of the sheriff for delivery over to the proper authorities of the demanding state. DeWitt v. O'Neal, 225 Ga. 645, 171 S.E.2d 144 (1969).

Erroneous issuance of warrant grounds for relief. — In a habeas corpus proceeding, if it was shown that the Governor issued an extradition warrant pursuant to the mandatory terms of the Constitution and O.C.G.A. § 17-13-23, i.e., with the understanding that the petitioner had committed a crime in the demanding state and had fled therefrom, relief should have been granted based on a stipulation that the petitioner had not committed a crime while in the demanding state. Jenkins v. Garrison, 265 Ga. 42, 453 S.E.2d 698 (1995).

Extradition of one at large on bail pending appeal of federal conviction. — One at large on bail pending appeal of one's federal conviction can be extradited by a sister state for the purpose of serving sentences imposed by that state. Extradition under such circumstances does not violate constitutional due process rights of the party extradited. Crane v. State, 233 Ga. 264, 210 S.E.2d 800 (1974).

Defendant was not fugitive from justice. — Because a detainee who was arrested pursuant to a fugitive warrant proved by a preponderance of the evidence that the detainee was not present in the demanding state at the time of the crime, the habeas court did not err in finding that the detainee was not a fugitive from justice. St. Lawrence v. Bartley, 269 Ga. 94, 495 S.E.2d 18 (1998).

(a) When it is desired to have returned to this state a person charged in this state with a crime, and such person is imprisoned or is held under criminal proceedings then pending against him in another state, the Governor of this state may agree with the executive authority of the other state for the extradition of the person before the conclusion of the proceedings or of his term of sentence in the other state, upon condition that the person be returned to the other state, at the expense of this state, as soon as the prosecution in this state is terminated.

(b) The Governor of this state may also surrender, on demand of the executive authority of any other state, any person in this state who is charged in the manner provided in Code Section 17-13-43 with having violated the laws of the state whose executive authority is making the demand, even though such person left the demanding state involuntarily.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Sufficiency of supporting documents is always open to judicial inquiry. — Question as to whether or not the extradition warrant under which an alleged fugitive from justice is held is supported by documents from the demanding state legally sufficient to authorize the person's extradition is always open to judicial inquiry in a habeas corpus proceeding. Brown v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 388, 104 S.E.2d 907 (1958).

17-13-25. Extradition of persons not present in demanding state at time of commission of crime.

The Governor of this state may also surrender, on demand of the executive authority of any other state, any person in this state charged in such other state in the manner provided in Code Section 17-13-23 with committing an act in this state, or in a third state, intentionally resulting in a crime in the state whose executive authority is making the demand and the provisions of this article not otherwise inconsistent shall apply to such cases, even though the accused was not in that state at the time of the commission of the crime and has not fled therefrom.

History. — Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 6.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Section not preempted by federal law. — If the defendant was charged with taking actions in Georgia which resulted in the commission of a crime in Florida, the defendant contended that since the defendant never "fled" Florida, and federal law only authorizes extradition to states from which the fugitive has fled, the defendant was not subject to extradition in this case and that O.C.G.A. § 17-13-25, which authorizes extradition in cases such as this, should be preempted by federal law; the Supreme Court found no basis for a finding of preemption in the defendant's argument and thus found that the section could form the basis for the defendant's extradition. Haupt v. Mitchell, 256 Ga. 844, 353 S.E.2d 345 (1987).

Absence from demanding state when crime committed is not a defense. — That accused was not present in the demanding state at the time of the alleged commission of the offense no longer presents a valid defense. Aikens v. Turner, 241 Ga. 401, 245 S.E.2d 660 (1978).

Absence from demanding state not a defense when the offense is nonsupport. — Fact that the accused was not present in the other state at the time of the alleged commission of the offense of nonsupport is not a valid defense to an extradition proceeding brought under this section for the offense of nonsupport does not require the presence of the accused in the demanding state at the time of the alleged commission of the crime. Johnstone v. Deyton, 233 Ga. 146, 210 S.E.2d 692 (1974).

Demanding state's requisition showing the crime was committed in this state. — In a habeas corpus proceeding where the requisition of the Governor of the demanding state conclusively shows that the crime charged was committed in this state and not in the demanding state, the person so accused cannot be extradited as a fugitive from justice under 18

U.S.C. § 3182. Watson v. Grimes, 218 Ga. 631, 129 S.E.2d 795 (1963).

Governor's warrant is prima facie evidence of requirements for issuance. — Warrant of the Governor in an extradition is prima facie evidence of the existence of every fact of a crime necessary for the warrant's issuance. Sellers v. Griffin, 226 Ga. 565, 176 S.E.2d 75 (1970).

One seeking habeas corpus must overcome prima facie case of Governor's warrant. — Person held upon a Governor's warrant in an extradition proceeding and who is seeking to be released on a habeas corpus writ must introduce evidence sufficient to overcome the prima facie case on the issue for which the person is being prosecuted in the demanding state. Sellers v. Griffin, 226 Ga. 565, 176 S.E.2d 75 (1970).

Erroneous issuance of warrant grounds for relief. — In a habeas corpus proceeding, if it is shown that the Governor issued an extradition warrant pursuant to the mandatory terms of the Constitution and O.C.G.A. § 17-13-23, i.e., with the understanding that the petitioner had committed a crime in the demanding state and had fled therefrom, relief should have been granted based on a stipulation that the petitioner had not committed a crime while in the demanding state. 17-13-26. Investigation of case upon receipt of demand for extradition.

When a demand for the surrender of a person charged with a crime shall be made upon the Governor of this state by the executive authority of another state, the Governor may call upon the Attorney General or any prosecuting officer in this state to investigate or assist in investigating the demand, to report to him the situation and circumstances of the person so demanded, and to advise whether he ought to be surrendered.

Extradition hearings need not be personally conducted by the Governor so long as the final decision is personally made by the Governor. Hooten v. State, 245 Ga. 250, 264 S.E.2d 192, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 942, 100 S. Ct. 2168, 64 L. Ed. 2d 797 (1980).

extradition. Lively v. Fulcher, 244 Ga. 771, 262 S.E.2d 93 (1979).

This section refers to the facts relating to the requisition and supporting documents of the demanding state, not to the facts of the offense charged. Wollweber v. Martin, 226 Ga. 20, 172 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

Violation of state extradition law as basis of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. — Violation of state extradition law can serve as the basis of a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action if the violation of state law causes the deprivation of rights protected by the Constitution and statutes of the United States. Harden v. Pataki, 320 F.3d 1289 (11th Cir. 2003).

Recitation that requisition is accompanied by affidavit. — It is not necessary that the requisition or the Governor's warrant recite that the requisition is accompanied by an affidavit made before a magistrate. Wollweber v. Martin, 226 Ga. 20, 172 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

Failure of the extradition warrant to list the documents supporting the requisition does not mean that the extradition warrant does not substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of the warrant's issuance. Carver v. Stynchcombe, 243 Ga. 477, 254 S.E.2d 856 (1979).

Affidavit showing no crime committed. — When the affidavit supporting the request for extradition shows that no crime was committed, the affadavit is insufficient to sustain an extradition warrant. Brown v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 388, 104 S.E.2d 907 (1958).

Sufficiency of supporting documents always open to judicial inquiry. — Question as to whether or not the extradition warrant under which an alleged fugitive from justice is held is supported by documents from the demanding state legally sufficient to authorize the fugitive's extradition is always open to judicial inquiry in a habeas corpus proceeding. Brown v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 388, 104 S.E.2d 907 (1958).

Burden of showing why warrant should not be executed. — When, in the trial of a habeas corpus case, it appears that the respondent is holding the petitioner in custody under an executive warrant based upon an extradition proceeding, and the warrant is regular on the warrant's face, the burden is cast upon the petitioner to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed since there is a presumption that the Governor complied with the Constitution and law and this presumption continues until the contrary appears. Baldwin v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 390, 116 S.E.2d 207 (1960).

If the warrant is regular on the warrant's face, the burden is cast upon the petitioner to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed. The presumption is that the Governor has complied with the Constitution and the law, and this presumption continues until the contrary appears. Wollweber v. Martin, 226 Ga. 20, 172 S.E.2d 605 (1970).

(a) No person arrested upon a warrant shall be delivered over to the agent whom the executive authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of a court of record in this state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his surrender, of the crime with which he is charged, and that he has the right to demand and procure legal counsel. If the prisoner or his counsel shall state that he or they desire to test the legality of his arrest, the judge of the court of record shall fix a reasonable time to be allowed him within which to apply for a writ of habeas corpus. When the writ is applied for, notice thereof, and of the time and place of hearing thereon, shall be given to the prosecuting officer of the county in which the arrest is made and in which the accused is in custody and to the agent of the demanding state.

(b) Any officer who shall deliver to the agent for extradition of the demanding state a person in his custody under the Governor's warrant, in willful disobedience of subsection (a) of this Code section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000.00 or be imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Presumption is that Governor has complied with constitution and law, and this presumption continues until the contrary appears. McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953).

Authority of court once extradition granted. — Once the Governor has granted extradition, a court in a habeas corpus proceeding can do no more than decide whether the extradition documents on their face are in order; whether the petitioner has been charged with a crime in the demanding state; whether the petitioner is the person named in the request for extradition; and whether the petitioner is a fugitive. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979); Stynchcombe v. Smith, 244 Ga. 548, 261 S.E.2d 342 (1979).

Habeas corpus relief denied. — Trial court properly denied a prisoner's petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-13-30 seeking to block extradition; O.C.G.A. § 42-5-50 did not prevent defendant from being extradited while the defendant's motion for a new trial was pending. Bradford v. Brown, 277 Ga. 92, 586 S.E.2d 631 (2003).

Trial court properly dismissed an inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted based on a finding that such was prematurely filed in that no governor's warrant had been issued or served from the seeking state at the time the petition was filed and the inmate had only been arrested for Georgia offenses; moreover, to the extent that the inmate might have been seeking to challenge an arrest without a warrant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, insufficient facts were pled which supported such a claim. Powell v. Brown, 281 Ga. 609, 641 S.E.2d 519 (2007).

Georgia habeas court did not err by not examining a probable cause determination by a Washington magistrate because extradition documents were facially valid, a defendant had four felony charges pending in Washington, the defendant was the same person named in the extradition documents, and the defendant was a fugitive from Washington authorities; there was sufficient prima facie evidence to show that the defendant was a fugitive from justice. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 356, 667 S.E.2d 95 (2008).

State meets the state's burden if the state produces an executive warrant, valid on the warrant's face. Cota v. Benson, 239 Ga. 695, 238 S.E.2d 332 (1977).

Executive warrant is prima facie sufficient to hold petitioner. — When in the trial of a habeas corpus case, it appears that the respondent holds the petitioner in custody under an executive warrant based upon an extradition proceeding, and the warrant is regular on the warrant's face, it is prima facie sufficient to hold the petitioner. McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953).

Executive warrant casts upon petitioner burden of showing why the warrant should not be executed. McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953).

Petitioner must establish petitioner is not person named in warrant. — If petitioner contended that the superior court erred in denying the petitioner's petition for a writ of habeas corpus since there was no evidence that the petitioner, Dan Covert, was the "Dan Covert" named in the governor's warrant, there was no error since if the petitioner was not the person named in the governor's warrant, the petitioner had the burden to show that the petitioner was not. Covert v. Lee, 256 Ga. 357, 349 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

Requisition not supported by indictment or affidavit contradicts prima facie showing made by warrant. — Because the respondent tendered in evidence the requisition of the Governor of another state without a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3182, the respondent in effect contradicted the prima facie showing made by the warrant alone, and thus showed that the petitioner was being illegally restrained in that the warrant was not based on a valid requisition and the trial court erred in remanding the petitioner to the respondent. McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953).

Habeas corpus proceedings summary and defenses should be raised in demanding state. — Once a habeas corpus court has found the extradition papers to be legally sufficient, a further inquiry into a petitioner's statutory and constitutional defenses violates the clear intention that an extradition proceeding be of a summary nature. Defenses that the statute of limitations has run on the offense for which the petitioner is being extradited, that the petitioner has been denied a speedy trial, and all other due process questions are issues to be properly decided by courts in the demanding state, not by courts in any asylum state. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

Absence from demanding state at time of commission of alleged crime is no longer a defense which is cognizable in an extradition proceeding. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

Hardship resulting from delay in warrant as defense. — Allegations that the state where a petitioner for habeas corpus was arrested and convicted waited a year and a half to send a warrant and that the conviction was only a misdemeanor, and that the petitioner had obtained work, married, and now has a family, and has incurred obligations, even if proved, are not sufficient to act as a bar to extradition proceedings. Graham v. State, 231 Ga. 820, 204 S.E.2d 630 (1974).

Erroneous issuance of warrant grounds for relief. — In a habeas corpus proceeding, if it is shown that the Governor issued an extradition warrant pursuant to the mandatory terms of the Constitution and O.C.G.A. § 17-13-23, i.e., with the understanding that the petitioner had committed a crime in the demanding state and had fled therefrom, relief should have been granted based on a stipulation that the petitioner had not committed a crime while in the demanding state. Jenkins v. Garrison, 265 Ga. 42, 453 S.E.2d 698 (1995).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Extradition procedure generally. — Unless the fugitive from a foreign state commits some criminal act in this state, a Georgia court will not issue a warrant for the fugitive's arrest except pursuant to this article, in which case the sheriff is then required, under extradition procedures, to deliver the fugitive before the proper court in this state where the fugitive has the right to contest extradition by writ of habeas corpus. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-24.

Delivery of fugitive to foreign bondsman. — If the sheriff fails to deliver the fugitive before the proper court, and instead delivers the fugitive up to the foreign bondsman, the fugitive will be subject to criminal prosecution. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-24.

Considerations of proper identity may outweigh waiver of extradition. — While it would seem that this section would not apply if the prisoner has already waived extradition, the question of identity of the accused could well override all other considerations, and the need for a hearing in this respect would be just as great if a waiver was made in the paroling state as if it was not. While the prisoner has no right to formal extradition proceedings, the proceedings having already been waived, due caution would seem to require that the prisoner be taken before a judge prior to delivery. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 252.

Applicability to parolees. — This section is not applicable to prisoners who are paroled to this state and who have signed a waiver of extradition as a condition of parole. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 253.

Whenever any person within this state shall be charged, on the oath of any credible person before any judge or magistrate of this state, with the commission of any crime in any other state and, except in cases arising under Code Section 17-13-25, with having fled from justice, or with having been convicted of a crime in that state and having escaped from confinement, or with having broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, or whenever complaint shall have been made before any judge or magistrate in this state setting forth, on the affidavit of any credible person in another state, that a crime has been committed in such other state and that the accused has been charged in such state with the commission of the crime and, except in cases arising under Code Section 17-13-25, has fled from justice, or with having been convicted of a crime in that state and having escaped from confinement, or with having broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, and is believed to be in this state, the judge or magistrate shall issue a warrant directed to any peace officer, commanding him to apprehend the person named therein, wherever he may be found in this state, and to bring him before the same or any other judge, magistrate, or court who or which may be available in or convenient of access to the place where the arrest may be made, to answer the charge or complaint and affidavit. 17-13-34. Arrest without warrant of a person charged with a crime in another state.

The arrest of a person may be lawfully made by any peace officer or private person, without a warrant, upon reasonable information that the accused stands charged in the courts of a state with a crime punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year, but when so arrested, the accused must be taken before a judge or magistrate with all practicable speed and complaint must be made against him under oath, setting forth the ground for the arrest, as provided in Code Section 17-13-33; and thereafter the answer of the accused shall be heard as if he had been arrested on a warrant.

History. — Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 14; Ga. L. 1990, p. 8, § 17.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34 is justified under the Fourth, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments in that it is based upon a standard which comports with the constitutional standard of probable cause as set forth in Beck v. Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 85 S. Ct. 223, 13 L. Ed. 2d 142 (1964). Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 487, 306 S.E.2d 629 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1069, 104 S. Ct. 975, 79 L. Ed. 2d 213 (1984).

Section provides grounds in addition to § 17-4-20 for warrantless arrest. — While under former Code 1933, § 27-207 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-4-20), a lawful arrest without a warrant can be made by an officer only if the offense is committed in the officer's presence; if the offender is endeavoring to escape; or if for other cause there is likely to be a failure of justice for want of an officer to issue a warrant, the General Assembly by the enactment of Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 14 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34) made provision for another instance in which an arrest without a warrant might be lawfully made. Fields v. State, 211 Ga. 335, 85 S.E.2d 753 (1955); Wheeler v. Stynchcombe, 234 Ga. 240, 215 S.E.2d 244 (1975).

Satisfaction of "all practicable speed" requirement. — Taking a defendant before a judge for a commitment hearing on Monday after defendant's Friday arrest satisfies the "all practicable speed" requirement. Wheeler v. Stynchcombe, 234 Ga. 240, 215 S.E.2d 244 (1975).

Officer need only have probable cause that out-of-state warrant was issued. — When an officer believes that an out-of-state warrant has been issued, and this belief is based on reliable information from out-of-state officials that the issuance of a warrant is imminent, this amounts to probable cause to arrest, which is the applicable standard for a warrantless arrest in Georgia, even if this belief is mistaken and does not meet the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34 that the officer have "reasonable information." Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 487, 306 S.E.2d 629 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1069, 104 S. Ct. 975, 79 L. Ed. 2d 213 (1984).

Inmate's challenge to an arrest via habeas corpus. — Trial court properly dismissed an inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted based on a finding that such was prematurely filed in that no governor's warrant had been issued or served from the seeking state at the time the petition was filed and the inmate had only been arrested for Georgia offenses; moreover, to the extent that the inmate might have been seeking to challenge an arrest without a warrant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, insufficient facts were pled which supported such a claim. Powell v. Brown, 281 Ga. 609, 641 S.E.2d 519 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Arrest not authorized until requisition issued. — Prior to the issuance of a requisition for extradition, an officer of this state is not authorized to make an arrest under a warrant issued by an inferior court of another state. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 362.

17-13-35. Commitment of person accused of crime in another state to county jail pending receipt of demand from other state generally.

If from the examination before the judge or magistrate it appears that the person held is the person charged with having committed the crime alleged and, except in cases arising under Code Section 17-13-25, that he has fled from justice, the judge or magistrate must, by a warrant reciting the accusation, commit him to the county jail for such a time, not exceeding 30 days and which time must be specified in the warrant, as will enable the arrest of the accused to be made under a warrant of the Governor on a requisition of the executive authority of the state having jurisdiction of the offense, unless the accused gives bail, as provided in Code Section 17-13-36, or until he shall be legally discharged.

Purpose. — Purpose of Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, §§ 15-17 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-13-35 - 17-13-37) of the extradition law is to prevent unreasonably lengthy periods of confinement of fugitives pending consummation of extradition proceedings by the demanding state. There is, however, no indication of any legislative intent to restrict the period within which the Governor of another state may issue a rendition warrant to the period within which the court which issues the fugitive warrant may commit the accused or require the accused to give bond. Stynchcombe v. Whitley, 240 Ga. 776, 242 S.E.2d 720 (1978).

The guilt or innocence of the accused as to the crime of which he is charged may not be inquired into by the Governor or in any proceeding after the demand for extradition accompanied by a charge or crime in legal form as provided for in this article shall have been presented to the Governor, except as it may be involved in identifying the person held as the person charged with the crime.

History. — Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 20.

This section applies to a habeas corpus proceeding. DeBusschere v. Rutledge, 229 Ga. 128, 189 S.E.2d 397 (1972).

Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 20 applies when the appellant has been ordered extradited to the demanding state by a habeas corpus judgment. Hollis v. State, 233 Ga. 206, 210 S.E.2d 694 (1974).

Powers of court on habeas corpus once extradition ordered. — Once the Governor has granted extradition, a court considering release on habeas corpus can do no more than decide whether the extradition documents on the documents' face are in order; whether the petitioner has been charged with a crime in the demanding state; whether the petitioner is the person named in the request for extradition; and whether the petitioner is a fugitive. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

Proceeding is summary and defenses should be raised in demanding state. — Once a habeas corpus court has found the extradition papers to be legally sufficient, a further inquiry into a petitioner's statutory and constitutional defenses violates the clear intention that an extradition proceeding be of a summary nature. Defenses that the statute of limitations has run on the offense for which the petitioner is being extradited, that the petitioner has been denied a speedy trial, and all other due process questions are issues to be properly decided by courts in the demanding state, not by courts in any asylum state. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

Absence for demanding state at time crime committed. — Absence from the demanding state at the time of the commission of an alleged crime is no longer a defense which is cognizable in an extradition proceeding. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

Guilt or innocence not proper subject for inquiry on habeas corpus. — Evidence offered by the plaintiff in a habeas corpus case to the effect that no crime was committed in the demanding state involves guilt or innocence, and if there is no issue of identity in the case, it being admitted in the application that the plaintiff is the person named in the papers, there is no reason for the trial judge to hear evidence of this nature. DeBusschere v. Rutledge, 229 Ga. 128, 189 S.E.2d 397 (1972).

Question of the guilt or innocence of an alleged fugitive from justice is not a proper subject matter of inquiry in a habeas corpus proceeding in which the alleged fugitive resists extradition. Straub v. Sanders, 231 Ga. 674, 203 S.E.2d 862 (1974).

17-13-42. Demand for return of fugitives in other states by Governor of this state; issuance of warrant to person receiving fugitive.

Whenever the Governor of this state shall demand a person charged with a crime or with escaping from confinement or breaking the terms of his bail, probation, or parole in this state, from the executive authority of any other state, or from the chief justice or an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia authorized to receive such demand under the laws of the United States, he shall issue a warrant under the seal of the office of the Governor to some agent, commanding him to receive the person so charged if delivered to him and convey him to the proper officer of the county in this state in which the offense was committed.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Payment of expenses of person who receives fugitive. — Under the provisions of former Code 1933, § 40-305 and Ga. L. 1951, p. 726, § 22 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-13-42 and 45-12-51), the Governor is required to appoint a person to act as agent of this state to receive a fugitive from justice from this state and return the fugitive to the authorities of the county from which one is a fugitive. When the Governor acts under these provisions, it necessarily follows that the person is authorized to pay the expenses, such as lodging at hotels and meals. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 97.

17-13-43. Application for issuance of demand.

(a) When the return to this state of a person charged with crime in this state is required, the prosecuting attorney shall present to the Governor his written application, in which application shall be stated the name of the person so charged, the crime charged against him, the approximate time, place, and circumstance of its commission, the state in which he is believed to be, including the location of the accused therein at the time the application is made, and certifying that, in the opinion of the prosecuting attorney, the ends of justice require the arrest and return of the accused to this state for trial and that the proceeding is not instituted to enforce a private claim.

(b) When the return to this state is required of a person who has been convicted of a crime in this state and who has escaped from confinement or broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense was committed, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, or the warden of the institution or sheriff of the county from which escape was made shall present to the Governor a written application for a requisition for the return of such person. The application shall state the name of the person, the crime of which he was convicted, the circumstances of his escape from confinement or of the breach of the terms of his bail, probation, or parole and the state in which he is believed to be, including the location of the person therein at the time application is made.

(c) The application shall be verified by affidavit, executed in duplicate, and accompanied by two certified copies of the indictment returned, information and affidavit filed, or of the complaint made to the judge or magistrate, stating the offense with which the accused is charged, or of the judgment of conviction or of the sentence. The prosecuting officer, parole board, warden, or sheriff may also attach such further affidavits and other documents in duplicate as he shall deem proper to be submitted with such application. One copy of the application, with the action of the Governor indicated by endorsement thereon, and one of the certified copies of the indictment, complaint, information and affidavits, or of the judgment of conviction or of the sentence shall be filed in the office of the Governor, to remain of record in that office. The other copies of all papers shall be forwarded with the Governor's requisition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Application of Governor and indictment adequate to require extradition. — If an application of the Governor of Tennessee is accompanied by the indictment found against a person and that indictment substantially charges the person with having committed crimes in Tennessee, the application for extradition adequately describes the circumstances of the commission of the crimes charged so the trial court does not err in denying habeas relief to the person. Grubbs v. Stynchcombe, 251 Ga. 39, 302 S.E.2d 552 (1983).

Indictment from foreign jurisdiction sufficient to indicate circumstances of crime's committal. — Indictment from another state substantially charging the person demanded with having committed a crime under the law of the foreign state, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-13-23, sufficiently describes the "circumstance of its committal" as required by the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act, O.C.G.A.§ 17-13-20 et seq. Grubbs v. Stynchcombe, 251 Ga. 39, 302 S.E.2d 552 (1983).

Issues on habeas corpus. — Issues of whether the person is a fugitive and whether there is a proper demand for extradition are proper subjects of judicial inquiry in a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus following arrest and detention on an executive warrant for extradition. DeBusschere v. Rutledge, 229 Ga. 128, 189 S.E.2d 397 (1972).

The expenses shall be the fees paid to the officers of the state on whose governor the requisition is made and shall not exceed 8¢ per mile for all necessary travel in returning such prisoner.

(a) Any person arrested in this state charged with having committed any crime in another state or alleged to have escaped from confinement, or broken the terms of his bail, probation, or parole, may waive the issuance and service of the warrant provided for in Code Sections 17-13-27 and 17-13-28 and all other procedure incidental to extradition proceedings, by executing or subscribing in the presence of a judge of any court of record within this state a writing which states that he consents to return to the demanding state; provided, however, that before the waiver shall be executed or subscribed by the person it shall be the duty of the judge to inform the person of his rights to the issuance or service of a warrant of extradition and to obtain a writ of habeas corpus as provided in Code Section 17-13-30.

(b) If and when the consent has been duly executed, it shall forthwith be forwarded to the office of the Governor of this state and filed therein. The judge shall direct the officer having the person in custody to deliver forthwith the person to the duly accredited agent or agents of the demanding state and shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the agent or agents a copy of the consent. Nothing in this Code section shall be deemed to limit the rights of the accused person to return voluntarily and without formality to the demanding state; nor shall this waiver procedure be deemed to be an exclusive procedure or to limit the powers, rights, or duties of the officers of the demanding state or of this state.

Return of parolee without formal extradition upon revocation of parole. — Prisoner paroled from another state and permitted to come to this state under supervision of parole officials of this state may be returned to that state without the necessity of formal extradition proceedings following service of a sentence in this state and revocation of the parole if the parole contained a condition that the prisoner would waive extradition in the event the prisoner's parole was ever revoked. 1958-59 Op. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Former Code 1933, §§ 27-3008 - 27-3010 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-8 - 17-14-10) contemplated a hearing and specific written findings by the court in determining whether the court would order restitution and the amount thereof; thus, the law does not deny the defendant's due process rights to a hearing on the damage issue. Cannon v. State, 246 Ga. 754, 272 S.E.2d 709 (1980).

Statutory provisions on restitution do not deprive a defendant of a jury trial on the question of damages contrary to Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. VII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI) since this constitutional guarantee applies only to civil damage cases and does not apply to a penalty to be determined by the court in a criminal case. Cannon v. State, 246 Ga. 754, 272 S.E.2d 709 (1980).

Application of article to offenses occurring before effective date of article does not constitute application of ex post facto law since article does not affect the substantive right of restitution but is merely a more detailed enactment regarding that subject. Cannon v. State, 246 Ga. 754, 272 S.E.2d 709 (1980).

Purpose of restitution is not solely to restore the crime victim to the financial status enjoyed before the crime was committed. Other purposes include punishing and rehabilitating persons convicted of crimes and deterring others from criminal behavior. Accordingly, restitution is punishment when ordered as part of a criminal sentence. Harris v. State, 261 Ga. 859, 413 S.E.2d 439 (1992).

Order of restitution under § 42-8-35. — O.C.G.A. Art. 1, Ch. 14, T. 17 may be used to discern nature of order of restitution made under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35. This can be done since under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35 "restitution" is an authorized condition of probation and enactment of that article "is merely a more detailed enactment regarding restitution." Newton v. Fred Haley Poultry Farm, 15 Bankr. 708 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

Avoiding restitution by declining relief. — Statutory scheme does not contain any provision for an unconditional order to make restitution. Thus, the offender or inmate may avoid an order to make restitution by declining the relief upon which the restitution order is conditioned. Conklin v. Zant, 202 Ga. App. 214, 413 S.E.2d 536 (1991).

17-14-1. Declaration of public policy.

It is declared to be the policy of this state that restitution to their victims by those found guilty of crimes or adjudicated as having committed delinquent acts is a primary concern of the criminal justice system and the juvenile justice system.

History. — Code 1933, § 27-3001, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1382, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 5/HB 172.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 1/HB 172, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005.'"

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Written findings no longer required. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq., written findings are no longer required when ordering an offender to make restitution; as a result, Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 SE2d 432 (1985), and its progeny, are disapproved to the extent those cases were authority for any cases involving restitution orders issued on or after July 1, 2005, the effective date of the Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Restitution damages proper. — Under preponderance of evidence standard, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant caused the $5,306.28 in damages to a stolen truck since the defendant was found in possession of the truck, and therefore the defendant was responsible for all damages that the truck incurred; as a result, the trial court properly ordered the defendant to pay a judgment of restitution in the amount of $5,306.28. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Agreement to pay restitution exceeding victim's damages. — Sentencing court may not require an offender to make restitution on those counts of a multi-count indictment which are dismissed pursuant to a negotiated plea agreement; however, if an offender voluntarily agrees to make restitution in a certain amount, even if such amount exceeds the victim's "damages," the sentencing court may incorporate that agreement into the court's restitution order. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-19.

Bail bondsman is entitled to restitution of the amount of the bond and costs upon the conviction of the accused of jumping bail pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-10-51. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U94-17.

17-14-2. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Conviction" means an adjudication of guilt of or a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to the commission of an offense against the laws of this state. Such term includes any such conviction or plea, notwithstanding the fact that sentence was imposed pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42. Such term also includes the adjudication or plea of a juvenile to the commission of an act which, if committed by an adult, would constitute a crime under the laws of this state.

(2) "Damages" means all special damages which a victim could recover against an offender in a civil action, including a wrongful death action, based on the same act or acts for which the offender is sentenced, except punitive damages and damages for pain and suffering, mental anguish, or loss of consortium. Such special damages shall not be limited by any law which may cap economic damages. Special damages may include the reasonably determined costs of transportation to and from court proceedings related to the prosecution of the crime.

(3) "Offender" means any natural person, firm, partnership, association, public or private corporation, or other legal entity that has been sentenced for any crime or any juvenile who has been adjudged delinquent.

(4) "Ordering authority" means:

(A) A court of competent jurisdiction;

(B) The State Board of Pardons and Paroles;

(C) The Department of Corrections;

(D) The Department of Juvenile Justice;

(E) The Department of Community Supervision; or

(F) Any combination thereof, as is required by the context.

(5) "Parent" means a person who is the legal mother as defined in Code Section 15-11-2, the legal father as defined in Code Section 15-11-2, or the legal guardian. Such term shall not include a foster parent.

(6) "Relief" means any parole or other conditional release from incarceration; the awarding of earned time allowances; reduction in security status; or placement in prison rehabilitation programs, including, but not limited to, those in which the offender receives monetary compensation.

(7) "Restitution" means any property, lump sum, or periodic payment ordered to be made by any offender or other person to any victim by any ordering authority. Where the victim is a public corporation or governmental entity or where the offender is a juvenile, restitution may also be in the form of services ordered to be performed by the offender.

(8) "Restitution order" means any order, decree, or judgment of an ordering authority which requires an offender to make restitution.

(9) "Victim" means any:

(A) Natural person or his or her personal representative or, if the victim is deceased, his or her estate; or

(B) Any firm, partnership, association, public or private corporation, or governmental entity suffering damages caused by an offender's unlawful act; provided, however, that the term "victim" shall not include any person who is concerned in the commission of such unlawful act as defined in Code Section 16-2-20.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 1/HB 172, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005.'"

Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 5-1/HB 242, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2014, and shall apply to all offenses which occur and juvenile proceedings commenced on and after such date. Any offense occurring before January 1, 2014, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior adjudication for the purpose of imposing a disposition that provides for a different penalty for subsequent adjudications, of whatever class, pursuant to this Act. The enactment of this Act shall not affect any prosecutions for acts occurring before January 1, 2014, and shall not act as an abatement of any such prosecutions."

Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 6-1/HB 310, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that this Act shall apply to sentences entered on or after July 1, 2015.

Law reviews. — For article on the 2015 amendment of this Code section, see 32 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 231 (2015).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Measure of damages for restitution. — In measuring the appropriate damages for restitution, the court must determine what type of civil action could be maintained by the victim and what the proper measure of damages would be in such a civil action. Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 S.E.2d 432 (1985), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Fees paid for special grand jurors, traverse jurors, and bailiffs could not properly be included in the sum which the defendant was ordered to pay a victim as restitution. Martin v. State, 189 Ga. App. 483, 376 S.E.2d 888, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 376 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

Trial court erred in basing the court's determination of the measure of damages for purposes of restitution on the replacement cost of the items stolen rather than fair market value. Fewox v. State, 243 Ga. App. 651, 534 S.E.2d 121 (2000).

While the trial court was thorough in making the court's written findings as to the calculation of defendant's restitution award, it was difficult to ascertain whether the trial court improperly included amounts which would have been attributed to three counts of theft by receiving for which the defendant was acquitted, which was improper under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2(2); thus, the matter was remanded for clarification. McMahon v. State, 273 Ga. App. 574, 615 S.E.2d 625 (2005).

As part of a probation order, the trial court did not err in awarding restitution for tools and equipment missing from a stolen truck despite the fact that the probationer was not charged with the theft of those items as restitution could be ordered to the extent that the victim suffered damages as the result of the theft and the theft of the vehicle caused the disappearance of the equipment. Tindol v. State, 284 Ga. App. 45, 643 S.E.2d 329 (2007).

Trial court's order on remand to include the required factual findings supporting the court's restitution judgment, after considering the defendant's financial condition and probable future earning capacity was upheld on appeal as the order: (1) did not include any amount arising out of the counts which the defendant was acquitted; (2) contained a finding that the award could exceed the total amount of money the defendant took wrongfully because the court was allowed to award all damages which a victim could recover against an offender in a civil action, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2; (3) considered the defendant's financial resources, assets, income, and financial obligations as required under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10; and (4) considered that the defendant's criminal actions cause the victims the loss that the trial court awarded as restitution. McMahon v. State, 284 Ga. App. 192, 643 S.E.2d 236 (2007).

Under preponderance of evidence standard, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant caused the $5,306.28 in damages to a stolen truck since the defendant was found in possession of the truck, and therefore the defendant was responsible for all damages that the truck incurred; as a result, the trial court properly ordered the defendant to pay a judgment of restitution in the amount of $5,306.28. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Trial court did not err in ordering the defendant to pay the victim restitution after the defendant pled guilty to arson in the first degree because the trial court was authorized to find that the preponderance of the evidence showed that the victim owned the house at the time of the fire, and evidence was presented to show the cost of repairs and its relation to the value of the house prior to the fire, in accordance with the law of damages to real property; the evidence of the background of the victim, a real estate investor who repaired houses personally, provided some evidence to show that the investor had knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the cost of repairs, the value of real estate, and the extent of the damages to the investor's property pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-66 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-701). Mayfield v. State, 307 Ga. App. 630, 705 S.E.2d 717 (2011).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to support an amount of $500 in damages for the pistol the defendant stole; while the trial court accepted the replacement cost as the fair market value of the gun, the correct determination for the amount of restitution was the fair market value of the property rather than the replacement cost. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to determine the fair market value of the coin collection the defendant stole; the owner's opinion lacked foundation because there was no showing that the owner had some knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the coins, and absent that foundation, the owner's opinion was nothing more than conjecture, an unsupported conclusion, or a guess. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

Reimbursement of medical expenses is not restitution. — There is no victim suffering damages caused by the defendant's habitual violator or DUI offenses since the county in this case is not a victim as anticipated by the statutory scheme and the medical expenses incurred by the defendant while in custody were not caused by the acts for which the defendant was sentenced; accordingly, the defendant's reimbursement to the county for the defendant's own medical expenses does not fall under the statutory meaning of restitution. Woods v. State, 204 Ga. App. 415, 419 S.E.2d 513 (1992).

Restitution not set by approximation. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant juvenile to pay restitution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3 because the amount of restitution was set by approximation, rather than by a proper opinion of the value of the items damaged; O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 does not permit a trial judge to set the amount of restitution by approximation but requires that the amount be based on proper opinion evidence of fair market value. In the Interest of R.H., 316 Ga. App. 317, 728 S.E.2d 911 (2012).

"Damages" includes interest. — As it is used in the statutory provisions relating to restitution, "damages" includes interest. Corbin v. State, 202 Ga. App. 464, 415 S.E.2d 14 (1992).

"Restitution order." — Sentence of both confinement and restitution was void due to illegality. Queen v. State, 210 Ga. App. 588, 436 S.E.2d 714 (1993).

Because the record made clear that the order extending probation effectively placed upon a juvenile the requirement to make restitution during an upcoming period, thus averting the lapse of the probation with the restitution condition unmet, the extension order constituted a restitution order as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Appellate court vacated the order of restitution and remanded the case to the trial court for clarification as although the trial court ruled in the state's favor, the appellate court was unable to determine whether the trial court found as a matter of fact that the defendant had agreed to pay the full amount of restitution or whether the trial court concluded that it was authorized to award the full amount even if the defendant had not so agreed, which would constitute error. O'Brien v. State, 353 Ga. App. 425, 838 S.E.2d 96 (2020).

Necessity of complying with procedural requirements. — Because the record reflected that the trial court failed to take into consideration any state imposed charges in connection with the restitution payments which the court ordered, remand of the case for a new hearing on the issue of restitution was required. Jones v. State, 246 Ga. App. 857, 542 S.E.2d 584 (2000).

Written findings no longer required. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq., written findings are no longer required when ordering an offender to make restitution; as a result, Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 SE2d 432 (1985), and its progeny, are disapproved to the extent those causes were authority for any cases involving restitution orders issued on or after July 1, 2005, the effective date of the Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Restitution for items not charged as stolen not required. — Trial court was not authorized to order the defendant to make restitution as to items that the defendant was not charged with having stolen. The trial court was authorized to order the defendant to make restitution only to the victims who suffered "damages" as the result of the defendant's acts of theft. Bottoms v. State, 194 Ga. App. 862, 392 S.E.2d 59 (1990).

Restitution for crime which defendant was not charged or convicted. — When a defendant pled guilty in Georgia to forgery after trying to cash a check stolen during a burglary in Tennessee, the restitution part of the sentence was illegal under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2(2) because the state was seeking restitution for the burglary, for which the defendant had not been charged or convicted in Georgia. Furthermore, because the sentence was illegal, the defendant did not waive appeal of the sentence by entering into a negotiated plea. Smith v. State, 292 Ga. App. 689, 665 S.E.2d 399 (2008).

Sentence requiring defendant to pay restitution while incarcerated held illegal. — Because that part of a sentence requiring the defendant to pay restitution while incarcerated and pay specific and substantial amounts of restitution both before the commencement of the prison sentence and while on probation was illegal, that portion was vacated, and the defendant's acquiescence to the sentence, either through plea negotiations or a failure to object to the sentence, did not remove the illegality. Sumner v. State, 284 Ga. App. 308, 643 S.E.2d 831 (2007).

Rental reimbursement for rental of vehicle by victim of vehicle theft was properly included in the amount of restitution although in a suit for damages to a vehicle one cannot ordinarily recover an amount in excess of the fair market value of the vehicle before the vehicle was damaged. Sutton v. State, 190 Ga. App. 56, 378 S.E.2d 491 (1989).

Restitution not paid directly to victim. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2(9), the trial court could properly order the defendant to make restitution to a charitable fund instead of directly to the victim, as the fund incurred expenses as a result of the defendant's conduct. Adams v. State, 291 Ga. App. 681, 662 S.E.2d 782 (2008), overruled on other grounds, Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Standard of proof. — Sufficiency of evidence to support an order of restitution in a criminal case should be measured by the civil standard of preponderance of the evidence. Lawrenz v. State, 194 Ga. App. 724, 391 S.E.2d 703 (1990); Britt v. State, 232 Ga. App. 780, 503 S.E.2d 653 (1998).

Modification of restitution may be ordered by the trial court at any time. — Trial court erred in dismissing a defendant's motion to modify restitution until the time came for the defendant to pay. Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-12, the ordering authority, in this case, the trial court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2, retained jurisdiction to modify the restitution order at any time before the expiration of the relief ordered. Wright v. State, 302 Ga. App. 136, 690 S.E.2d 259 (2010).

Restitution award to homeowners for contractor's false statement to county. — Trial court properly ordered that restitution was to be made directly to the homeowners, even if the homeowners technically were not the direct victims of the crime which the defendant, a contractor, committed of false statement and writing, concealment of facts, under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-20, in applying for a building permit because the homeowners suffered damages due to the lack of oversight of the defendant's work. The evidence at trial directly linked this lack of oversight to the defendant's misrepresentations on the building permit application, and demonstrated that if the defendant had submitted an application that accurately reflected the extent of the work to be performed for the homeowners, more safeguards would have been in place, which would have prevented the extent of the damage. Wilson v. State, 317 Ga. App. 171, 730 S.E.2d 500 (2012).

Restitution is limited by thefts during time period alleged in accusation. — Trial court erred in ordering restitution for $260,637 for thefts from defendant's employer over a 12-year period because the accusation covered only a two-year period during which $57,000 was taken; under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-2(2) and 17-14-10, restitution was limited to damages which the victim could recover in a civil action, based on the same act. Vaughn v. State, 324 Ga. App. 289, 750 S.E.2d 375 (2013), overruled on other grounds by In the Interest of N. T., 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 289 (Ga. Ct. App. 2020).

17-14-3. Requirement of restitution by offender as condition of relief generally.

(a) Subject to the provisions of Code Section 17-14-10, notwithstanding the provisions contained in Chapter 11 of Title 15, and in addition to any other penalty imposed by law, a judge of any court of competent jurisdiction shall, in sentencing an offender, make a finding as to the amount of restitution due any victim, and order an offender to make full restitution to such victim.

(b) If the offender is placed on probation, including probation imposed pursuant to Chapter 11 of Title 15 or Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, or sentence is suspended, deferred, or withheld, restitution ordered under this Code section shall be a condition of that probation, sentence, or order.

(c) If the offender is granted relief by the Department of Juvenile Justice, Department of Corrections, or the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, the terms of any court order requiring the offender to make restitution to a victim shall be a condition of such relief in addition to any other terms or conditions which may apply to such relief.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Condition of probation. — Court-ordered restitution may be imposed as a reasonable condition of probation. Morrison v. State, 181 Ga. App. 440, 352 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3 encompasses a trial court's imposition of restitution as a condition of an offender's probated sentence. Murphy v. State, 182 Ga. App. 791, 357 S.E.2d 147 (1987).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the defendant to pay the full amount of restitution over the course of the defendant's entire probated sentence because allowing the defendant to pay the significant amount of restitution over the course of the probation was a commonsense approach in view of the admittedly limited resources of the defendant. Elsasser v. State, 313 Ga. App. 661, 722 S.E.2d 327 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0949, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 555 (Ga. 2012).

Amount of restitution. — In a burglary case where a sawmill was stripped of copper wiring, there was a preponderance of evidence to support a restitution order when the defendant parked in the same location where burglars parked the previous day, went to a main power room where tools needed for pulling wire and not owned by the sawmill had been left, and had similar tools in the defendant's pickup truck; the amount of a restitution order was not supported by the evidence, however, because the correct determination of the amount of restitution was the fair market value of the property rather than the replacement cost, and witnesses for the state testified only as to replacement value. Hawthorne v. State, 285 Ga. App. 196, 648 S.E.2d 387 (2007).

Amount of restitution cannot be set by approximation. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant juvenile to pay restitution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3 because the amount of restitution was set by approximation, rather than by a proper opinion of the value of the items damaged; O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 does not permit a trial judge to set the amount of restitution by approximation but requires that the amount be based on proper opinion evidence of fair market value. In the Interest of R.H., 316 Ga. App. 317, 728 S.E.2d 911 (2012).

Victim not entitled to restitution for time missed to appear at restitution hearing. — Although the trial court did not err in entering an order requiring the defendant to pay the victim restitution for lost wages based on the work time the victim lost as a direct result of the defendant's criminal conduct towards the victim, which included the 15 days that the victim spent away from work meeting with lawyers, the bank, and law enforcement authorities, as well as the days the victim spent testifying at the criminal proceedings brought against the defendant, the trial court erred in requiring the defendant to compensate the victim for the day the victim took away from work to appear at the restitution hearing. Jackson v. State, 334 Ga. App. 340, 779 S.E.2d 402 (2015).

Necessity of complying with procedural requirements. — That portion of the defendant's sentence which imposed restitution as a condition of probation was reversed and remanded to the trial court with direction that a hearing on the issue of restitution be held at which O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9, regarding the amount, and the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 were to be considered, and the trial court was further directed that the written finding required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 be made. Murphy v. State, 182 Ga. App. 791, 357 S.E.2d 147 (1987).

Trial court's order on remand to include the required factual findings supporting the court's restitution judgment, after considering the defendant's financial condition and probable future earning capacity was upheld on appeal, as the order: (1) did not include any amount arising out of the counts which the defendant was acquitted; (2) contained a finding that the award could exceed the total amount of money the defendant took wrongfully because the court was allowed to award all damages which a victim could recover against an offender in a civil action, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2; (3) considered the defendant's financial resources, assets, income, and financial obligations as required under O.C.G.A. § 17-4-10; and (4) considered that the defendant's criminal actions caused the victim's the loss that the trial court awarded as restitution. McMahon v. State, 284 Ga. App. 192, 643 S.E.2d 236 (2007).

Finding of defendant's ability to pay. — Following the defendant's guilty plea to O.C.G.A. § 16-14-4(a) (RICO), an order of $725,000 restitution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3(a) was supported by evidence that the defendant had the capacity for gainful employment, notwithstanding the defendant's claim that the defendant was disabled; that the defendant had possessed hundreds of thousands of dollars of the victims' money; and that the defendant had a venture in which the defendant claimed $4.8 million. Nelson v. State, 329 Ga. App. 300, 764 S.E.2d 883 (2014).

Avoiding restitution by declining relief. — Statutory scheme does not contain any provision for an unconditional order to make restitution. Thus, the offender or inmate may avoid an order to make restitution by declining the relief upon which the restitution order is conditioned. Conklin v. Zant, 202 Ga. App. 214, 413 S.E.2d 536 (1991).

Showing of wilfulness or inadequacy of alternative punishments required. — If payment of a fine or restitution is made a condition precedent to probation, a defendant's probation may not be revoked or withheld because of the defendant's failure to pay the fine or restitution without a showing of wilfulness on the defendant's part or inadequacy of alternative punishments. Day v. State, 188 Ga. App. 648, 374 S.E.2d 87 (1988), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Sentence requiring defendant to pay restitution while incarcerated held illegal. — Because that part of a sentence requiring the defendant to pay restitution while incarcerated and pay specific and substantial amounts of restitution both before the commencement of the prison sentence and while on probation was illegal, that portion was vacated, and the defendant's acquiescence to the sentence, either through plea negotiations or a failure to object to the sentence, did not remove the illegality. Sumner v. State, 284 Ga. App. 308, 643 S.E.2d 831 (2007).

Multiple causation. — There can be more than one proximate cause of injury for a victim of criminal behavior and molestation by a prior family member did not as a matter of law preclude incurring costs against an individual who molested the victim in the victim's professional capacity. Dorsey v. State, 206 Ga. App. 709, 426 S.E.2d 224 (1992).

Tort limitations period held inapplicable. — Restitution in a sexual abuse case was not barred by the two-year statute of limitation applicable to tort actions since there is nothing in the statutory or case law on restitution to suggest that restitution cannot be awarded after the statute of limitation for an analogous civil action has run. Additionally, even though the amount of damages suffered by the victim, as one consideration setting the upper limit for a restitution amount, is ascertained by looking to the amount of damages available in an analogous civil action, restitution is not synonymous with a civil action and does not preclude a separate civil action. Dorsey v. State, 206 Ga. App. 709, 426 S.E.2d 224 (1992).

Lien not authorized. — Trial court erred in allowing that any restitution sums not paid in full during the term of the defendant's probation be subject to a lien because a court may order restitution only as a condition of any relief, such as probation, and when a defendant's probation is completed the court does not have the authority to continue restitution payments or impose a lien. Jones v. State, 246 Ga. App. 857, 542 S.E.2d 584 (2000).

Cited in Evans v. State, 204 Ga. App. 458, 419 S.E.2d 532 (1992); Hartsell v. State, 288 Ga. App. 552, 654 S.E.2d 662 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Authority to collect payments. — Collection and disbursement of payments of fines and restitution as may be established as conditions upon the grant of parole may be undertaken by probation supervisors employed by the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) so long as such payments are specifically required by court order as the result of a criminal proceeding. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-50.

Payment of fines and restitution during parole. — State Board of Pardons and Paroles may, as a condition of parole, order parolees to commence court imposed payments such as fines and restitution while on parole. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-50.

Restitution required for unemployment fraud. — Employment Security Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-8-1 et seq., does not authorize the imposition of a criminal sentence for unemployment fraud that permits community service in lieu of restitution of overpaid benefits to the Department of Labor. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-15.

17-14-5. Restitution by juvenile delinquent; retention of jurisdiction to enforce order against juvenile after attainment of age 21; transfer of enforcement jurisdiction; parent's obligation for restitution.

(a) It is declared to be the policy of this state to recognize that restitution is consistent with the goal of rehabilitation of delinquent juveniles and to provide restitution in such cases.

(b) Notwithstanding any provision of Chapter 11 of Title 15, the juvenile courts shall order restitution in any case involving delinquent juveniles in the same manner as is authorized by this article for adult offenders.

(c) For purposes of ensuring compliance with the restitution order, the juvenile courts are authorized to retain jurisdiction over a juvenile subject to such restitution order until the juvenile reaches 21 years of age. If the juvenile court retains jurisdiction of such offender as provided in this Code section and the terms of the restitution order are not completed before the offender's twenty-first birthday, the juvenile court shall transfer the restitution order to the superior court.

(d) As an alternative to subsection (c) of this Code section, the juvenile courts are authorized to transfer to the superior courts, and the superior courts are authorized to accept, jurisdiction over enforcement of restitution orders against juveniles who, since entry of the order, have attained 18 years of age.

(e) If the court determines that a juvenile is or will be unable to pay all of the restitution ordered, after notice to the juvenile's parent or parents and an opportunity for the parent or parents to be heard, the court may order the parent or parents to pay any portion of the restitution ordered that is outstanding where the court or a jury finds by clear and convincing evidence that the parent or parents knew or should have known of the juvenile's propensity to commit such acts and the acts are due to the parent's or parents' negligence or reckless disregard for the juvenile's propensity to commit such acts. Upon the eighteenth birthday of the juvenile, the parental obligation to pay restitution shall be terminated.

(f) If the court orders a parent to pay restitution under subsection (e) of this Code section, the court shall take into account the considerations identified in Code Section 17-14-10. If the parent or parents are required to pay restitution under subsection (e) of this Code section, the court shall provide for payment to be made in specified installments and within a specified period of time.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Restitution properly ordered. — Since the amount of medical expenses of a juvenile assault victim was undisputed based on the uncontradicted testimony of the victim in a disposition hearing, there was no error in ordering restitution. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983).

O.C.G.A. § 17-14-5(b) expressly authorized restitution as a condition of the probation of a delinquent juvenile, and the nature and amount of restitution ordered, $ 4,968 in property damage caused by the juvenile's tampering with a sprinkler head, was supported by a preponderance of the evidence. In re W. J. F., 302 Ga. App. 361, 691 S.E.2d 271 (2010).

Extension of probation. — Juvenile's argument on appeal that the juvenile court was not authorized to extend an order of probation for the purpose of payment of restitution, and in doing so, the court assumed a prosecutorial role, lacked merit given the language in O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70(b) and the state policy pronounced in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-5. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

ALR. — Jurisdiction or power of juvenile court to order parent of juvenile to make restitution for juvenile's offense, 66 A.L.R.4th 985.

17-14-6. Setoff of prior total or partial restitution made to victim; reduction of award from the Crime Victims Compensation Board by the amount of restitution; payment of restitution to governmental entities that have compensated the victim.

(a) Where an offender has made total or partial restitution to a victim, the ordering authority shall set off any such amounts and reduce the amount payable to the victim.

(b) The ordering authority shall not order restitution to be paid to a victim or victim's estate if the victim or victim's estate has received or is to receive full compensation for that loss from the offender as a result of a civil proceeding.

(c) Any amount paid to a victim or victim's estate under a restitution order shall reduce the amount payable to a victim or a victim's estate by an award from the Georgia Crime Victims Compensation Board made prior to or after a restitution order under this article.

(d) The ordering authority shall order restitution be paid to the Georgia Crime Victims Compensation Board, other governmental entities, or any individuals, partnerships, corporations, associations, or other legal entities acting on behalf of a governmental entity that have compensated the victim or the victim's estate for a loss incurred by the victim to the extent of the compensation paid for that loss. The ordering authority shall also order restitution for the costs of services provided to persons or entities that have provided services to the victim as a result of the crime. Services that are subject to restitution under this subsection include, but are not limited to, shelter, food, clothing, and transportation. However, a restitution order shall require that all restitution to a victim or victim's estate under the restitution order be made before any restitution to any other person or entity under that restitution order is made.

(e) In the event the ordering authority provides for a setoff or priority in terms of payment of restitution, the ordering authority shall state on the record with specificity the reasons for its action.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Restitution order proper. — Because the defendant conceded to converting the funds of two victims when the defendant entered guilty pleas to two counts of theft by conversion under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-4, under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b) the state was only required to establish the amounts taken from the victims that were expended on their behalf or were already repaid to the victims; the trial court's restitution order, which took those amounts into consideration, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-6(a), was proper. Hartsell v. State, 288 Ga. App. 552, 654 S.E.2d 662 (2007).

Reduction not authorized by codefendant's payment when victims not made whole. — Defendant was not entitled to a reduction in the amount of restitution the defendant owed by the $5,300 the codefendant paid in restitution under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-6 because together the parties were only ordered to pay $30,000, and the evidence showed the defendants stole $43,000 from the victims. Polly v. State, 323 Ga. App. 893, 748 S.E.2d 696 (2013).

Restitution order improper after settlement. — Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant to pay restitution to the victim's estate under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-6(b). The estate dismissed the estate's civil claims against the defendant with prejudice after the parties settled. Taylor v. State, 295 Ga. App. 689, 673 S.E.2d 7, aff'd, 286 Ga. 328, 687 S.E.2d 409 (2009).

Restitution award not supported by evidence. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant to pay restitution in the amount of $7,584.35 to the Crime Victim Compensation Program and $1,000 in token restitution to the victim because the record contained no evidence to support the awards as the state presented no evidence supporting the court's request for $7,584.35, and the record did not show that the trial court considered the factors outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10(a) before requiring restitution as a condition of probation. Watts v. State, 321 Ga. App. 289, 739 S.E.2d 129 (2013).

17-14-7. Right of offender to offer restitution plan to ordering authority; consideration and adoption of plan; hearing to determine restitution; burden of proof; liability among multiple offenders; payment for multiple victims; waiver of victim's rights.

(a) Any offender may offer a restitution plan to the ordering authority. If a plan is offered, it shall be the duty of the ordering authority to consider the factors stated in Code Section 17-14-10 and to make the plan part of a restitution order if acceptable to the ordering authority.

(b) If the parties have not agreed on the amount of restitution prior to sentencing, the ordering authority shall set a date for a hearing to determine restitution. Any dispute as to the proper amount or type of restitution shall be resolved by the ordering authority by the preponderance of the evidence. The burden of demonstrating the amount of the loss sustained by a victim as a result of the offense shall be on the state. The burden of demonstrating the financial resources of the offender or person being ordered to pay restitution and the financial needs of his or her dependents shall be on the offender or person being ordered to pay restitution. The burden of demonstrating such other matters as the ordering authority deems appropriate shall be upon the party designated by the ordering authority as justice requires.

(c) If the ordering authority finds that more than one offender has contributed to the loss of a victim, the court may make each offender liable for payment of the full amount of restitution or may apportion liability among the offenders to reflect the level of contribution to the victim's loss and economic circumstances of each offender.

(d) If the ordering authority finds that more than one victim has sustained a loss requiring restitution by an offender, the court may provide for a different payment schedule for each victim based on the type and amount of each victim's loss and accounting for the economic circumstances of each victim. In any case in which the state or any of its political subdivisions is a victim and thus is due restitution, the ordering authority shall ensure that any other victim receives full restitution before the state or a political subdivision receives restitution.

(e) A victim may waive his or her right to obtain restitution pursuant to this article. Any such waiver shall be made in writing and filed with the court or ordering authority having jurisdiction over the criminal case. Such waiver shall not affect any other rights or remedies that the victim may have against the offender under the laws of this state or the United States or any of the several states.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Written findings no longer required. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq., written findings are no longer required when ordering an offender to make restitution; as a result, Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 SE2d 432 (1985), and its progeny, are disapproved to the extent those cases were authority for any cases involving restitution orders issued on or after July 1, 2005, the effective date of the Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Georgia law no longer requires written findings on restitution. Ezebuiro v. State, 308 Ga. App. 282, 707 S.E.2d 182 (2011).

Restitution order proper. — Because the defendant conceded to converting the funds of two victims when the defendant entered guilty pleas to two counts of theft by conversion under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-4, under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b) the state was only required to establish the amounts taken from the victims that were expended on their behalf or were already repaid to the victims; the trial court's restitution order, which took those amounts into consideration, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-6(a), was proper. Hartsell v. State, 288 Ga. App. 552, 654 S.E.2d 662 (2007).

Under a preponderance of the evidence standard, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant caused the $5,306.28 in damages to a stolen truck since the defendant was found in possession of the truck, and therefore the defendant was responsible for all damages that the truck incurred; as a result, the trial court properly ordered the defendant to pay a judgment of restitution in the amount of $5,306.28. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Trial court did not err in ordering the defendant to pay the victim restitution after the victim pled guilty to arson in the first degree because the trial court was authorized to find that the preponderance of the evidence showed that the victim owned the house at the time of the fire, and evidence was presented to show the cost of repairs and its relation to the value of the house prior to the fire, in accordance with the law of damages to real property; the evidence of the background of the victim, a real estate investor who repaired houses personally, provided some evidence to show that the investor had knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the cost of repairs, the value of real estate, and the extent of the damages to the investor's property pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-66 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-701). Mayfield v. State, 307 Ga. App. 630, 705 S.E.2d 717 (2011).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain an award of $800 restitution under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b) as a special condition of probation because in the course of the robbery with which the defendant was charged under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-40(a)(2), the defendant took $500 cash and $300 in money orders from the car of the victim. Ezebuiro v. State, 308 Ga. App. 282, 707 S.E.2d 182 (2011).

Co-defendant did not show that the trial court abused the court's discretion by ordering the defendant jointly and severally liable for restitution in the case because the amount of restitution ordered was within the limits allowed by law as it did not exceed the victim's damages, and in setting that amount, the trial court specifically considered the factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Hettrick v. State, 334 Ga. App. 115, 778 S.E.2d 369 (2015).

Trial court did not err in ordering restitution because the state met the state's burden of proving the victim's loss by presenting evidence of the amount the victim had paid the defendant and the value of the work the defendant had completed. Wilson v. State, 355 Ga. App. 73, 842 S.E.2d 521 (2020).

No enhancement of sentence by requiring restitution. — Because the trial court's determination of the restitution amount was authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b) and did not unlawfully enhance a defendant's sentence, the defendant did not have a substantive right to have the restitution hearing held within a certain time; the defendant waived the rights to be present and to confrontation by voluntarily choosing not to attend the hearing. Williams v. State, 311 Ga. App. 152, 715 S.E.2d 440 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1915, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 69 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court's award of restitution to the homeowners was supported by a preponderance of the evidence because the homeowners essentially suffered the entire loss of use of the homeowners' home, and the trial court determined that these damages flowed from the defendant's false statement which allowed the defendant, a contractor, to skip the requirements for structural engineering and architectural reports on the contractor's renovation of the owners' residence and to avoid county inspections, which would have avoided or detected problems as the problems arose. Wilson v. State, 317 Ga. App. 171, 730 S.E.2d 500 (2012).

Value of dog for restitution. — Trial court did not err in assessing the value of a dog the defendant killed at $3,000 because evidence of the knowledge, experience, and familiarity of a witness with the value of labrador retrievers trained to hunt created a basis for the value stated. Futch v. State, 314 Ga. App. 294, 723 S.E.2d 714 (2012).

Victim not entitled to restitution for time missed to appear at restitution hearing. — Although the trial court did not err in entering an order requiring the defendant to pay the victim restitution for lost wages based on the work time the victim lost as a direct result of the defendant's criminal conduct towards the victim, which included the 15 days that the victim spent away from work meeting with lawyers, the bank, and law enforcement authorities, as well as the days the victim spent testifying at the criminal proceedings brought against the defendant, the trial court erred in requiring the defendant to compensate the victim for the day the victim took away from work to appear at the restitution hearing. Jackson v. State, 334 Ga. App. 340, 779 S.E.2d 402 (2015).

Waiver of right to restitution hearing. — Although the defendant had a right to a restitution hearing under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b), the defendant waived that right by acquiescing in the trial court's restitution order in the expectation of receiving a more lenient sentence than that recommended by the state (which the defendant in fact did receive). Cameron v. State, 295 Ga. App. 670, 673 S.E.2d 59 (2009).

Defendant waived any error in the decision of the trial court to decide the question of restitution as a part of the defendant's sentencing hearing, rather than in a separate and distinct hearing, because the trial court gave the defendant and the defendant's attorney a choice of when they wanted to hold the sentencing hearing in the case, and they opted to proceed the same day as the jury announced the jury's verdict. Although the defendant's trial attorney indicated that the attorney was not expecting an award of restitution, the attorney did not object to that award, did not present or request to present evidence on the issue of restitution at the time, and did not request a separate hearing on the issue of restitution. Wilson v. State, 317 Ga. App. 171, 730 S.E.2d 500 (2012).

Waiver of error with respect to requirements of restitution hearing. — Defendant waived any error with respect to the statutory requirements of a restitution hearing under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b) because the defendant was allowed to offer argument on the issue of restitution and did not object to the trial court proceeding to decide the issue of restitution at that time; nor did the defendant ask for a continuance, ask that a restitution hearing be set for a later date, or state that the defendant had evidence to present on the question of restitution. Futch v. State, 314 Ga. App. 294, 723 S.E.2d 714 (2012).

Deciding restitution as part of sentencing hearing. — Defendant waived any error in the decision of the trial court to decide the question of restitution as a part of the sentencing hearing, rather than in a separate and distinct hearing, because the defendant did not object to the trial court proceeding to decide the issue of restitution at that time, nor did the defendant ask for a continuance, ask that a restitution hearing be set for a later date, or state that the defendant had evidence to present on the question of restitution. Ezebuiro v. State, 308 Ga. App. 282, 707 S.E.2d 182 (2011).

Defendant failed to present evidence of expenses. — Defendant, who pled guilty to theft by taking under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-2, could not argue that the trial court failed to consider the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 in making a restitution order as the defendant did not meet the burden of proof under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7 in establishing the defendant's expenses as the defendant only told the court that the defendant had to make monthly payments; the defendant made no response when asked if the defendant could make house payments and the like if half the defendant's monthly income was applied to the restitution order. Wimpey v. State, 297 Ga. App. 182, 676 S.E.2d 831 (2009).

Defendant failed to show lack of financial resources. — Defendant was not entitled to relief from the trial court's restitution order because the defendant presented no evidence to prove that the defendant lacked the financial resources to pay such an order. Tobias v. State, 319 Ga. App. 320, 735 S.E.2d 113 (2012).

Restitution inappropriate after state failed to prove value of vehicle. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant to pay restitution after the defendant pled guilty to theft by receiving stolen property, a vehicle, because the state failed to prove the fair market value of a vehicle when no evidence was presented that the condition of the vehicle was considered in determining the value of the vehicle, which appeared to be based totally on the vehicle identification number; although an insurance company that was seeking to recover money from the defendant was forced to value the vehicle before the vehicle was recovered, that did not prevent the state from introducing evidence, such as testimony from the victim or others with such knowledge, concerning the condition of the vehicle at the time of the theft. Browning v. State, 303 Ga. App. 805, 695 S.E.2d 291 (2010).

Apportionment of restitution award not required. — With respect to a trial court's order of restitution to a defendant under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-7 and 17-14-10, although the trial court was permitted to apportion liability between the defendant and another individual who was involved in the fake loan scheme, the court did not commit error by failing to do so as the evidence showed that the defendant was personally responsible for the greater amount of the total loss. Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Restitution order vacated because evidence of victim's damages inadequate. — With respect to a trial court's order of restitution to a defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, the state failed to show the amount of restitution by a preponderance of the evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7 with respect to that portion of the award for "accounting/auditing/attorney fees," such that the order could not stand. Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to support an amount of $500 in damages for the pistol the defendant stole; while the trial court accepted the replacement cost as the fair market value of the gun, the correct determination for the amount of restitution was the fair market value of the property rather than the replacement cost. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to determine the fair market value of the coin collection the defendant stole; the owner's opinion lacked foundation because there was no showing that the owner had some knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the coins, and absent that foundation, the owner's opinion was nothing more than conjecture, an unsupported conclusion, or a guess. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

State failed to meet the state's burden of proof by presenting insufficient evidence as to the amount of restitution for the defendant's arson conviction as the state failed to present evidence of repair cost, save the victim's vague testimony that the victim could not afford to repair the victim's home, and there was likewise no indication that repair of the home would be an absurd undertaking. Overby v. State, 315 Ga. App. 735, 728 S.E.2d 278 (2012).

Restitution cannot be set by approximation. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant juvenile to pay restitution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3 because the amount of restitution was set by approximation, rather than by a proper opinion of the value of the items damaged; O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 does not permit a trial judge to set the amount of restitution by approximation but requires that the amount be based on proper opinion evidence of fair market value. In the Interest of R.H., 316 Ga. App. 317, 728 S.E.2d 911 (2012).

Restitution order vacated because evidence of victim's damages inadequate. — With respect to a trial court's order of restitution to a defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, the state failed to show the amount of restitution by a preponderance of the evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7 with respect to that portion of the award for "accounting/auditing/attorney fees," such that the order could not stand. Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Absence of hearing and prior agreement vacated restitution. — There was no indication that the parties agreed on the amount of restitution prior to sentencing. The court simply announced the restitution order during sentencing without a hearing or any discussion whatsoever, and without any input from the defendant which violated O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b). Parker v. State, 320 Ga. App. 319, 741 S.E.2d 159 (2013).

Juvenile court erred by ordering the juvenile to pay restitution when no restitution hearing was held and there was no evidence adduced at the adjudication and disposition hearings with regard to the amount of the victim's loss or the juvenile's ability to pay restitution; consequently, the case was remanded for a restitution hearing in accordance with the procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq. In the Interest of D. D., 335 Ga. App. 676, 782 S.E.2d 728 (2016).

17-14-8. Apportionment of payments for fines and restitution; payment to victims.

(a) In any case in which a court sentences an offender to pay restitution and a fine, if the court permits the offender to pay such restitution and fine in other than a lump sum, the clerk of any superior court of this state, community supervision officer, county or Department of Juvenile Justice juvenile probation officer, probation officer serving pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, or other official who receives such partial payments shall apply not less than one-half of each payment to the restitution before paying any portion of such fine or any forfeitures, costs, fees, or surcharges provided for by law to any agency, department, commission, committee, authority, board, or bureau of state or local government.

(b) The clerk of any court of this state, community supervision officer, county or Department of Juvenile Justice juvenile probation officer, probation officer serving pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, or other official who receives partial payments for restitution shall pay the restitution amount to the victim as provided in the restitution order not later than the last day of each month, provided that the amount exceeds $100.00. If the amount does not exceed $100.00, the clerk of any court of this state, community supervision officer, county or Department of Juvenile Justice juvenile probation officer, probation officer serving pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, or other official may allow the amount of restitution to accumulate until such time as it exceeds $100.00 or until the end of the next calendar quarter, whichever occurs first.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Hearing. — Statutory purpose of the hearing and the entering of specific written findings is to allow the court to determine whether the court will order restitution and, if so, in what amount. Westmoreland v. State, 192 Ga. App. 173, 384 S.E.2d 249 (1989).

No due process violation. — Former Code 1933, §§ 27-3008 - 27-3010 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-8 - 17-14-10) contemplated a hearing and specific written findings by the court in determining whether the court will order restitution and the amount thereof; thus, the statutory provisions on restitution do not deny defendant's due process rights to a hearing on the damage issue. Cannon v. State, 246 Ga. 754, 272 S.E.2d 709 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 contemplates a hearing and specific written findings by the court in determining whether the court will order restitution. Patterson v. State, 161 Ga. App. 85, 289 S.E.2d 270 (1982); Taylor v. State, 182 Ga. App. 494, 356 S.E.2d 216 (1987); Britt v. State, 232 Ga. App. 780, 503 S.E.2d 653 (1998).

Presentence hearing required. — Sentence imposing restitution on a defendant cannot stand in the absence of a presentence hearing. Thompson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 471, 367 S.E.2d 320 (1988); Owens v. State, 187 Ga. App. 262, 369 S.E.2d 919 (1988); Radford v. State, 223 Ga. App. 312, 477 S.E.2d 428 (1996); Isaac v. State, 237 Ga. App. 723, 516 S.E.2d 575 (1999).

In a case of child molestation, the trial court erred in ordering restitution without holding a restitution hearing and that portion of the defendant's probationary sentence which imposed reimbursement for psychological counseling of the victims required vacating and remand for a hearing on the issue of restitution in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8. Potts v. State, 207 Ga. App. 863, 429 S.E.2d 526 (1993).

Necessity of complying with procedural requirements. — That portion of the defendant's sentence which imposed restitution as a condition of probation was reversed and remanded to the trial court with direction that a hearing on the issue of restitution be held at which O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9, regarding the amount, and the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 were to be considered, and the trial court was further directed that the written finding required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 be made. Murphy v. State, 182 Ga. App. 791, 357 S.E.2d 147 (1987).

Remand proper when no written findings. — When the appeal's court is unable to discern from the designated record any written findings as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8(a), the portion of the sentence imposing restitution will be vacated and remanded to the trial court for the preparation of written findings in compliance with that section. Howard v. State, 213 Ga. App. 542, 445 S.E.2d 532 (1994).

Written findings no longer required. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq., written findings are no longer required when ordering an offender to make restitution; as a result, Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 SE2d 432 (1985), and its progeny, are disapproved to extent those cases were authority for any cases involving restitution orders issued on or after July 1, 2005, the effective date of the Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Restitution damages proper. — Under the preponderance of the evidence standard, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant caused the $5,306.28 in damages to a stolen truck since the defendant was found in possession of the truck, and therefore the defendant was responsible for all damages that the truck incurred; as a result, the trial court properly ordered the defendant to pay a judgment of restitution in the amount of $5,306.28. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Effect on recidivist statute. — Although O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 requires the trial court to consider fact of tender of restitution by criminal offender to a victim before imposing the sentence, the failure of the trial court to consider this fact was not error since the sentence imposed was mandatory under the recidivist statute (O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7). Chappell v. State, 164 Ga. App. 77, 296 S.E.2d 629 (1982), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Amount vacated because conviction to which restitution order was attached was reversed. — Because the state failed to present sufficient evidence to support a finding that the defendant, a mortgage consultant, did not intend to perform the services paid for by a client, only that conviction, out of eight entered by the jury, and the restitution order attached to the conviction, had to be reversed. Patterson v. State, 289 Ga. App. 663, 658 S.E.2d 210 (2008).

17-14-9. Amount of restitution.

The amount of restitution ordered shall not exceed the victim's damages.

History. — Code 1933, § 27-3009, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1382, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 5/HB 172.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 1/HB 172, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005.'"

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Restitution is not synonymous with civil damages. Morrison v. State, 181 Ga. App. 440, 352 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

Necessity of complying with procedural requirements. — That portion of the defendant's sentence which imposed restitution as a condition of probation was reversed and remanded to the trial court with direction that a hearing on the issue of restitution be held at which O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 and the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 were to be considered, and the trial court was further directed that the written finding required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 be made. Murphy v. State, 182 Ga. App. 791, 357 S.E.2d 147 (1987).

Appellate court vacated the order of restitution and remanded the case to the trial court for clarification as although the trial court ruled in the state's favor, the appellate court was unable to determine whether the trial court found as a matter of fact that the defendant had agreed to pay the full amount of restitution or whether the trial court concluded that the court was authorized to award the full amount even if the defendant had not so agreed, which would constitute error. O'Brien v. State, 353 Ga. App. 425, 838 S.E.2d 96 (2020).

Specific findings of fact and maximum amount allowed. — Order for restitution failed to make specific findings of fact and amount awarded exceeded victim's damages. Revis v. State, 223 Ga. App. 470, 477 S.E.2d 880 (1996).

Fees paid for special grand jurors, traverse jurors, and bailiffs could not properly be included in the sum which the defendant was ordered to pay the defendant's victim as restitution. Martin v. State, 189 Ga. App. 483, 376 S.E.2d 888, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 376 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

Measure of damages. — In measuring the appropriate damages for restitution, the court must determine what type of civil action could be maintained by the victim and what the proper measure of damages would be in such a civil action. Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 S.E.2d 432 (1985), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Trial court erred in ordering the defendant juvenile to pay restitution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3 because the amount of restitution was set by approximation, rather than by a proper opinion of the value of the items damaged; O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 does not permit a trial judge to set the amount of restitution by approximation but requires that the amount be based on proper opinion evidence of fair market value. In the Interest of R.H., 316 Ga. App. 317, 728 S.E.2d 911 (2012).

Restitution cannot be determined by approximation. — Evidence was insufficient to support the trial court's finding of the amount of restitution as to beer damaged or destroyed in a store since the storekeeper testified that the storekeeper could not "really give you the exact amount" of the fair market value of the beer and the amount of restitution was set by approximation rather than by a proper opinion of the value. Lovell v. State, 189 Ga. App. 311, 375 S.E.2d 658 (1988).

Amount of restitution ordered for the restoration of a stripped automobile was not supported by evidence since there was no evidence of reasonable hire, nor any evidence of the car's value either at the time of the car's theft, or after the car was stripped. Lomax v. State, 200 Ga. App. 233, 407 S.E.2d 462 (1991).

Evidence was insufficient as a matter of law to support restitution in the amount of $5,000 for a stolen car since no evidence was adduced concerning the value of the car at the time the car was stolen or after the car was returned in damaged condition. Burke v. State, 201 Ga. App. 50, 410 S.E.2d 164 (1991).

Because theft by receiving is analogous to the civil tort of conversion, the court may award the victim of this crime the value of the property at the date the property was converted plus the rental value of the vehicle from that date until the date of trial. In re C.B., 221 Ga. App. 102, 470 S.E.2d 493 (1996).

The court's order to make restitution based on a portion of the difference between the amount received by the victim from the insurer on a totaled car and the price of the victim's replacement vehicle, plus deductible, did not comply with the law. In re C.B., 221 Ga. App. 102, 470 S.E.2d 493 (1996).

Victim's testimony as to the estimated cost of repairs of the victim's truck and original purchase price of a damaged CD player did not establish the fair market value. Cardwell v. State, 225 Ga. App. 337, 484 S.E.2d 38 (1997).

An order of restitution in the amount of $5,982 based on an unsupported assertion that the defendant collected that amount in food stamps was reversed and remanded for determination of the amount in accordance with the rules of evidence. Britt v. State, 232 Ga. App. 780, 503 S.E.2d 653 (1998).

In a burglary case where a sawmill was stripped of copper wiring, there was a preponderance of evidence to support a restitution order when the defendant parked in the same location where burglars parked the previous day, went to a main power room where tools needed for pulling wire and not owned by the sawmill had been left, and had similar tools in the defendant's pickup truck; the amount of a restitution order was not supported by the evidence, however, because the correct determination of the amount of restitution was the fair market value of the property rather than the replacement cost, and witnesses for the state testified only as to replacement value. Hawthorne v. State, 285 Ga. App. 196, 648 S.E.2d 387 (2007).

Victim not entitled to restitution for time missed to appear at restitution hearing. — Although the trial court did not err in entering an order requiring the defendant to pay the victim restitution for lost wages based on the work time the victim lost as a direct result of the defendant's criminal conduct towards the victim, which included the 15 days that the victim spent away from work meeting with lawyers, the bank, and law enforcement authorities, as well as the days the victim spent testifying at the criminal proceedings brought against the defendant, the trial court erred in requiring the defendant to compensate the victim for the day the victim took away from work to appear at the restitution hearing. Jackson v. State, 334 Ga. App. 340, 779 S.E.2d 402 (2015).

Restitution order proper. — Co-defendant did not show that the trial court abused the court's discretion by ordering the defendant jointly and severally liable for restitution in the case because the amount of restitution ordered was within the limits allowed by law as it did not exceed the victim's damages, and in setting that amount, the trial court specifically considered the factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Hettrick v. State, 334 Ga. App. 115, 778 S.E.2d 369 (2015).

Replacement cost not allowed. — Trial court erred in basing the court's determination of the measure of damages for purposes of restitution on the replacement cost of the items stolen rather than fair market value. Fewox v. State, 243 Ga. App. 651, 534 S.E.2d 121 (2000).

Proof of amount. — Trial court did not base the court's restitution amount for damage to a dresser on hearsay since the court considered, in addition to written repair estimates, the victim's testimony as owner, the victim's opinion as to both the cost of repair and the pre-damage fair market value, and photographs submitted. Barnes v. State, 239 Ga. App. 495, 521 S.E.2d 425 (1999).

Trial court did not err in considering the victim's personal knowledge as to the value of a damaged stove since the evidence demonstrated that the victim had the opportunity to formulate an opinion about the value. Barnes v. State, 239 Ga. App. 495, 521 S.E.2d 425 (1999).

Victim's testimony as to the actual cost paid to have a damaged floor repaired was not hearsay. Barnes v. State, 239 Ga. App. 495, 521 S.E.2d 425 (1999).

Restitution had to be equal or less than the victim's damages; determination of the damages had to be based upon fair market value which had to be determined exactly. Jackson v. State, 250 Ga. App. 617, 552 S.E.2d 546 (2001).

With regard to a restitution judgment entered against a defendant with regard to the defendant's conviction for theft by taking of copper wire, under the preponderance of the evidence standard, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the fair market value of the stolen wire was $6,470 and in issuing a restitution order in that amount since the defendant failed to establish that the wire was merely scrap and the amount the defendant and the codefendant received from selling the stolen wire was irrelevant for purposes of the restitution order. McClure v. State, 295 Ga. App. 465, 673 S.E.2d 856 (2009).

Trial court erred in ordering the defendant to pay restitution after the defendant pled guilty to theft by receiving stolen property, a vehicle, because the state failed to prove the fair market value of a vehicle when no evidence was presented that the condition of the vehicle was considered in determining the value of the vehicle, which appeared to be based totally on the vehicle identification number; although an insurance company that was seeking to recover money from the defendant was forced to value the vehicle before the vehicle was recovered, that did not prevent the state from introducing evidence, such as testimony from the victim or others with such knowledge, concerning the condition of the vehicle at the time of the theft. Browning v. State, 303 Ga. App. 805, 695 S.E.2d 291 (2010).

Trial court did not err in ordering the defendant to pay the victim restitution after the defendant pled guilty to arson in the first degree because the trial court was authorized to find that the preponderance of the evidence showed that the victim owned the house at the time of the fire, and evidence was presented to show the cost of repairs and its relation to the value of the house prior to the fire, in accordance with the law of damages to real property; the evidence of the background of the victim, a real estate investor who repaired houses personally, provided some evidence to show that the investor had knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the cost of repairs, the value of real estate, and the extent of the damages to the investor's property pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-66 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-701). Mayfield v. State, 307 Ga. App. 630, 705 S.E.2d 717 (2011).

Trial court did not err in assessing the value of a dog the defendant killed at $3,000 because evidence of the knowledge, experience, and familiarity of a witness with the value of labrador retrievers trained to hunt created a basis for the value stated. Futch v. State, 314 Ga. App. 294, 723 S.E.2d 714 (2012).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to support an amount of $500 in damages for the pistol the defendant stole; while the trial court accepted the replacement cost as the fair market value of the gun, the correct determination for the amount of restitution was the fair market value of the property rather than the replacement cost. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to determine the fair market value of the coin collection the defendant stole; the owner's opinion lacked foundation because there was no showing that the owner had some knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the coins, and absent that foundation, the owner's opinion was nothing more than conjecture, an unsupported conclusion, or a guess. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

In an action for burglary and theft by taking, the state presented sufficient evidence to support the amount of the restitution award including testimony from the victim and an estimate from a jeweler. Summers v. State, 355 Ga. App. 205, 843 S.E.2d 877 (June 30, 2020).

Amount not excessive. — Order requiring the defendant to pay $15,000 in restitution did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9. Since the victim originally owed a nursing facility over $17,000 before the amount was reduced because of Medicaid payments, and the defendant had converted at least $7,200 belonging to the victim, the trial court could have required the defendant to pay about $25,000 in restitution; the fact that some of these damages might be paid by third parties did not absolve the defendant of liability for making restitution. Adams v. State, 291 Ga. App. 681, 662 S.E.2d 782 (2008), overruled on other grounds, Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Effect of discharge in bankruptcy. — Offender is not absolved from paying for damages caused by the offender's actions merely because the victim filed bankruptcy. Crozier v. State, 233 Ga. App. 831, 506 S.E.2d 139 (1998).

Evidence was sufficient to authorize judgment of $4,750.00 in restitution for the taking of tools and motor vehicles. Hodges v. State, 201 Ga. App. 729, 411 S.E.2d 775, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 903, 411 S.E.2d 775 (1991).

Evidence was sufficient to support the amount of $112,124.50 as restitution to a county for losses suffered as the result of fraudulent conduct of defendant. Anderson v. State, 226 Ga. App. 286, 486 S.E.2d 410 (1997).

Amount of restitution ($63,000) assessed against a defendant was appropriate under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 because the master client list of the defendant's employer was offered to the defendant for $100,000, evidence was presented that the list was worth between $200,000 and $225,000, the list ultimately sold for $17,500, and the employer lost commissions in excess of $21,000; the trial court also properly considered the defendant's ability to pay and the factors contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. DuCom v. State, 288 Ga. App. 555, 654 S.E.2d 670 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0598, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 383 (Ga. 2008).

Court upheld a restitution order based on a surgeon's testimony that a recommended surgical procedure that cost $15,000 was not for cosmetic purposes but to allow the victim greater ease of movement, and based on evidence of the defendant's financial situation, the defendant's bachelor's and master's degrees, the defendant's employment, and the defendant's future earning potential as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Regent v. State, 306 Ga. App. 616, 703 S.E.2d 81 (2010).

Trial court was authorized under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 to order the defendant to pay the victim's medical expenses as restitution for damages caused by the defendant's simple battery of the victim in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-23(a) because the court's finding that the victim was injured by and had incurred costs as a result of the defendant's criminal behavior toward the victim was not clearly erroneous; the order for restitution did not exceed the amount of costs the victim incurred, and even if others at the scene could have also kicked the victim, that did not negate the defendant's liability for damages caused by the defendant's role in the attack. Elsasser v. State, 313 Ga. App.

Hearing. — Former Code 1933, §§ 27-3008—27-3010 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-8—17-14-10) contemplated a hearing and specific written findings by the court in determining whether the court will order restitution and the amount thereof; thus, the law does not deny defendants due process rights to a hearing on the damage issue. Cannon v. State, 246 Ga. 754, 272 S.E.2d 709 (1980).

Interest. — Restitution ordered under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 may rightfully include interest on the victim's damages. Patrick v. State, 184 Ga. App. 260, 361 S.E.2d 251 (1987).

As it is used in the statutory provisions relating to restitution, "damages" includes interest. Corbin v. State, 202 Ga. App. 464, 415 S.E.2d 14 (1992).

No restitution based on untried offense. — Since there was no accusation or evidence relating to a particular theft, the trial court could not order restitution for that theft as a condition of probation even if the court was aware of an untried charge relating to that theft. Robinson v. State, 169 Ga. App. 763, 315 S.E.2d 277 (1984).

If defendant acquiesced at trial, defendant could not complain on appeal. — If the defendant acquiesced at trial with the on-the-record statement of the state asserting that the defendant was "now in accord with" the state's asserted restitution figures, the effect of such acquiescence deprived the defendant of the right to complain on appeal of the amount of restitution ordered. Westmoreland v. State, 192 Ga. App. 173, 384 S.E.2d 249 (1989).

Standard of proof. — Sufficiency of the evidence to support an order of restitution in a criminal case should be measured by the civil standard of preponderance of the evidence. Lawrenz v. State, 194 Ga. App. 724, 391 S.E.2d 703 (1990); Britt v. State, 232 Ga. App. 780, 503 S.E.2d 653 (1998).

Restitution not based on coindictees. — Restitution award to be paid by the defendant upon conviction of theft by taking was limited to the amount of money the defendant was shown to have taken, not the total amount taken by the defendant and the defendant's coindictees. Rice v. State, 226 Ga. App. 770, 487 S.E.2d 517 (1997).

Payments to persons not named as victims in indictment. — In a prosecution for conversion of payments made by home-buyers' for real property improvements, the defendant was properly ordered to make payments directly to the subcontractors for work which the subcontractors performed, notwithstanding that the subcontractors were not named as victims in the indictment, since the home-buyers could have recovered such amounts in a civil action. Buchanan v. State, 248 Ga. App. 489, 546 S.E.2d 869 (2001).

Restitution not available for crime that did not cause damage. — Under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-2(2) and 17-14-9, restitution was not available for the defendant's conviction for leaving the scene of an accident in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-270(a) because the damage to the other vehicle was solely attributable to the collision between the cars; the defendant's failure to stop after the collision neither caused nor contributed to the damage. Zipperer v. State, 299 Ga. App. 792, 683 S.E.2d 865 (2009).

17-14-10. Factors to be considered by ordering authority in determining nature and amount of restitution.

(a) In determining the nature and amount of restitution, the ordering authority shall consider:

(1) The financial resources and other assets of the offender or person ordered to pay restitution including whether any of the assets are jointly controlled;

(2) The earnings and other income of the offender or person ordered to pay restitution;

(3) Any financial obligations of the offender or person ordered to pay restitution, including obligations to dependents;

(4) The amount of damages;

(5) The goal of restitution to the victim and the goal of rehabilitation of the offender;

(6) Any restitution previously made;

(7) The period of time during which the restitution order will be in effect; and

(8) Other factors which the ordering authority deems to be appropriate.

(b) If, subsequent to restitution being ordered pursuant to this article, a victim is convicted of a crime for which restitution is ordered, the ordering authority shall consider the previously ordered restitution as part of the financial resources of such victim.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Ordering authority to make record. — O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 requires the ordering authority to make a record regarding consideration of the enumerated factors. Woods v. State, 205 Ga. App. 500, 422 S.E.2d 670 (1992); Jones v. State, 224 Ga. App. 340, 480 S.E.2d 618 (1997); Cardwell v. State, 225 Ga. App. 337, 484 S.E.2d 38 (1997).

Defendant's case was remanded to the trial court for a hearing since the transcript did not disclose what, if any, consideration was made of the factors mandated by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Williams v. State, 180 Ga. App. 854, 350 S.E.2d 837 (1986).

Restitution is not synonymous with civil damages. Morrison v. State, 181 Ga. App. 440, 352 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

Order that defendant pay defendant's court-appointed attorney as a condition of probation was not governed by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, but by O.C.G.A. § 17-12-10, providing for payment or reimbursement for legal assistance and, thus, no hearing was required. Miller v. State, 221 Ga. App. 718, 472 S.E.2d 697 (1996).

Hearing. — Former Code 1933, §§ 27-3008 — 27-3010 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-8 — 17-14-10) contemplated a hearing and specific written findings by the court in determining whether the court will order restitution and the amount thereof; thus, the statutory provisions on restitution do not deny defendants due process rights to a hearing on the damage issue. Cannon v. State, 246 Ga. 754, 272 S.E.2d 709 (1980).

In the absence of a post-trial presentence hearing wherein the factors enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 are considered by the trial court, a sentence imposing restitution cannot stand. Patterson v. State, 161 Ga. App. 85, 289 S.E.2d 270 (1982); Brown v. State, 214 Ga. App. 733, 449 S.E.2d 136 (1994).

Trial court erred in ordering the defendant to pay a specified sum as restitution without holding a hearing and making the specific findings required by statutory law; thus, that portion of the defendant's sentence based on defendant's conviction for theft of lost or mislaid property had to be reversed and remanded to the trial court so that the court could hold an appropriate hearing and make the required findings. Shannon v. State, 258 Ga. App. 689, 574 S.E.2d 889 (2002).

Joint and several liability. — Defendant's sole enumeration of error was that the trial court erred in the court's order by holding each defendant jointly and severally liable for the entire restitutionary amount; however, the defendant failed to show that the trial court's order of joint and several liability on the restitutionary amount was unreasonable or that the defendant had been harmed thereby. Morrison v. State, 181 Ga. App. 440, 352 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

Co-defendant did not show that the trial court abused the court's discretion by ordering the defendant jointly and severally liable for restitution in the case because the amount of restitution ordered was within the limits allowed by law as it did not exceed the victim's damages, and in setting that amount, the trial court specifically considered the factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Hettrick v. State, 334 Ga. App. 115, 778 S.E.2d 369 (2015).

Standard of proof. — Sufficiency of evidence to support an order of restitution in a criminal case should be measured by the civil standard of preponderance of the evidence. Lawrenz v. State, 194 Ga. App. 724, 391 S.E.2d 703 (1990).

Necessity of complying with procedural requirements. — That portion of defendant's sentence which imposed restitution as a condition of probation was reversed and remanded to the trial court with direction that a hearing on the issue of restitution be held at which O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9, regarding the amount, and the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 were to be considered, and the trial court was further directed that the written finding required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-8 be made. Murphy v. State, 182 Ga. App. 791, 357 S.E.2d 147 (1987).

Since the trial court did not hold a restitution hearing and the only mention of restitution at the sentencing hearing was the restitution order itself, the case was remanded for a hearing and specific written findings. Fonseca v. State, 212 Ga. App. 463, 441 S.E.2d 912 (1994); Earl v. State, 214 Ga. App. 891, 449 S.E.2d 361 (1994); Thompson v. State, 214 Ga. App. 889, 449 S.E.2d 364 (1994).

Since the trial court failed to make written findings based on the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, and there was no showing in the record that the court considered such factors, the restitution award was invalid, and a rehearing was required. Helmeci v. State, 230 Ga. App. 866, 498 S.E.2d 326 (1998).

In an adjudication proceeding, because: (1) the juvenile court erred in failing to include the statutorily-required findings of fact pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 in support of the restitution award; (2) the vast majority of the victim's testimony regarding damages was limited to the original price or the replacement costs of the items damaged or stolen; and (3) some of the victim's testimony regarding repair quotes received constituted inadmissible hearsay, the restitution award was vacated and the case was remanded for a new hearing. In the Interest of R.V., 283 Ga. App. 355, 641 S.E.2d 591 (2007), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Evaluation of defendant's ability to pay restitution. — Following the defendant's guilty plea to O.C.G.A. § 16-14-4(a) (RICO), an order of $725,000 restitution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-3(a) was supported by evidence that the defendant had the capacity for gainful employment, notwithstanding the defendant's claim that the defendant was disabled; that the defendant had possessed hundreds of thousands of dollars of the victims' money; and that the defendant had a venture in which the defendant claimed $4.8 million. Nelson v. State, 329 Ga. App. 300, 764 S.E.2d 883 (2014).

Specific findings required. — Restitution order that required a county probate judge who pled guilty to misfeasance in office to repay the county the sum of $54,000 was deficient in that the order did not contain the specific findings required by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10; the trial court was directed to enter a new restitution order based on the required findings. Beall v. State, 252 Ga. App. 138, 555 S.E.2d 788 (2001), overruled on other grounds, 324 Ga. App. 289, 750 S.E.2d 375 (2013).

While a trial court noted in the court's restitution order that evidence had been presented at the restitution hearing concerning the defendant's health problems and ability to pay and while the trial court specifically stated that the court had considered the factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, the case was remanded because the trial court failed to set forth the necessary written factual findings. McMahon v. State, 273 Ga. App. 574, 615 S.E.2d 625 (2005).

Despite the fact that O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70 allowed for a juvenile probation order to be extended if, among other things, a hearing was held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion, the juvenile court erred in extending a juvenile's probation, imposing the condition that restitution be paid, without making the requisite findings set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, such as the juvenile's financial condition. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Record did not disclose what the trial court found as fact or that the court considered the O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 factors in imposing restitution upon the defendant; thus, a remand was required for a hearing on the matter. Newton v. State, 281 Ga. App. 549, 636 S.E.2d 728 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Probationer's ability to pay. — Because a probationer received a restitution hearing in which the trial court considered all the required factors in determining the probationer's ability to pay, and the court made findings based on the evidence presented, no error resulted in entering the restitution order despite the fact that the probationer only made $6,000 per year. Tindol v. State, 284 Ga. App. 45, 643 S.E.2d 329 (2007).

Trial court's order on remand to include the required factual findings supporting the court's restitution judgment, after considering the defendant's financial condition and probable future earning capacity, was upheld on appeal as the order: (1) did not include any amount arising out of the counts which the defendant was acquitted; (2) contained a finding that the award could exceed the total amount of money the defendant took wrongfully because the court was allowed to award all damages which a victim could recover against an offender in a civil action, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2; (3) considered the defendant's financial resources, assets, income, and financial obligations as required under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10; and (4) considered that the defendant's criminal actions caused the victims the loss that the trial court awarded as restitution. McMahon v. State, 284 Ga. App. 192, 643 S.E.2d 236 (2007).

Written findings of fact required. — As the trial court failed to include written findings of fact pertaining to the various factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 in the court's order following a restitution hearing, the court's restitution order was deficient. Nobles v. State, 253 Ga. App. 814, 560 S.E.2d 724 (2002).

Restitution order was vacated on appeal because the trial court failed to provide written findings as to each factor enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10; whether the defendant was entitled to a new restitution hearing, however, was an issue for the trial court to determine on remand. Steele v. State, 270 Ga. App. 488, 606 S.E.2d 664 (2004).

Written findings no longer required. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq., written findings are no longer required when ordering an offender to make restitution; as a result, Garrett v. State, 175 Ga. App. 400, 333 SE2d 432 (1985), and its progeny, are disapproved to extent they were authority for any cases involving restitution orders issued on or after July 1, 2005, the effective date of the Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 17-14-1 et seq. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Georgia law no longer requires written findings on restitution. Ezebuiro v. State, 308 Ga. App. 282, 707 S.E.2d 182 (2011).

Trial court's failure to enter written findings with respect to a restitution award was not reversible error; based on an amendment to the restitution statutes in 2005, a trial court is no longer required to make written findings of fact concerning the factors to be considered in determining the restitution amount as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Futch v. State, 314 Ga. App. 294, 723 S.E.2d 714 (2012).

Specific findings of fact and maximum amount allowed. — Order for restitution failed to make specific findings of fact and amount awarded exceeded victim's damages. Revis v. State, 223 Ga. App. 470, 477 S.E.2d 880 (1996).

Defendant's silence when restitution order was given did not render the failure to make findings harmless or cut off the right to appeal such error. Fonseca v. State, 212 Ga. App. 463, 441 S.E.2d 912 (1994).

Failure of defendant to offer evidence regarding ability to pay. — Since the claimant failed to provide any evidence of the claimant's present financial condition or future earning capacity at a restitution hearing, the court had no affirmative duty to discover such evidence in considering the claimant's ability to pay; since the claimant had the opportunity to present evidence, yet still chose not to do so, the claimant's silence was deemed a waiver. Cheeks v. State, 218 Ga. App. 212, 460 S.E.2d 860 (1995).

Defendant, who pled guilty to theft by taking under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-2, could not argue that the trial court failed to consider the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 in making a restitution order as the defendant did not meet the burden of proof under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7 in establishing the defendant's expenses as the defendant only told the court that the defendant had to make monthly payments; the defendant made no response when asked if the defendant could make house payments and the like if half the defendant's monthly income was applied to the restitution order. Wimpey v. State, 297 Ga. App. 182, 676 S.E.2d 831 (2009).

Factors considered. — Amount of restitution ($63,000) assessed against a defendant was appropriate under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 because the master client list of the defendant's employer was offered to the defendant for $100,000, evidence was presented that the list was worth between $200,000 and $225,000, the list ultimately sold for $17,500, and the employer lost commissions in excess of $21,000; the trial court also properly considered the defendant's ability to pay and the factors contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. DuCom v. State, 288 Ga. App. 555, 654 S.E.2d 670 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0598, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 383 (Ga. 2008).

There was no error with respect to a trial court's order of restitution to a defendant upon the defendant's conviction as the trial court properly considered the defendant's current financial condition and future earning capacity, and all of the factors in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Factors not considered. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant to pay restitution in the amount of $7,584.35 to the Crime Victim Compensation Program and $1,000 in token restitution to the victim because the record contained no evidence to support the awards as the state presented no evidence supporting the state's request for $7,584.35, and the record did not show that the trial court considered the factors outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10(a) before requiring restitution as a condition of probation. Watts v. State, 321 Ga. App. 289, 739 S.E.2d 129 (2013).

Victim not entitled to restitution for time missed to appear at restitution hearing. — Although the trial court did not err in entering an order requiring the defendant to pay the victim restitution for lost wages based on the work time the victim lost as a direct result of the defendant's criminal conduct towards the victim, which included the 15 days that the victim spent away from work meeting with lawyers, the bank, and law enforcement authorities, as well as the days the victim spent testifying at the criminal proceedings brought against the defendant, the trial court erred in requiring the defendant to compensate the victim for the day the victim took away from work to appear at the restitution hearing. Jackson v. State, 334 Ga. App. 340, 779 S.E.2d 402 (2015).

Juvenile properly ordered to pay restitution for hospital bill. — Since restitution was expressly authorized as a condition or limitation of the probation of delinquent or unruly juveniles, and as the nature and amount of restitution was supported by a preponderance of the evidence, there was no error in the trial court's order that the defendant pay restitution for the victim's hospital bill. In the Interest of N. T., 355 Ga. App. 205, 843 S.E.2d 877 (2020).

Restitution order proper. — Under a preponderance of the evidence standard, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant caused the $5,306.28 in damages to a stolen truck since the defendant was found in possession of the truck, and therefore the defendant was responsible for all damages that the truck incurred; as a result, the trial court properly ordered the defendant to pay a judgment of restitution in the amount of $5,306.28. McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008).

Trial court did not err in ordering restitution because the state met the state's burden of proving the victim's loss by presenting evidence of the amount the victim had paid the defendant and the value of the work the defendant had completed. Wilson v. State, 355 Ga. App. 73, 842 S.E.2d 521 (2020).

Sentence reversed where failure to consider factors. — Because the record revealed that the trial court failed to consider factors (1) and (2), that portion of the court's sentence imposing restitution was reversed and remanded for a hearing in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Slater v. State, 209 Ga. App. 723, 434 S.E.2d 547 (1993).

Failure of the trial court to consider the factors listed in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, particularly the defendant's financial condition at the time of resentencing, required vacation of the sentence and remand of the case. Pruitt v. State, 230 Ga. App. 334, 496 S.E.2d 324 (1998); Darden v. State, 233 Ga. App. 353, 504 S.E.2d 256 (1998).

If restitution was imposed pursuant to the entry of a nonnegotiated guilty plea, but there was no evidence in the record that the court considered the factors enumerated in the statute, the sentence would be reversed and the matter would be remanded. Zebley v. State, 234 Ga. App. 18, 505 S.E.2d 562 (1998).

Restitution order was vacated and the case remanded so that the trial court could conduct a hearing in compliance with the statute and enter written findings of fact relating to the factors set forth therein since the trial court held a restitution hearing, but the transcript did not disclose that the court considered each of those factors, and the trial court did not enter specific written findings. Williams v. State, 247 Ga. App. 783, 545 S.E.2d 343 (2001).

Restitution order vacated because evidence on victim's damages was insufficient. — Restitution order was vacated because evidence on the victim's damages was insufficient when the victim failed to give a fact-supported opinion as to the value of the damaged items and estimated the depreciated value of each item based on numbers defendant "pulled out of [her] head." Gray v. State, 273 Ga. App. 747, 615 S.E.2d 834 (2005).

Restitution order was vacated as the trial court failed to address the O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10 factors, except for the amount of damages sustained by the victim. Gray v. State, 273 Ga. App. 747, 615 S.E.2d 834 (2005).

With respect to a trial court's order of restitution to a defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, the state failed to show the amount of restitution by a preponderance of the evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7 with respect to that portion of the award for "accounting/auditing/attorney fees," such that the order could not stand. Turner v. State, 312 Ga. App. 799, 720 S.E.2d 264 (2011).

Fair market value not replacement costs. — Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to support an amount of $500 in damages for the pistol the defendant stole; while the trial court accepted the replacement cost as the fair market value of the gun, the correct determination for the amount of restitution was the fair market value of the property rather than the replacement cost. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

Order of restitution was vacated because the state failed to adduce sufficient evidence to determine the fair market value of the coin collection the defendant stole; the owner's opinion lacked foundation because there was no showing that the owner had some knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the coins, and absent that foundation, the owner's opinion was nothing more than conjecture, an unsupported conclusion, or a guess. Austin v. State, 315 Ga. App. 713, 727 S.E.2d 535 (2012).

No evidence of victim's expenses. — Trial court erred in ordering restitution because there was no evidence of expenses or costs to the complaining victim for damages resulting from the alleged crimes; that portion of the sentence imposing restitution was vacated and the case remanded for a hearing in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Wiggins v. State, 272 Ga. App. 414, 612 S.E.2d 598 (2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 280 Ga. 268, 626 S.E.2d 118 (2006).

Restitution order upheld as supported by the evidence. — Court upheld a restitution order based on a surgeon's testimony that a recommended surgical procedure that cost $15,000 was not for cosmetic purposes but to allow the victim greater ease of movement, and based on evidence of the defendant's financial situation, the defendant's bachelor's and master's degrees, the defendant's employment, and the defendant's future earning potential as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. Regent v. State, 306 Ga. App. 616, 703 S.E.2d 81 (2010).

Trial court was authorized under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-9 to order the defendant to pay the victim's medical expenses as restitution for damages caused by the defendant's simple battery of the victim in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-23(a) because the court's finding that the victim was injured by and had incurred costs as a result of the defendant's criminal behavior toward the victim was not clearly erroneous; the order for restitution did not exceed the amount of costs the victim incurred. Elsasser v. State, 313 Ga. App. 661, 722 S.E.2d 327 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0949, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 555 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court's award of restitution to the homeowners was supported by a preponderance of the evidence because the homeowners essentially suffered the entire loss of use of the homeowners' home, and the trial court determined that these damages flowed from the defendant's false statement which allowed the defendant, a contractor, to skip the requirements for structural engineering and architectural reports on the contractor's renovation of the owners' residence and to avoid county inspections, which would have avoided or detected problems as the problems arose. Wilson v. State, 317 Ga. App. 171, 730 S.E.2d 500 (2012).

Trial court's order regarding restitution was not erroneous as the trial court considered all the factors laid out in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10(a) and based the court's restitution award on competent evidence proving the amount granted by a preponderance of the evidence. Graf v. State, 327 Ga. App. 598, 760 S.E.2d 613 (2014).

Restitution is limited by thefts during time period alleged in accusation. — Trial court erred in ordering restitution for $260,637 for thefts from the defendant's employer over a 12-year period because the accusation covered only a two-year period during which $57,000 was taken; under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-2(2) and 17-14-10, restitution was limited to damages which the victim could recover in a civil action based on the same act. Vaughn v. State, 324 Ga. App. 289, 750 S.E.2d 375 (2013), overruled on other grounds by In the Interest of N. T., 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 289 (Ga. Ct. App. 2020).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Disbursement of funds when victim cannot be located. — Restitution payments should not be returned to the probationer when the intended recipient cannot be located: instead, the funds should be retained for the benefit of the victim until the completion of the seven-year holding period, and at that point, the account should be reported and subsequently delivered to the State Revenue Commissioner in accordance with the laws concerning disposition of unclaimed property. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-17.

17-14-11. Effect of restitution order on civil actions against offender; setoff of restitution payments against civil judgments; admissibility of restitution orders or payments; determining setoff amount.

An order for restitution shall not bar any civil action against the offender. However, any payments made by an offender to a victim under an order for restitution may be a setoff against any judgment awarded to the victim in a civil action based on the same facts for which restitution was ordered. The fact of restitution or a restitution order under this article shall not be placed before the jury on the issue of liability. If the amount of restitution made is in dispute and liability is established, the court shall order further appropriate proceedings to determine the amount of setoff.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Modification may be ordered at any time. — Trial court erred in dismissing a defendant's motion to modify restitution until the time came for the defendant to pay. Under O.C.G.A. § 17-14-12, the ordering authority, in this case, the trial court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-14-2, retained jurisdiction to modify the restitution order at any time before the expiration of the relief ordered. 17-14-13. Manner of enforcement of restitution order generally; sanctions for failure to comply with order.

(a) A restitution order shall be enforceable as is a civil judgment by execution as provided in Code Section 17-10-20.

(b) If an offender or other person ordered to pay restitution willfully refuses to comply with a restitution order, the order, in the discretion of the court, may be enforced by attachment for contempt, upon the application of the prosecuting attorney or the victim.

(c) Failure to comply with a restitution order may, in the discretion of the ordering authority, be grounds to revoke or cancel the relief at any time the restitution order is in effect. Where the relief is earned time allowances, the Department of Corrections may suspend the offender from earning earned time allowances for a specified period of time.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Order of restitution is debt within meaning of Bankruptcy Code. — Victim who is the subject of an order of restitution has a cause of action in the victim's own right for enforcement of the order. Therefore, an order of restitution is a debt within the ambit of 11 U.S.C. § 1328. Newton v. Fred Haley Poultry Farm, 15 Bankr. 708 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

Before O.C.G.A. § 17-14-13 becomes operative, there must be a restitution order which is a condition of any relief ordered and the relief must have been accepted by the offender or inmate. Conklin v. Zant, 202 Ga. App. 214, 413 S.E.2d 536 (1991).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Criminal conviction as prerequisite to restitution. — Valid orders of the court are enforceable under the general contempt authority, but restitution orders may only be entered upon a criminal conviction. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-8.

17-14-14. Restitution payments; wage assignments; review of compliance; interest.

(a) Payments pursuant to an order for restitution shall be made to the clerk of the court or to any other person, for the benefit of the victim or victims, as the ordering authority shall order.

(b) In each case in which payment of restitution is ordered as a condition of probation or parole, the ordering authority may require any employed offender to execute a wage assignment to pay the restitution.

(c) Until such time as the restitution has been paid or the sentence has been completed, the clerk of court or the community supervision officer, county or Department of Juvenile Justice juvenile probation officer, or probation officer serving pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42 assigned to the case, whoever is responsible for collecting restitution, shall review the case not less frequently than twice yearly to ensure that restitution is being paid as ordered. If the restitution was ordered to be made within a specific period of time, the case shall be reviewed at the end of the specific period of time to determine if the restitution has been paid in full. The final review shall be conducted before the sentence or probationary or parole period expires. If it is determined at any review that restitution is not being paid as ordered, a written report of the violation shall be filed with the court on a form prescribed by the Council of Superior Court Clerks of Georgia.

(d) If the ordering authority permits the offender to pay restitution in other than a lump sum, the ordering authority may require the offender to pay interest on the amount of restitution due the victim or the victim's estate. Such interest shall be set at the same rate as is provided by Code Section 7-4-12 for judgments.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Disbursement of funds when victim cannot be located. — Restitution payments should not be returned to the probationer when the intended recipient cannot be located; instead, the funds should be retained for the benefit of the victim until the completion of the seven-year holding period, and at that point, the account should be reported and subsequently delivered to the State Revenue Commissioner in accordance with the laws of this state concerning disposition of unclaimed property. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-17.

Authority of probation supervisors to collect payments. — O.C.G.A. § 17-14-14 does not authorize the payment of noncourt ordered restitution to probation supervisors, who are specifically prohibited from collecting such payments under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-31. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-50.

Collection and disbursement of payments of fines and restitution as may be established as conditions upon the grant of parole may be undertaken by probation supervisors employed by the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections) so long as such payments are specifically required by court order as the result of a criminal proceeding. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-50.

17-14-15. Peonage not authorized by article; denial of benefits because of poverty prohibited.

(a) Nothing in this article shall authorize peonage; and this article shall be construed and diligently administered to prevent peonage.

(b) No offender shall be denied any benefit, relief, or privilege to which he or she might otherwise be entitled or eligible solely because he or she is financially unable and cannot become financially able to make restitution.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 1/HB 172, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005.'"

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Refusal of plea bargain upon inability to make restitution. — State's refusal to recommend acceptance of the plea bargain because the defendant could not make the agreed-upon initial restitution payment of $5,000, and the trial court's refusal to accept the plea, did not deny the defendant equal protection or violate O.C.G.A. § 17-14-15. Nash v. State, 179 Ga. App. 702, 347 S.E.2d 651 (1986).

Sentence requiring defendant to pay restitution while incarcerated held illegal. — Because that part of a sentence requiring the defendant to pay restitution while incarcerated and pay specific and substantial amounts of restitution both before the commencement of the prison sentence and while on probation was illegal, that portion was vacated, and the defendant's acquiescence to the sentence, either through plea negotiations or a failure to object to the sentence, did not remove the illegality. Sumner v. State, 284 Ga. App. 308, 643 S.E.2d 831 (2007).

17-14-16. Transmission of copies of restitution orders to the Department of Corrections or the Department of Juvenile Justice, and to the Department of Community Supervision.

If an offender who is ordered to pay restitution under this article is remanded to the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections or the Department of Juvenile Justice, the court shall transmit a copy of the restitution order to such department and to the Department of Community Supervision when the order is issued.

However, a person or entity entitled to such restitution may claim such restitution any time within five years of the date on which he or she could have claimed such restitution by applying in writing to Georgia Crime Victims Compensation Board. Upon receipt of such application and verification that the person making the claim is in fact entitled to such restitution, the Georgia Crime Victims Compensation Board shall pay such restitution to the person or entity.

17-14-31. Contract regarding reenactment of crime; deposit of consideration in escrow; claim notification; notice of availability of escrow moneys; disposition of escrow moneys; actions taken to defeat purpose.

(a)(1) Every person, firm, corporation, partnership, association, or other legal entity contracting with any person or with the representative or assignee of any person who has been accused or convicted of a crime in this state with respect to the reenactment of the crime by way of a movie, book, magazine article, tape recording, phonograph record, radio or television presentation, or live entertainment of any kind or with respect to the expression of the accused or convicted person's thoughts, feelings, opinions, or emotions regarding the crime shall submit a copy of the contract to the board and shall pay over to the board any moneys which would otherwise, by the terms of the contract, be owing to the accused or convicted person or to his representatives.

(2) The board shall deposit such moneys in an escrow account for the benefit of and payable to any victim or the legal representative of any victim of crimes committed by the accused or convicted person.

(3) Payments may be made pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection only if the accused person is eventually convicted or enters a plea of guilty of the crime and if the victim, within five years of the date of the establishment of the escrow account, brings a civil action in a court of competent jurisdiction and recovers a money judgment for damages against the convicted or accused person or his representatives.

(4) It shall be the duty of the victim, the victim's attorney, or the victim's representative to notify the board within 30 days of the filing of any claim under this article.

(b) At least once every six months for five years from the date it receives such moneys, the board shall cause to have published a legal notice in newspapers of general circulation in the county in which the crime was committed and in counties contiguous to such county, advising victims of the crime that escrow moneys are available to satisfy money judgments pursuant to this Code section.

(d) Upon a showing by any convicted person that five years have elapsed from the establishment of the escrow account and that no actions are pending against the convicted person pursuant to this Code section, the board shall immediately pay over any moneys in the escrow account to the person or his legal representatives.

(e) Whenever it is found that a person accused of a crime is unfit to proceed to trial as a result of insanity because the person lacks capacity to understand the proceedings against him or to assist in his own defense, the board shall bring an action of interpleader to determine the disposition of the escrow account.

(f) Any excess which remains in the escrow account or is deposited into the account after all money judgments have been satisfied shall be paid over into the state treasury as compensation for the establishment, administration, and execution of this article.

(g) The board shall make payments from the escrow account to any person accused or convicted of crime, upon the order of a court of competent jurisdiction, after a showing by the person that the moneys shall be used for the exclusive purpose of retaining legal representation at any stage of the proceedings against the person, including the appeals process.

(h) The board shall disburse payments from the escrow account on a pro rata basis of all claims filed, according to the amount of money in the escrow account as compared to the amount of each claim. The sums are not to be disbursed until all pending claims have been settled or reduced to judgment.

(i) Any action taken by a person who is accused or convicted of a crime or who enters a plea of guilty, whether by way of execution of a power of attorney, creation of corporate entities, or otherwise, to defeat the purpose of this Code section shall be null and void as against the public policy of this state.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Rights of those who kill by accident or negligence not impaired. — Statutes that embody the public policy of Georgia of prohibiting wrongdoers from profiting from their crimes, O.C.G.A. §§ 17-14-31, 33-25-13, and 53-1-5, only prevent those who feloniously and intentionally kill, O.C.G.A. § 53-1-5(a), or those who commit murder or voluntary manslaughter, O.C.G.A. § 33-25-13, from sharing, respectively, in the decedent's estate or insurance policy proceeds; if a public policy may be gleaned from these statutes, it is a policy that prohibits those who commit murder or voluntary manslaughter from profiting from the victim's death, but these statutes do not impair the rights of those who kill by accident or negligence, who kill in self-defense or pursuant to any other legal justification, or who kill while legally insane because simply admitting to having committed a homicide does not make one a wrongdoer under Georgia law. 17-15-6. Investigation; decision by director; review by board; report to claimant.

(a) A claim, once accepted for filing and completed, shall be assigned to an investigator. The investigator shall examine the papers filed in support of the claim and cause an investigation to be conducted into the validity of the claim. The investigation shall include, but shall not be limited to, an examination of law enforcement, court, and official records and reports concerning the crime and an examination of medical, psychiatric, counseling, financial, and hospital reports relating to the injury, serious mental or emotional trauma, or loss upon which the claim is based. All claims arising from the death of an individual as a direct result of a crime shall be considered together by a single investigator.

(b) Claims shall be investigated and determined regardless of whether a perpetrator has been apprehended, prosecuted, or convicted of any crime based upon the same incident or whether the alleged perpetrator has been acquitted or found not guilty of the crime in question.

(c) The investigator conducting the investigation shall file with the director a written report setting forth a recommendation and the investigator's reason therefor. The director shall render a decision and furnish the claimant with a copy of the report if so requested. In cases where an investigative report is provided, information deemed confidential in nature shall be excluded.

(d) The claimant may, within 30 days after receipt of the report of the decision of the director, make an application in writing to the director for review of the decision.

(e) Upon receipt of an application for review pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section, the director shall forward all relevant documents and information to the board. The board shall review the records and shall affirm or modify the decision of the director. If considered necessary by the board or if requested by the claimant, the board shall order a hearing prior to rendering a decision. At the hearing, any relevant evidence not legally privileged shall be admissible. The board shall render a decision within 90 days after completion of the investigation. If the director receives no application for review pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section, the director's decision shall become final.

(f) The board, for purposes of this chapter, may subpoena witnesses, administer or cause to be administered oaths, and examine such parts of the books and records of the parties to proceedings as relate to questions in dispute.

(g) The director shall, within ten days after receipt of the board's final decision, make a report to the claimant, including a copy of the final decision and the reasons why the decision was made.

(b)(1) Victims may be legal residents or nonresidents of this state. A surviving spouse, parent, step-parent, child, or step-child who is legally dependent for his or her principal support upon a deceased victim shall be entitled to file a claim under this chapter if the deceased victim would have been so entitled, regardless of the residence or nationality of the surviving spouse, parent, step-parent, child, or step-child.

(g) No award of any kind shall be made under this chapter to a victim of a crime for loss of property.

(h) A victim or claimant who has been convicted of a felony involving criminally injurious conduct and who is currently serving a sentence therefor shall not be considered eligible to receive an award under this chapter. For purposes of this subsection, "criminally injurious conduct" means a crime which occurs or is attempted in this state that results in physical injury, serious mental or emotional trauma, or death to a victim, which act is punishable by fine, imprisonment, or death. Such term shall not include acts arising out of the operation of motor vehicles, boats, or aircraft unless the acts were committed with the intent to inflict injury, trauma, or death or unless the acts committed were in violation of Code Section 40-6-391. For the purposes of this subsection, a person shall be deemed to have committed criminally injurious conduct notwithstanding that by reason of age, insanity, drunkenness, or other reason, he or she was legally incapable of committing a crime.

17-15-8. Required findings; amount of award; rejection of claim; reductions; exemptions; effective date for awards; psychological counseling for relatives of deceased; memorials for victims of DUI homicide.

(a) No award may be made unless the board or director finds that:

(1) A crime was committed;

(2) The crime directly resulted in the victim's physical injury, serious mental or emotional trauma, or financial hardship as a result of the victim's physical injury, serious mental or emotional trauma, or the victim's death;

(3) Police records, records of an investigating agency, or records created pursuant to a mandatory reporting requirement show that the crime was promptly reported to the proper authorities. In no case may an award be made where the police records, records of an investigating agency, or records created pursuant to a mandatory reporting requirement show that such report was made more than 72 hours after the occurrence of such crime unless the board, for good cause shown, finds the delay to have been justified and provided, further, that good cause shall be presumed if the person is eligible for awards pursuant to this chapter corresponding to subparagraph (a)(1)(D) of Code Section 17-15-7; and

(4) The applicant has pursued restitution rights against any person who committed the crime unless the board or director determines that such action would not be feasible.

(a.1) The board, upon finding that any claimant or award recipient has not fully cooperated with all law enforcement agencies, may deny, reduce, or withdraw any award.

(b) Any award made pursuant to this chapter shall be in an amount not exceeding actual expenses, including indebtedness reasonably incurred for medical expenses, loss of wages, funeral expenses, mental health counseling, or support for dependents of a deceased victim necessary as a direct result of the injury or hardship upon which the claim is based.

(c)(1) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this chapter, no award made under the provisions of this chapter shall exceed $1,000.00 in the aggregate; provided, however, that with respect to any claim filed with the board as a result of a crime occurring on or after July 1, 1994, no award made under the provisions of this chapter payable to a claimant sustaining economic loss because of injury to or death of a victim shall exceed $5,000.00 in the aggregate; provided, further, that with respect to any claim filed with the board as a result of a crime occurring on or after July 1, 1995, no award made under the provisions of this chapter payable to a claimant sustaining economic loss because of injury to or death of a victim shall exceed $10,000.00 in the aggregate; provided, further, that with respect to any claim filed with the board as a result of a crime occurring on or after July 1, 2002, no award made under the provisions of this chapter payable to a claimant sustaining economic loss because of injury to or death of a victim shall exceed $25,000.00 in the aggregate; provided, further, that with respect to any claim filed with the board for serious mental or emotional trauma, no award shall be made for a crime occurring before July 1, 2009.

(2) No award under this chapter for the following losses shall exceed the maximum amount authorized:

Category	Maximum Award
Lost wages	$ 10,000.00
Funeral expenses	6,000.00
Financial hardship or loss of support	10,000.00
Medical	15,000.00
Counseling	3,000.00
Crime scene sanitization	1,500.00

(d) In determining the amount of an award, the director and board shall determine whether because of his or her conduct the victim contributed to the infliction of his or her injury, serious mental or emotional trauma, or financial hardship, and the director and board may reduce the amount of the award or reject the claim altogether in accordance with such determination.

(e) The director and board may reject an application for an award when the claimant has failed to cooperate in the verification of the information contained in the application.

(f) Any award made pursuant to this chapter may be reduced by or set off by the amount of any payments received or to be received as a result of the injury, serious mental or emotional trauma:

(1) From or on behalf of the person who committed the crime; and

(2) From any other private or public source, including an award of workers' compensation pursuant to the laws of this state, provided that private sources shall not include contributions received from family members or persons or private organizations making charitable donations to a claimant.

(g) No award made pursuant to this chapter shall be subject to garnishment, execution, or attachment other than for expenses resulting from the injury or serious mental or emotional trauma which is the basis for the claim.

(h) An award made pursuant to this chapter shall not constitute a payment which is treated as ordinary income under either the provisions of Chapter 7 of Title 48 or, to the extent lawful, under the United States Internal Revenue Code.

(i) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this chapter to the contrary, no awards from state funds shall be paid to a claimant for a crime which occurred prior to July 1, 1989.

(j) In any case where a crime results in death, the spouse, parents, step-parents, children, step-children, siblings, or step-siblings of such deceased victim may be considered eligible for an award for the cost of psychological counseling which is deemed necessary as a direct result of said criminal incident. The maximum award for said counseling expenses shall not exceed $3,000.00 for each claimant identified in this subsection.

(k)(1) In addition to any other award authorized by this Code section, in any case where a deceased was a victim of homicide by vehicle caused by a violation of Code Section 40-6-391 on any road which is part of the state highway system, upon request of the next of kin of the deceased, an award of compensation in the form of a memorial sign erected by the Department of Transportation as provided by this subsection shall be paid to an eligible claimant.

(2) The provisions of paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall not apply for purposes of eligibility for awards made under this subsection, and the value of any award paid to a claimant under this subsection shall not apply toward or be subject to any limitation on award amounts paid to any claimant under other provisions of this Code section.

(3) The Department of Transportation, upon receiving payment for the cost of materials and labor from the board, shall upon request of the next of kin of the deceased erect a sign memorializing the deceased on the right of way of such public highway at the location of the accident or as near thereto as safely and reasonably possible and shall maintain such sign for a period of five years from the date the sign is erected unless its earlier removal is requested in writing by the next of kin. Such sign shall be 24 inches wide by 36 inches high and depict a map of the State of Georgia, with a dark blue background and a black outline of the state boundaries. A border of white stars shall be placed on the inside of the state boundaries, and the sign shall contain the words "In Memory of (name), DUI Victim (date of accident)."

(4) In the event of multiple such claims arising out of a single motor vehicle accident, the names of all deceased victims for whom such claims are made and for whom a request has been made by the next of kin of the deceased may be placed on one such sign or, if necessary, on one such sign and a plaque beneath of the same color as the sign. In the event of multiple claims relating to the same deceased victim, no more than one such sign shall be paid for and erected for such victim.

17-15-9. Georgia Crime Victims Emergency Fund created; administration; moneys; payments authorized.

(a) There is created a fund to be known as the Georgia Crime Victims Emergency Fund. The custodian of the fund shall be the board. The director shall administer the fund and may invest the resources of the fund in the same manner and fashion that an insurer authorized to issue contracts of life insurance is authorized to invest its resources. The board shall be specifically authorized to contract with any person or organization, public or private, to administer the fund, assume the powers of the director, and carry out the duties of the board relating to the fund.

(b)(1) The fund shall consist of all moneys received pursuant to Article 7 of Chapter 21 of Title 15 from the assessment of additional penalties in cases involving a violation of Code Section 40-6-391 or a violation of an ordinance of a political subdivision of this state which has adopted by reference Code Section 40-6-391 pursuant to Article 14 of Chapter 6 of Title 40.

(2) The funds placed in the fund shall also consist of all moneys appropriated by the General Assembly, if any, for the purpose of compensating claimants under this chapter and money recovered on behalf of the state pursuant to this chapter by subrogation or other action, recovered by court order, received from the federal government, received from additional court costs, received from specific tax proceeds allocated to the fund, received from other assessments or fines, or received from any other public or private source pursuant to this chapter.

(c) All funds appropriated to or otherwise paid into the fund shall be presumptively concluded to have been committed to the purpose for which they have been appropriated or paid and shall not lapse.

(d) The board shall be authorized, subject to the limitations contained in this chapter, to pay the appropriate compensation to the persons eligible for compensation under this chapter from the proceeds of the fund.

(e) After determining that an award should be paid and the method of payment, the board or director, within five days, shall be authorized to draw a warrant or warrants upon the fund to pay the amount of the award from such fund.

Editor's notes. — This Code section formerly pertained to payment where insufficient funds in Georgia Crime Victims Emergency Fund. The former Code section was based on Code 1981, § 17-15-9, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 591, § 1, and was repealed by Ga. L. 2014, p. 354, § 1/SB 187, effective July 1, 2014.

17-15-10. Insufficient funds to pay authorized award.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter to the contrary, where an award under this chapter has been authorized but there are not sufficient funds in the fund to pay or continue paying the award, then the award or the remaining portion thereof shall not be paid unless and until sufficient funds become available from the fund, and at such time, awards which have not been paid shall begin to be paid in chronological order with the oldest award being paid first. In the event an award was to be paid in installments and some remaining installments have not been paid due to a lack of funds, then when funds due become available, that award shall be paid in full when its appropriate time for payment comes on the chronological list before any other postdated award shall be paid. Any award under this chapter is specifically not a claim against the state if it cannot be paid due to a lack of funds in the fund.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-15-10, enacted by Ga. L. 2014, p. 354, § 1/SB 187.

(a) Acceptance of an award made pursuant to this chapter shall subrogate the state, to the extent of such award, to any right or right of action occurring to the claimant to recover payments on account of losses resulting from the crime with respect to which the award is made. The board may waive subrogation when the claimant presents documentation and the board verifies that judgment, settlement, or other sources have not fully reimbursed the claimant for expenses compensable under this chapter.

(b) A court, when placing on probation any person who owes a debt to the state as a consequence of a crime, may set as a condition of probation the payment of the debt or a portion of the debt to the state. The court may also set the schedule or amounts of payments subject to modification based on change of circumstances.

(c) The State Board of Pardons and Paroles shall also have the right to make payment of the debt or a portion of the debt to the state a condition of parole.

(d) When a child is adjudicated for committing a delinquent act in a juvenile court proceeding involving a crime upon which a claim under this chapter can be made, the juvenile court in its discretion may order that the child pay the debt to the state as an adult would have to pay had an adult committed the crime. Any assessments so ordered may be made a condition of probation as provided in Code Section 15-11-601.

(e) Payments authorized or required under this Code section shall be paid into the fund. The board shall coordinate the development of policies and procedures for the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, the Department of Community Supervision, and the Administrative Office of the Courts to assure that restitution programs are administered in an effective manner to increase payments into the fund.

(f) In every case where an individual is serving under active probation supervision and paying a supervision fee, $9.00 per month shall be added to any supervision fee collected by any entity authorized to collect such fees and shall be paid into the fund. This subsection shall apply to probationers supervised by community supervision officers or private probation officers or probation officers pursuant to Article 6 of Chapter 8 of Title 42. The enactment of this Act shall not affect any prosecutions for acts occurring before January 1, 2014, and shall not act as an abatement of any such prosecutions."

Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 6-1/HB 310, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that this Act shall apply to sentences entered on or after July 1, 2015.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Restitution award not supported by evidence. — Trial court erred in ordering the defendant to pay restitution in the amount of $7,584.35 to the Crime Victim Compensation Program and $1,000 in token restitution to the victim because the record contained no evidence to support the awards as the state presented no evidence supporting the state's request for $7,584.35, and the record did not show that the trial court considered the factors outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10(a) before requiring restitution as a condition of probation. Watts v. State, 321 Ga. App. 289, 739 S.E.2d 129 (2013).

17-15-14. Funding to victim service providers for disseminating information.

The board shall be authorized to designate and expend not more than 10 percent of the moneys collected and paid into the fund pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of Code Section 17-15-9 and Code Section 17-15-13 to provide funding to victim service providers for the purpose of disseminating materials regarding the availability of the compensation program provided in this chapter and public information purposes regarding the compensation program provided in this chapter.

17-15-15. Responsibility for cost of forensic medical examination.

When a forensic medical examination is conducted, the cost of such forensic medical examination shall be paid for by the fund in an amount not to exceed $1,000.00. The fund shall be responsible for payment of such cost notwithstanding whether the person receiving such forensic medical examination has health insurance or any other source of health care coverage.

17-15-16. Funding for costs of forensic interviews for persons less than 18 years of age or developmentally disabled.

(a) When a forensic interview is conducted and when funding is available, the cost of such interview for a person who is less than 18 years of age or developmentally disabled may be paid for by the fund in an amount to be determined by the board.

(b) The board shall develop standards, protocols, and guidelines related to reimbursement of forensic interview providers.

(c) The board shall establish an annual limit of:

(1) The amount that may be paid from the fund;

(2) The amount that may be reimbursed for each interview; and

(3) The limit on the number of interviews that will be reimbursable from the fund.

(d) Funding may be used only when:

(1) The results of the forensic interview will be for identification of the interviewee's needs, including social services, personal advocacy, case management, substance abuse treatment, and mental health services;

(2) The forensic interviews are conducted in the context of a multidisciplinary investigation and diagnostic team, or in a specialized setting such as a child advocacy center; and

(3) The interviewer is trained to conduct forensic interviews appropriate to the developmental age and abilities of children, or the developmental, cognitive, and physical or communication disabilities presented by adults.

17-15A-1. Legislative authority.

The provisions of this chapter are enacted pursuant Article III, Section VI, Paragraph VI(f) of the Constitution and are in addition to those provisions for compensation of innocent victims of other crimes under Chapter 15 of this title.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-15A-1, enacted by Ga. L. 2003, p. 252, § 1.

17-15A-2. "Graffiti" defined.

As used in this chapter, the term "graffiti" means any inscriptions, words, figures, paintings, or other defacements that are written, marked, etched, scratched, sprayed, drawn, painted, or engraved on or otherwise affixed to any surface of real property or improvements thereon without prior authorization of the owner or occupant of the property by means of any aerosol paint container, broad-tipped marker, gum label, paint stick, graffiti stick, etching equipment, brush, or other device capable of scarring or leaving a visible mark on any surface.

17-15A-3. Legislative findings.

The General Assembly finds and declares that:

(1) Criminal street gang activity is a serious and continuing public safety concern;

(2) Criminal trespass and criminal damage to property in the second degree caused by graffiti being placed unlawfully upon private property are crimes frequently associated with criminal street gang activity; and

(3) It is in the public interest, not only in the pursuit of justice but also as a means of combating such criminal street gang activity and of contributing to the general public welfare by improving the esthetics of public views, to compensate as provided in this chapter those private property owners who are the innocent victims of such criminal trespass or criminal damage to property in the second degree by using inmate labor to remove or obliterate graffiti unlawfully placed on private properties when such graffiti is visible from public roads or other public property.

17-15A-4. Removal of graffiti by inmates; no waiver of sovereign immunity; no fees to property owners.

(a) In order to provide a form of compensation by the state to innocent victims of criminal trespass in violation of Code Section 16-7-21 or criminal damage to property in the second degree in violation of Code Section 16-7-23, either of which crime involved the unlawful placement of graffiti upon private property by a person who was not the owner of such property, the Board of Corrections or any political subdivision of this state may authorize the use of labor by inmates from any penal institution or jail under its authority to remove or obliterate such unlawfully placed graffiti when such graffiti is visible from any public road or other public property. Any such authorization and related supervision of inmates shall be a discretionary function within the meaning of paragraph (2) of Code Section 50-21-24 for purposes of sovereign immunity, and the sovereign immunity of neither the state nor any political subdivision thereof is waived for any loss arising out of such authorization or related supervision of inmates. The Board of Corrections shall provide rules and regulations governing such use of labor by inmates from institutions under its jurisdiction.

(b) No graffiti removal program operated by any political subdivision of this state shall charge any fee to any property owner or operator for removal of graffiti from such property.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Because the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., provides for reciprocal discovery in criminal felony cases with any imbalance favoring the defendant, the law does not violate the due process clause of the United States or Georgia Constitutions. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Pretrial discovery provisions of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., do not implicate or infringe upon the confrontation clause which guarantees only the right to confront and cross-examine those individuals called to testify against a defendant at trial. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Reciprocal discovery provisions of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., do not violate the right to effective representation of counsel by denying the defendant the benefit of counsel's judgment of whether and when to reveal aspects of the defendant's case to the state. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Amended discovery procedure of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. is not an ex post facto law because the law affects purely procedural rights and duties. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Amended discovery procedure of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. is not a bill of attainder, which refers to legislative imposition of punishment on specific persons or on a class of persons without any judicial proceeding. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Amended discovery procedure of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. does not violate due process as it imposes reciprocal discovery upon the state; any difference in the scope of mitigating evidence and the scope of non-statutory aggravating evidence is too minimal to be of constitutional significance on the question of reciprocity of discovery. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Failure to raise issue results in waiver. — Failure to request a continuance to cure any prejudice which may result from the state's failure to comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. waives the right to assert error on appeal stemming from the state's alleged failure to comply with discovery statutes. Shelton v. State, 257 Ga. App. 890, 572 S.E.2d 401 (2002).

Binding effect of discovery procedure. — Amended discovery procedure under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. was binding upon a defendant who elected to participate in the procedure before the amendment. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Prosecution has no obligation to locate defense witnesses. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's request for a continuance based on the state violating the state's discovery obligations and failing to disclose exculpatory evidence when the state failed to provide the defendant with the transporting officer's out-of-state address because the state, acting in the state's role as the prosecution, has no obligation to locate defense witnesses and the defendant failed to show that any alleged discovery violation caused the defendant harm. Lafavor v. State, 334 Ga. App. 125, 778 S.E.2d 377 (2015).

17-16-1. Definitions.

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) "Possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution" means an item which is within the possession, custody, or control of the prosecuting attorney or any law enforcement agency involved in the investigation of the case being prosecuted.

(2) "Statement of a witness" means:

(A) A written or recorded statement, or copies thereof, made by the witness that is signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the witness;

(B) A substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement made by the witness that is recorded contemporaneously with the making of the oral statement and is contained in a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording or a transcription thereof; or

(C) A summary of the substance of a statement made by a witness contained in a memorandum, report, or other type of written document but does not include notes or summaries made by counsel.

(3) "Witness" does not include the defendant.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-16-1, enacted by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 4; Ga. L. 1995, p. 1250, § 2.

Law reviews. — For article, "Criminal Law," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 209 (2001). For article, "Death Penalty Law," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 233 (2001). For survey article on criminal law, see 59 Mercer L. Rev. 89 (2007). For survey article on death penalty law, see 60 Mercer L. Rev. 105 (2008).

"Witness" does not include defendant. — Term "witness", as it is used in O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a), as defined by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(3), "does not include the defendant"; thus, the trial court's ruling requiring the defendant to give notice to the state of any alibi testimony the defendant might give at the trial on the defendant's own behalf was erroneous. Johnson v. State, 272 Ga. 468, 532 S.E.2d 377 (2000).

Failure to produce investigator's notes. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in imposing the extreme sanction of evidence exclusion for the state's failure to produce the investigator's notes because the record did not show that the investigator's informal notes, which the state could not produce, were subject to discovery under any of the provisions of Georgia's Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. State v. Brown, 333 Ga. App. 643, 777 S.E.2d 27 (2015).

Construction with § 17-16-5(a). — Defendant, whose evidence was the sole evidence in support of an alibi defense, was required to file an intention to offer the defense under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a), even when the state was aware that the defendant claimed to be elsewhere on the day of the crime, and such did not affect the defendant's right to testify under the Sixth Amendment; moreover, it was irrelevant that the state was already aware that the defendant claimed to be elsewhere on the date of the crime because the statute provided no exception for such prior knowledge and because the mere claim to be elsewhere when confronted by authorities was a far cry from intending to present the legal defense of alibi. State v. Charbonneau, 281 Ga. 46, 635 S.E.2d 759 (2006).

No demand for witness list made. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in ordering that the defendant provide a copy of a police department internal affairs report that the defendant received in discovery, and which involved an investigation into the defendant's arrest, to the state, as even though the state was not entitled to discovery of statements that defendant made because the reciprocal discovery statute did not include defendant as a "witness," the state sought the material for the pretrial statements that the officer who arrested the defendant made. Dorsey v. State, 261 Ga. App. 181, 582 S.E.2d 158 (2003).

If the defendant did not give the state a written discovery request pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., the state was not obligated under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-3 to furnish a list of witnesses on the state's own initiative; further, as defendant did not file a written demand for a list of witnesses, the state was not obligated to supply such a list. Anderson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 428, 594 S.E.2d 669 (2004).

Failure of state to produce oral statements. — Failure of the state to produce oral and unrecorded statements made by the murder defendant's brother to the police did not violate the state's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 since there can be no possession, custody, or control of a witness' statement that has neither been recorded nor committed to writing. State v. Scales, 209 Vt. 425, 206 A.3d 1263 (2019).

There was no discovery violation because the state had no obligation to produce a statement made by a witness which had not been either recorded or committed to writing. Cox v. State, 242 Ga. App. 334, 528 S.E.2d 871 (2000).

Because no notes were taken during pre-trial interviews with witnesses, the defendant failed to establish that O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-1(1) and 17-16-7 had been violated by the state's failure to produce the written notes. Hunt v. State, 278 Ga. 479, 604 S.E.2d 144 (2004).

When a witness merely makes an oral statement, the obligation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 to produce the statement is not triggered since there can be no "possession, custody, or control" thereof. Forehand v. State, 267 Ga. 254, 477 S.E.2d 560 (1996), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020); Baldwin v. State, 232 Ga. App. 335, 501 S.E.2d 548 (1998).

Although a witness for the prosecution testified regarding an oral statement which the defendant made to the witness immediately following the defendant's act of stabbing the victim, the testimony was not inadmissible on the basis of the state's failure to provide the defendant's statement as recounted by the witness to the police as the statement was not written or recorded and, therefore, the state was not obliged by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2)(C) to provide the statement to the defense. Holmes v. State, 275 Ga. 853, 572 S.E.2d 569 (2002).

Oral additional recollections by caseworker properly admitted. — With regard to a defendant's convictions on two counts of cruelty to children, the trial court did not err by allowing a caseworker to testify to additional recollections the caseworker realized were not contained in the report that was prepared following an interview with the defendant as the information that the defendant asserted that the defendant should have received before trial did not involve a written statement, a written summary of a statement, or a contemporaneous recording of a statement by the caseworker; therefore, the recollections did not constitute a "statement of a witness" under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2), and the state was not obligated to produce the information prior to trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7. Hinds v. State, 296 Ga. App. 80, 673 S.E.2d 598 (2009).

Reference to statement not required. — Even though the state had only a reference in an arrest report to an oral statement from a witness, the trial court did not err in admitting the eyewitness identification testimony over the defendant's objection that O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 had been violated. Thompson v. State, 240 Ga. App. 26, 521 S.E.2d 876 (1999).

No right to source code of breath test machine. — In a DUI case, the defendant was not entitled to discovery of the "source code" used to program a breath test machine. The defendant did not show that the code was in the possession, custody, or control of the state as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-1(1) and 17-16-23(b). Hills v. State, 291 Ga. App. 873, 663 S.E.2d 265 (2008).

Right to continuance based on failure to comply with discovery. — Trial court's denial of a continuance based on the prosecutor's failure to comply with the discovery statute was error entitling the defendant to a new trial. Livingston v. State, 266 Ga. 501, 467 S.E.2d 886 (1996).

Waiver of objections. — Defendants did not raise any issue at trial regarding discovery of tape recorded statements to arson investigator; thus, those arguments were waived and could not be brought up on appeal. Baker v. State, 230 Ga. App. 813, 498 S.E.2d 290 (1998).

Statement in the possession of an investigating officer is deemed to be in the possession of the state, whether or not the statement is in the state's file and the state is obliged to notify the defense of the statement's existence. However, the defendant waived the right to object to testimony based on this statement by failing to object to the testimony during direct examination, or even earlier at the Jackson-Denno hearing. Smiley v. State, 260 Ga. App. 283, 581 S.E.2d 310 (2003).

Defendant's claim on appeal that the trial court erred by allowing a confidential informant who had conducted controlled buys to testify in the defendant's criminal trial was waived on appeal in the defendant's claim that the defendant had invoked reciprocal discovery under the Georgia Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq.; the trial court allowed the defendant's counsel an opportunity to interview the informant before the informant testified and the defendant's attorney did not thereafter seek a continuance in order to cure any prejudice. Brown v. State, 274 Ga. App. 302, 617 S.E.2d 227 (2005).

Trial court did not err in admitting statements the defendant's coconspirators made during the commission of a crime because the defendant did not allege or show bad faith under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 and did not request a continuance upon learning of the alleged discovery violation; the defendant proceeded under the reciprocal discovery provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., and audiotapes of wiretap communications that transpired between a confidential informant and the coconspirators were not introduced at trial since the state relied upon U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents' testimony describing the communications. Kohler v. State, 300 Ga. App. 692, 686 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Summary not provided to defense. — Summary of a witness's statement to the prosecutor was not required to be provided to defense counsel. Williams v. State, 226 Ga. App. 313, 485 S.E.2d 837 (1997).

Application of criminal discovery statute. — State was not required to provide a trial witness list or a custodial statement to the defendant who did not opt to have the criminal discovery statute applied to that defendant. Park v. State, 230 Ga. App. 274, 495 S.E.2d 886 (1998).

Statement of a witness recorded by the prosecutor two days prior to trial did not qualify for a work product exception to the hearsay rule as it was a statement within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2)(A) and did not merely constitute "notes or summaries made by counsel" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2)(C). Bohannon v. State, 230 Ga. App. 829, 498 S.E.2d 316 (1998).

Because docketing of the defendant's case occurred before January 1, 1995, and the state refused to consent to the application of the criminal discovery statute as the state could have under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2(d), the trial court did not err in finding that the criminal discovery statute was inapplicable. King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 957, 122 S. Ct. 2659, 153 L. Ed. 2d 834 (2002).

When, in a murder prosecution, a state's witness testified that the witness took a photograph of the crime scene, which had not been disclosed to the defense, and the prosecutor denied any knowledge of such a photograph, the defendant was not entitled to a mistrial because: (1) the defendant did not seek a continuance or subpoena the witness; (2) no bad faith was shown; and (3) the photo, if the photo existed, would have added nothing to the rest of the evidence. Gabriel v. State, 280 Ga. 237, 626 S.E.2d 491 (2006).

Given that the discovery provisions applicable to misdemeanor prosecutions were not the same as those applicable to felony prosecutions and in a misdemeanor case, the elective, optional mutual discovery provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. were not available, the book-in photographs introduced at the defendant's trial were not among the discoverable material in misdemeanor cases, which included a copy of the indictment or accusation, a witness list if requested, in-custody statements, and written scientific reports. Ford v. State, 285 Ga. App. 106, 645 S.E.2d 590 (2007).

"Notes and summaries" made by a mitigation specialist who is working at the direction of trial counsel in a death penalty case should be regarded as "notes or summaries made by counsel" within the meaning of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2)(C); therefore, a death penalty defendant's ability to employ a mitigation specialist to assist in an investigation is not unduly hampered by the criminal discovery procedure. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion finding no reciprocal discovery violation on the part of the state as to a witness interview because there was no evidence that a recording of the entire interview ever existed as the record showed that the state provided the defendant with a recording of a brief portion of the witness's interview and represented to the trial court that no other portion of that interview was recorded, apparently due to an equipment malfunction. Irving v. State, 351 Ga. App. 779, 833 S.E.2d 162 (2019).

No prejudice shown by defendant. — In a case charging child molestation, the prosecution was obligated to provide the defense with a copy of a child's pretrial statement to an officer, even though the statement was in the exclusive possession of the police. However, since the defendant did not seek to prevent introduction of the statement, and counsel was allowed to inspect the report, the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by the trial court's failure to order the state to make the report available to the defendant for copying, and the state's discovery violation did not give rise to any reversible error. Wilkerson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 721, 598 S.E.2d 364 (2004).

No bad faith. — Theft by shoplifting conviction was upheld on appeal, despite the defendant's claim that the state violated the reciprocal discovery requirements of the Georgia Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., as the defendant conceded at trial that the state did not act in bad faith and failed to request a continuance, but instead, communicated a readiness for trial to both the court and the prosecutor. Brown v. State, 281 Ga. App. 557, 636 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

Testimony of defense witness barred. — Trial court did not err when the court prohibited the testimony of a defense witness due to the defendant's violation of the reciprocal discovery statute as there was evidence to support the trial court's findings of bad faith and prejudice. Grier v. State, 276 Ga. App. 655, 624 S.E.2d 149 (2005).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to engage in reciprocal discovery. — Defendant had not shown that counsel was ineffective for not engaging in reciprocal discovery under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1. The defendant offered no evidence that counsel was unprepared or unaware of the salient evidence before trial and had not shown that the outcome would have been different had counsel opted into discovery. Anuforo v. State, 293 Ga. App. 1, 666 S.E.2d 50 (2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Authority to set and amend bonds. — Once the clerk of the superior court properly files an indictment or once a valid accusation is entered, the superior court has exclusive jurisdiction over the case including all bond issues, unless the court invokes the court's authority to delegate jurisdiction to the magistrate court under former O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(h) or O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1(e). 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 97-19.

Discovery requests for criminal investigation records of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation should be coordinated with the prosecuting attorney who should be the primary source for determining the response. 1998 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 98-15.

(e) This article shall apply also to all criminal cases in which at least one felony offense is charged which was docketed, indicted, or in which an accusation was returned prior to January 1, 1995, if both the prosecuting attorney and the defendant agree in writing that the provisions of this article shall apply to the case.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction with § 17-16-4(a). — If a defendant fails to provide written notice to the prosecuting attorney that the defendant elects to have subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 17-6-2 apply to the defendant's case, the discovery disclosure provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a) do not apply. Miller v. State, 235 Ga. App. 724, 510 S.E.2d 560 (1999), appeal dismissed, 264 Ga. App. 801, 592 S.E.2d 450 (2003); Hammett v. State, 246 Ga. App. 287, 539 S.E.2d 193 (2000).

Construction with § 17-16-6. — If the defendant made no showing that the state improperly withheld evidence from the defendant or acted in bad faith so as to trigger the imposition of any of the sanctions authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, the defendant failed to sustain the defendant's appellate burden of establishing how the defendant was harmed by the trial court's ruling regarding the defendant's failure to properly provide written notice to the prosecution under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2(a). Miller v. State, 235 Ga. App. 724, 510 S.E.2d 560 (1999), appeal dismissed, 264 Ga. App. 801, 592 S.E.2d 450 (2003).

Continuance. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a continuance under the reciprocal discovery statute; the state learned of a new witness with a criminal history only three days before trial, defense counsel's daughter who was assisting defense counsel in court was available to interview the witness, the trial court stated that the defendant would have an opportunity to interview the witness, and the defendant did not show prejudice from the commencement of trial on the day in question. Dunagan v. State, 286 Ga. App. 668, 649 S.E.2d 765 (2007), reversed on other grounds, 283 Ga. 501, 661 S.E.2d 525 (2008).

Discovery in presentence hearings in both capital or noncapital cases is governed by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 and the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., does not apply. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Presentence hearing discovery misconduct. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's trial counsel failing to object to the state failing to provide notice of the state's intent to use a prior conviction in aggravation of sentencing because the defendant could not show that the outcome of sentencing would have been different. Soler v. State, 354 Ga. App. 93, 840 S.E.2d 169 (2020).

Application of criminal discovery statute. — Because docketing of the defendant's case occurred before January 1, 1995, and the state refused to consent to the application of the criminal discovery statute as the state could have under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2(d), the trial court did not err in finding that the criminal discovery statute was inapplicable. King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 957, 122 S. Ct. 2659, 153 L. Ed. 2d 834 (2002).

No written discovery request. — State's use of a witness that was not on the list provided to the defendant did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-3; there was nothing in the record to show that the defendant gave the state a written discovery request pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2 or made a written demand for a list of witnesses, and the witness was offered to rebut an assertion that the defendant made while testifying in the defendant's own defense; moreover, the trial court gave the defendant time to interview the witness and limited the scope of questioning. Rayo-Leon v. State, 281 Ga. App. 74, 635 S.E.2d 368 (2006).

Defendant electing not to participate in Criminal Procedure Discovery Act. — Defendant who chose not to participate in the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., was not entitled to discover all of the state's scientific reports, the state's scientific work product, or the witness list provided by Uniform Superior Court Rule 30.3. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Court of Appeals rejected the defendant's claimed discovery violation as the defendant could not complain that discovery materials were not made available to counsel before trial as the defendant failed to show an election to proceed under the reciprocal discovery statute and could not show what materials were withheld, or how the availability of the materials might have changed the outcome of the trial. Hall v. State, 282 Ga. App. 562, 639 S.E.2d 341 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for continuance to gather more data or obtain an expert's opinion regarding DNA evidence, because the defendant had not opted in to reciprocal discovery under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2, and thus, was not entitled to additional documents, nor the delay to obtain them. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 705, 733 S.E.2d 280 (2012).

Defendant's failure to give notice to the prosecuting attorney. — O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2(a) requires a defendant to provide written notice to the prosecuting attorney that such defendant elects to have the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., apply to the defendant's case. Although the state waited until the first day of trial to have the marijuana tested, in the absence of proof that the state's last-minute test of the suspected marijuana was designed to circumvent the discovery process, the defendant's conviction for marijuana possession stands. Davis v. State, 232 Ga. App. 320, 501 S.E.2d 836 (1998).

Failure to provide inspection of photograph. — With regard to the defendant's domestic violence convictions, the trial court did not err in denying the admission into evidence of a photograph detailing the defendant's injuries based on failing to provide inspection of the photograph because any error by the trial court in excluding the photograph was harmless since the photograph was cumulative of both the defendant's testimony that the wife scratched the defendant as well as the wife's testimony that the wife tried to scratch the defendant. Palmer v. State, 330 Ga. App. 679, 769 S.E.2d 107 (2015).

Having chosen not to provide the written notice required, a defendant was not entitled to have the other provisions of the reciprocal discovery process applied to the defendant's case. Brown v. State, 274 Ga. 202, 552 S.E.2d 812 (2001).

Exclusion of evidence absent finding of bad faith held error. — In the absence of bad faith on the part of the state as well as prejudice to the defendant, the trial court erred in excluding from evidence a videotape and photographs of child pornographic images taken from the defendant's computer as a sanction for the state's failure to comply with a court-ordered discovery deadline. State v. Jones, 283 Ga. App. 539, 642 S.E.2d 183 (2007).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1882, § 4997, former Code 1933, § 27-1403 and former Code Section 17-7-110, decided prior to its 1994 repeal by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose. — Purpose of the former provisions was to ensure that an accused was not confronted at trial with testimony against the accused from witnesses whom the accused had not had the opportunity to interview prior to trial. Hicks v. State, 232 Ga. 393, 207 S.E.2d 30 (1974); Hibbs v. State, 133 Ga. App. 407, 211 S.E.2d 24 (1974); State v. Warren, 133 Ga. App. 793, 213 S.E.2d 53 (1975); Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 203, 217 S.E.2d 343 (1975); Hunnicutt v. State, 135 Ga. App. 774, 219 S.E.2d 22 (1975); Barrentine v. State, 136 Ga. App. 802, 222 S.E.2d 103 (1975); Herring v. State, 238 Ga. 288, 232 S.E.2d 826 (1977); Lingerfelt v. State, 238 Ga. 355, 233 S.E.2d 356 (1977); King v. State, 147 Ga. App. 38, 248 S.E.2d 4 (1978); Reaves v. State, 242 Ga. 542, 250 S.E.2d 376 (1978); Williams v. State, 242 Ga. 757, 251 S.E.2d 254 (1978); Bisard v. State, 158 Ga. App. 62, 279 S.E.2d 310 (1981); Murphy v. State, 158 Ga. App. 278, 279 S.E.2d 728 (1981); Standridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 482, 280 S.E.2d 850 (1981); Ellis v. State, 248 Ga. 414, 283 S.E.2d 870 (1981); Bryant v. State, 174 Ga. App. 522, 330 S.E.2d 743 (1985); Griffin v. State, 183 Ga. App. 386, 358 S.E.2d 917 (1987); Austin v. State, 199 Ga. App. 539, 405 S.E.2d 499 (1991), cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 405 S.E.2d 499 (1991) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403 and former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Purpose of the former provisions requiring that the defendant be furnished on demand with a list of witnesses to be used against the defendant was to protect the defendant from being surprised by evidence which the defendant then had no chance to refute. Gibbons v. State, 136 Ga. App. 609, 222 S.E.2d 55 (1975), appeal dismissed, 237 Ga. 283, 227 S.E.2d 265 (1976); Clark v. State, 138 Ga. App. 266, 226 S.E.2d 89 (1976); Anderson v. State, 141 Ga. App. 249, 233 S.E.2d 240 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Purpose of the former provision was to shield the defendant from the effect of testimony against which the defendant had no opportunity to defend. Upton v. State, 128 Ga. App. 547, 197 S.E.2d 478 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Requirement of disclosure of witnesses serves the dual purpose of defense discovery of witnesses prior to arraignment and the elimination of the element of surprise at trial. Butler v. State, 139 Ga. App. 92, 227 S.E.2d 889 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Demand for a list of witnesses prior to arraignment is for discovery; after arraignment it is to prevent surprise. Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Transcending purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was to insure that an accused was not confronted at trial with testimony against the accused from witnesses whom the accused had not had the opportunity to interview prior to trial. Chezem v. State, 199 Ga. App. 869, 406 S.E.2d 522 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Protection afforded by former provision was against forcing a defendant to trial without adequate time to interview the state's witnesses. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 203, 217 S.E.2d 343 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Application of former § 17-7-110 was within the sound discretion of the trial court. — See Manning v. State, 207 Ga. App. 181, 427 S.E.2d 521 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

How purpose served generally. — Purpose of former provision was served by requiring that the defendant receive the names of the witnesses promptly upon demand and at a reasonable time before trial. Williams v. State, 242 Ga. 757, 251 S.E.2d 254 (1978), appeal dismissed, 287 Ga. 192; 695 S.E.2d 244 (Ga. 2010) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Right to list of witnesses generally. — Right guaranteed by former provision to be furnished, on demand, with a list of witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the accused is founded, is the right, on demand, to be furnished by the district attorney's office, prior to arraignment, with the list of witnesses who will testify for the state on the trial. Sutton v. State, 237 Ga. 423, 228 S.E.2d 820 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Authority for right to demand witness list. — Under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV) and the former provisions, the accused shall be furnished on demand with a copy of the indictment and a list of witnesses who gave testimony before the grand jury. Martin v. State, 73 Ga. App. 573, 37 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 329 U.S. 760, 67 S. Ct. 115, 91 L. Ed. 655 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Requirement that defendant be given a list of witnesses is one of substance. — When the name of the witness is included on any list given to defense counsel a reasonable time before the trial, the statute is satisfied inasmuch as the defendant has had an opportunity to interview the witness before trial. A different result is not called for unless it has been made to appear on the record that a witness whose name appeared on an early list, but who was dropped from a later list, is offered at trial contrary to the prosecution's representation to the defense that the witness' testimony would not be offered during trial. Williams v. State, 242 Ga. 757, 251 S.E.2d 254 (1978), appeal dismissed, 287 Ga. 192, 695 S.E.2d 244 (2010) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Even though a witness's name was not on the state's witness list, the state's formal disclosure of the witness as the confidential informant six weeks prior to trial combined with: (i) the summary of the witness's testimony found in the search warrant affidavit given to the defendant; (ii) the defendant's admitted knowledge of the witness's identity prior to the formal disclosure; (iii) the defendant's own pretrial reference to the witness as a material witness; and (iv) the defendant's attempts to interview the witness prior to trial, fulfilled the purpose of the witness list rule. McLarty v. State, 238 Ga. App. 27, 516 S.E.2d 818 (1999).

Construction. — Former statute was traditionally not interpreted narrowly, but had been construed to accomplish the statutory purpose of giving actual, accurate, timely notice. Newman v. State, 237 Ga. 376, 228 S.E.2d 790 (1976); Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Application of the former provision was within the sound discretion of the trial court. Campbell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 299, 254 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 933, 100 S. Ct. 279, 62 L. Ed. 2d 191 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

No right to witness list prior to preliminary hearing. — There is no right in an accused to have the list of witnesses who will testify on the trial prior to the preliminary hearing. Sutton v. State, 237 Ga. 423, 228 S.E.2d 820 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Section authorizes the sanction of exclusion of the witnesses' testimony. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 203, 217 S.E.2d 343 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Sanction of exclusion is not mandatory when the trial judge in the judge's discretion determines that the defendant can be protected by some other form of relief. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 203, 217 S.E.2d 343 (1975); Murphy v. State, 158 Ga. App. 278, 279 S.E.2d 728 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Since the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was satisfied by the trial court's effort to afford the defendant other forms of relief from the addition of a witness, besides excluding the witness' testimony altogether, there is no error in allowing this witness to testify. Gilbert v. State, 159 Ga. App. 326, 283 S.E.2d 361 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

No right to directed verdict of acquittal for noncompliance. — Noncompliance with the former provisions by the state did not entitle a defendant to a directed verdict of acquittal. Hunnicutt v. State, 135 Ga. App. 774, 219 S.E.2d 22 (1975); Maddox v. State, 145 Ga. App. 212, 243 S.E.2d 636 (1978); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

No right to dismissal of the accusation. Maddox v. State, 145 Ga. App. 212, 243 S.E.2d 636 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Trial judge can use judicial discretion to determine if the defendant can be protected by some other form of appropriate relief, such as a motion for mistrial or continuance. Minis v. State, 150 Ga. App. 671, 258 S.E.2d 308 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Boney v. Tims, 254 Ga. 664, 333 S.E.2d 592 (1985) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If the trial court offered to delay testimony of a witness omitted from the witness list for a day to permit defense counsel to interview the witness, and noted that defense counsel did not object prior to trial and indicated that defense counsel had interviewed the witness and needed neither a recess nor a continuance, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was satisfied by the court's offer to provide relief other than exclusion of the witness's testimony. Simmons v. State, 249 Ga. 860, 295 S.E.2d 84 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Testimony, over defendant's objection, of a witness who was not included on the list of witnesses was not error when the name of the witness was provided to the defendant on the pretrial docket approximately thirteen days prior to trial and when, in making the defendant's objection, the defendant did not request a continuance or seek to conduct an interview prior to the witness being called to testify. Dixon v. State, 214 Ga. App. 374, 448 S.E.2d 40 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Trial judge may allow introduction of additional evidence even though the evidence is not strictly in rebuttal of presented defense evidence. Brady v. State, 206 Ga. App. 497, 426 S.E.2d 15 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Available remedies include mistrial and continuance. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 203, 217 S.E.2d 343 (1975); Hunnicutt v. State, 135 Ga. App. 774, 219 S.E.2d 22 (1975); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Denial of motion for mistrial or continuance would present for review the question of abuse of the trial court's discretion. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 203, 217 S.E.2d 343 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Doctrine of harmless error was applicable to former provisions. Clark v. State, 138 Ga. App. 266, 226 S.E.2d 89 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Doctrine of harmless error was applicable to flaws in the prosecution's compliance with the former provisions. Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Preserving claim of exclusion for appeal. — Contention that the testimony of a witness should have been excluded because the witness's name was not included in the list of witnesses furnished pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 which was raised for the first time on appeal will not be considered. Jackson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 847, 368 S.E.2d 771 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

State's failure to call a witness on the state's list did not deny the defendant's Sixth Amendment rights because, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-191, the defendant could have subpoenaed the witness if deemed necessary to the defendant for impeachment purposes. Johnson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 717, 503 S.E.2d 603 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Demand and Waiver

Requirement that demand be made. — It was imperative that demand be made before the former statute became operative. Coleman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 313, 183 S.E.2d 608 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If the defendant did not give the state a written discovery request pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., the state was not obligated under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-3 to furnish a list of witnesses on the state's own initiative; further, as the defendant did not file a written demand for a list of witnesses, the state was not obligated to supply such a list. Anderson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 428, 594 S.E.2d 669 (2004).

State's use of a witness that was not on the list provided to the defendant did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-3; there was nothing in the record to show that the defendant gave the state a written discovery request pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2 or made a written demand for a list of witnesses, and the witness was offered to rebut an assertion that the defendant made while testifying in the defendant's own defense; moreover, the trial court gave the defendant time to interview the witness and limited the scope of questioning. Rayo-Leon v. State, 281 Ga. App. 74, 635 S.E.2d 368 (2006).

Demand for a list of witnesses must be timely. Smith v. State, 123 Ga. App. 269, 180 S.E.2d 556 (1971); Lashley v. State, 132 Ga. App. 427, 208 S.E.2d 200 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Demand must be made before arraignment. — It was imperative that a demand prior to arraignment be made before the former statute became operative. Bell v. State, 129 Ga. App. 783, 201 S.E.2d 340 (1973); Daniels v. State, 136 Ga. App. 854, 222 S.E.2d 673 (1975); Page v. State, 237 Ga. 20, 227 S.E.2d 8 (1976); Thomas v. State, 139 Ga. App. 467, 228 S.E.2d 604 (1976); Iler v. State, 139 Ga. App. 743, 229 S.E.2d 543 (1976); Bell v. State, 144 Ga. App. 692, 242 S.E.2d 345 (1978); Burns v. State, 147 Ga. App. 429, 249 S.E.2d 145 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

In order to invoke the provisions of the former statute prohibiting the state from calling a witness when the defendant had not been furnished such name, it was necessary that a demand for a list of witnesses be made before arraignment. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 644, 220 S.E.2d 922 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

To whom demand made. — Proper demand must be made upon the district attorney or an assistant district attorney. Coleman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 313, 183 S.E.2d 608 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Demand for a list of witnesses must be made to the solicitor or the solicitor's assistant (now district attorney or assistant to the district attorney). Smith v. State, 123 Ga. App. 269, 180 S.E.2d 556 (1971); Lashley v. State, 132 Ga. App. 427, 208 S.E.2d 200 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

It is imperative that the accused make demand upon the district attorney or an assistant district attorney. Thomas v. State, 139 Ga. App. 467, 228 S.E.2d 604 (1976); Page v. State, 237 Ga. 20, 227 S.E.2d 8 (1976); Bell v. State, 144 Ga. App. 692, 242 S.E.2d 345 (1978); Burns v. State, 147 Ga. App. 429, 249 S.E.2d 145 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Request made on someone other than the district attorney or an assistant district attorney is not a proper demand. Beeks v. State, 225 Ga. 200, 167 S.E.2d 156 (1969); Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 530, 281 S.E.2d 252 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Demand must be in writing and made to district attorney. — Demand for a list of witnesses must be in writing. Burns v. State, 147 Ga. App. 429, 249 S.E.2d 145 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403); Sexton v. State, 189 Ga. App. 12, 374 S.E.2d 824 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110); Ronskowsky v. State, 190 Ga. App. 147, 378 S.E.2d 185 (1989).

Demand for a list of witnesses must be in writing and served upon the district attorney. Jackson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 252, 305 S.E.2d 4 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

If no demand for the list of witnesses appears in the record, it must be assumed that it was not in writing. Smith v. State, 123 Ga. App. 269, 180 S.E.2d 556 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Use of witnesses not listed is not error absent demand in record. — If there is nothing in the record showing to whom the demand alluded to by defense counsel was made, when the demand was made, from whom counsel received the list of witnesses, whose names appeared on the list, or the list itself, there is no error in overruling an objection to calling a witness not listed on the list of witnesses.

Demand and Waiver (Cont'd)

Coleman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 313, 183 S.E.2d 608 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Objection must be made at trial. — If the defendant did not object at trial to a witness's name not being included on the list of witnesses provided to defense counsel prior to trial, such an objection may not be raised for the first time on appeal. Head v. State, 203 Ga. App. 730, 417 S.E.2d 398 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

"On demand" cannot be construed to mean "instanter", and must therefore be taken to imply as soon as possible after the demand is made. Fishman v. State, 128 Ga. App. 505, 197 S.E.2d 467 (1973); Mitchell v. State, 134 Ga. App. 376, 214 S.E.2d 593 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

For denial of continuance if demand for list solely for purposes of delay, see Hunnicutt v. State, 130 Ga. App. 630, 204 S.E.2d 310 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Demand for a list of witnesses may be waived. Smith v. State, 123 Ga. App. 269, 180 S.E.2d 556 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

What constitutes a waiver. — If the indictment contains a plea of not guilty containing a waiver of arraignment, copy of indictment, and list of witnesses sworn before the grand jury, signed by the defendant's attorney, compliance with the demand for a list of witnesses was accordingly waived. Smith v. State, 123 Ga. App. 269, 180 S.E.2d 556 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Written waiver renders oral demand, when allowed, ineffective. Burns v. State, 147 Ga. App. 429, 249 S.E.2d 145 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If there is no demand for the list of witnesses, the accused has no rights by reason of not being furnished with the list. Fears v. State, 125 Ga. 739, 54 S.E. 667 (1906) (decided under former Penal Code 1895, § 945).

Waiver of grand jury list is not waiver of trial jury list. — Waiver of the list of witnesses appearing before the grand jury is not a waiver of the witnesses who would testify at the trial. Grainger v. State, 138 Ga. App. 753, 227 S.E.2d 483 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Failure to cross out printed waiver on indictment. — Demand for the list of witnesses may be waived by not crossing out the printed waiver on the indictment. Lashley v. State, 132 Ga. App. 427, 208 S.E.2d 200 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Complaining of noncompliance when list and arraignment waived. — If the defendant upon call of the defendant's case waived the list of witnesses and arraignment, the defendant cannot complain of the failure to comply with the requirement of this section that every person charged with an offense against the laws shall be furnished, on demand, prior to the person's arraignment, with a copy of the accusation and a list of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the accused is founded. Brooks v. State, 227 Ga. 339, 180 S.E.2d 721 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

List not waived if demand made before arraignment. — Defendant does not waive the defendant's right to demand a list of witnesses the state may call if the demand is made prior to arraignment. The date of arraignment must be regarded as coincident with the date on which the accused was given an opportunity to plead in the case. Hicks v. State, 232 Ga. 393, 207 S.E.2d 30 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Compliance with Demand

List of witnesses must be furnished on demand. Hyatt v. State, 134 Ga. App. 703, 215 S.E.2d 698 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

List must be complete within a reasonable time before trial so that the defense may be adequately prepared. Abner v. State, 139 Ga. App. 600, 229 S.E.2d 83 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Failure to provide a list of state's witnesses until immediately before trial was empty compliance with this section and overruling the motion for continuance was therefore reversible error. Fishman v. State, 128 Ga. App. 505, 197 S.E.2d 467 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Witnesses which state is required to list. — This section requires only that the state furnish a list of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the accused is founded. Campbell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 299, 254 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 933, 100 S. Ct. 279, 62 L. Ed. 2d 191 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

State need not call unnecessary witnesses. — There is no requirement that the state call more witnesses than the state needs to present the state's case. Griffin v. State, 133 Ga. App. 508, 211 S.E.2d 382 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

When a defendant demands a list of those witnesses sworn before the grand jury the state should furnish such list but need not go further and furnish a list of any and all other witnesses who might be called at the trial. Johnson v. State, 121 Ga. App. 281, 173 S.E.2d 412 (1970) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Failure to include coindictee's name on witness list was not reversible error since the defendant was notified a month before trial that the state was dropping charges against the coindictee in exchange for the coindictee's testimony against the defendant. Mize v. State, 269 Ga. 646, 501 S.E.2d 219 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1078, 119 S. Ct. 817, 142 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1999).

Omitted witness not incompetent to testify if no testimony before grand jury. — This section did not render a witness not included on such list incompetent to testify when the latter is not one who testified before the grand jury. Inman v. State, 72 Ga. 269 (1884) (decided under former Code 1882, § 4997).

Care required in assembling first list of witnesses. — It is not necessary that the prosecution scrupulously comb the state's files to guarantee that the first list of witnesses given the accused is absolutely complete under the harsh penalty of not being allowed to use any witness who inadvertently is left off the list. Hicks v. State, 232 Ga. 393, 207 S.E.2d 30 (1974); Abner v. State, 139 Ga. App. 600, 229 S.E.2d 83 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Prosecution may furnish supplemental lists, even though the witnesses' names contained therein are not newly discovered, provided that the complete list is available to the accused promptly after the accused's demand and at a reasonable time before trial. Hicks v. State, 232 Ga. 393, 207 S.E.2d 30 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Supplemental list must be provided within a reasonable period of time before trial. Fleming v. State, 236 Ga. 434, 224 S.E.2d 15 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If there was testimony of witnesses whose names were not included on the original list of witnesses furnished by the prosecution, such omission does not constitute an impermissible violation of this section, if the list was complete within a reasonable time before trial so that the defense can be adequately prepared. Wilson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 501, 260 S.E.2d 527 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

What is reasonable time before trial. — This section required that the list of witnesses must be complete within a reasonable time before trial so that the defense may be adequately prepared. What constitutes a reasonable time before trial must depend upon the nature of the case, the number of the state's witnesses, the nature of the witnesses' testimony, and any other factor which may logically bear upon the question. Ellis v. State, 248 Ga. 414, 283 S.E.2d 870 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Furnishing name of witness after voir dire. — It was error to allow the testimony of a witness who was not named on the original witness list but, rather, included on an updated list given to the defendant after voir dire. Bentley v. State, 210 Ga. App. 862, 438 S.E.2d 110 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Furnishing name of witness on day of voir dire. — Witness could testify as to a prior transaction even though the identity of the witness was not disclosed until the day of voir dire. Dacus v. State, 213 Ga. App. 180, 444 S.E.2d 110 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Furnishing list day before trial. — If a new and additional list of witnesses is furnished to defense counsel the day before the trial, and defense counsel states that counsel has not had time to interview the witnesses and determine exactly what the evidence is against the client, the court errs in refusing to grant a continuance for the term or at least a delay of trial for some time later in the term. Barrentine v. State, 136 Ga. App. 802, 222 S.E.2d 103 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Five days is sufficient notice. — Since the defendant was given oral notice of a prosecution witness five or six days before trial, this was sufficient time to locate the witness and check the witness's background. Logan v. State, 170 Ga. App. 809, 318 S.E.2d 516 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Addresses and telephone numbers of witnesses. — Former Code 1933, § 27-1403 did not require that the addresses of all witnesses be furnished. Holsey v. State, 235 Ga. 270, 219 S.E.2d 374 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403); Campbell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 299, 254 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 933, 100 S. Ct. 279, 62 L. Ed. 2d 191 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

List of witnesses meets the requirement of this section. Addresses and telephone numbers of witnesses need not be furnished. Roberts v. State, 243 Ga. 604, 255 S.E.2d 689 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

This section required only that the state furnish a list of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the accused was founded. The section did not demand that the addresses of all such witnesses be furnished. Lewis v. State, 159 Ga. App. 135, 282 S.E.2d 750 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Addresses and telephone numbers of witnesses need not be furnished. The better practice, however, would dictate that the state furnish such addresses and telephone numbers along with the list of witnesses if such information is available. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1987); overruled on other grounds, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

When a witness's name was contained in the indictment, a defendant cannot validly contend that the defendant had been surprised or unable to interview the witness in question through lack of knowledge of such witness. Herring v. State, 238 Ga. 288, 232 S.E.2d 826 (1977); Garvin v. State, 144 Ga. App. 396, 240 S.E.2d 925 (1977); Redmond v. State, 252 Ga. 142, 312 S.E.2d 315 (1984) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Misspelling of witness's name. — Trial court did not err in permitting Johnny Hull to testify, although the state mistakenly identified the witness as "Johnny Hill" in response to the defendant's request for a witness list pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110, since the witness's address had also been provided to the defendant and the witness was identified sufficiently for counsel to have had an opportunity to interview the witness prior to trial. Duncan v. State, 205 Ga. App. 181, 421 S.E.2d 336 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Witness listed as "Ms. [or Mrs.] Floyd" was identified sufficiently for counsel to have an opportunity to interview the witness prior to trial as although the witness' name had been "Josephine Dedmon" at the time of the crime, the witness' previous name had been "Josephine Floyd." Moody v. State, 258 Ga. 818, 375 S.E.2d 30 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Failure to have a sheriff's name reported on the list of state's witnesses supplied upon demand to the accused when there is no injury shown comes within the harmless error rule. Caito v. State, 130 Ga. App. 831, 204 S.E.2d 765 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

State may use witnesses not appearing on list when list not demanded. — If the defendant fails to demand a list of witnesses, the state may use a witness whose name had not been furnished to the defendant. Prather v. State, 223 Ga. 721, 157 S.E.2d 734 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If no demand is made upon the solicitor general (now district attorney) for the names of witnesses to be used by the state until after arraignment and after the first witness had testified at trial, this section does not require the state to use only those witnesses shown on the indictment. Green v. State, 223 Ga. 611, 157 S.E.2d 257 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

It is not error to permit a witness to testify whose name did not appear on a list of witnesses furnished to defendant if there was no demand for a list of witnesses filed prior to arraignment. Jackson v. State, 235 Ga. 857, 221 S.E.2d 605 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If there was no formal demand for a list of witnesses before arraignment and no motion for mistrial or for continuance, it is not error to allow a witness whose name is not on a witness list furnished the defense to testify. Grainger v. State, 138 Ga. App. 753, 227 S.E.2d 483 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Harm from noncompliance must be shown. — Defendant contended that the trial court erred by failing to dismiss the indictment because the defendant was not furnished with a complete copy of the indictment pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 pointing out that: (1) Count 1 of the indictment was not attached to the copy which the defendant was furnished; and that (2) the names of the grand jurors who found the indictment did not appear on the defendant's copy of the indictment; however, there was no resultant harm to the defendant, since the defendant had not demonstrated that the defendant was surprised by Count 1 of the indictment and the defendant had not shown how the defendant was prejudiced by the absence of the names of the grand jurors. Byrd v. State, 182 Ga. App. 284, 355 S.E.2d 666 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Failure of defendant to press rights. — If the defendant never sought to inquire whether the witness had arrived at the site of the trial, nor asked the court for an opportunity to interview the witness prior to the witness's testimony, the defendant failed to demonstrate that the defendant was denied access to the witness. Felker v. State, 252 Ga. 351, 314 S.E.2d 621, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 229, 83 L. Ed. 2d 158 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Failure to include witness's name harmless error. — Prosecution's failure to include witness's name on written list of witnesses submitted to defense is harmless error since the defendant received oral notice and did not claim to be unfairly surprised. Logan v. State, 170 Ga. App. 809, 318 S.E.2d 516 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Although the appellants contended that the trial court erred in allowing the state to call four witnesses whose names had not appeared on the list of witnesses provided by the state, including the forensic chemist from the State Crime Laboratory who had analyzed some cocaine, plus three chain-of-custody witnesses, the failure to list these witnesses resulted in no prejudice to either of the appellants. At the time of their arraignment, both appellants were presented with a copy of the crime lab report stating the results of the chemical analysis of the cocaine, and this report disclosed both the identity and the involvement not only of the crime lab expert but also of two of the three chain-of-custody witnesses. As for the third chain-of-custody witness, a file clerk at the police station who had logged the contraband into the evidence room, the trial court allowed the appellants an opportunity to interview the clerk before the clerk took the stand. Askew v. State, 192 Ga. App. 351, 385 S.E.2d 21 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Compliance with Superior Ct. Rule 31.3 cured failure to list prior rape victim. — Because the defense was on notice as to the prior rape victim's identity through the prosecution's Notice of Similar Occurrence filed pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.3, no cognizable constitutional claim was presented by the prosecution's failure to include her name on the prosecution's list of witnesses pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 and Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 30.3. McBride v. Sharpe, 25 F.3d 962 (11th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 990, 115 S. Ct. 489, 130 L. Ed. 2d 401 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Multiple indictments. — Since the defendant was tried upon three indictments, since the defendant's objection was that the defendant was not supplied with a list of witnesses as to only one of the indictments, since there was no written demand for such a list under that indictment, and since the witnesses called as to that indictment were on a list supplied to the defendant as to the other indictments, the circumstances did not constitute reversible error. Moore v. State, 170 Ga. App. 709, 318 S.E.2d 181 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Witness not on indictment, not before grand jury, nor in list demanded. — Witness whose name does not appear on the indictment at the time the case is called for trial, and who did not testify before the grand jury, and whose name was not furnished on demand by the prosecuting attorney to the defendant may nevertheless be sworn as a witness for the state in the trial of a case. Smith v. State, 74 Ga. App. 777, 41 S.E.2d 541, cert. denied, 332 U.S. 772, 68 S. Ct. 86, 92 L. Ed. 357 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

When testimony of unlisted witness does not require reversal. — If, under the circumstances, the purposes of this section are met, or if the relief sought exceeds the relief sufficient to satisfy those purposes, or if the error is harmless, reversal is not required even though an unlisted witness is allowed to testify in contravention of that section. Huff v. State, 141 Ga. App. 66, 232 S.E.2d 403 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

No mistrial if testimony of omitted witness is stricken. — Failure through inadvertence to give a defendant a correct list of witnesses, as when the name of one is omitted, is not cause for a mistrial of the case, especially if the testimony of the witness omitted is stricken from the record. Moore v. State, 25 Ga. App. 251, 102 S.E. 916, cert. denied, 25 Ga. App. 172 (1920) (decided under Penal Code 1910, § 970).

Defendant acknowledging actual notice of witnesses and never alleging prejudice. — Prosecution's failure to provide a written list is plainly harmless if defense counsel acknowledges actual notice of the witnesses eight days before trial, and never alleges prejudice of any kind whatever from the fact that the notification was oral and not written. Newman v. State, 237 Ga. 376, 228 S.E.2d 790 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Continuance warranted when record discloses neither notice nor lack of prejudice. — Since the state made no showing in the record that the appellant was otherwise put on notice as to the witnesses to be called or that the appellant could not have been prejudiced thereby, the late furnishing of the witness list warrants a continuance. Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Failure to request continuance. — Trial court properly permitted a witness who was not listed to testify since, although the defendant's trial counsel was appointed only a week before, the defendant nevertheless was represented by other counsel at the time of arraignment and the defendant, in making an objection, did not request a continuance or otherwise seek an opportunity to conduct an interview prior to the witness being called to testify. Tyus v. State, 196 Ga. App. 857, 397 S.E.2d 194 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Interview by defense of unlisted witness before witness testifies. — If counsel for the defendant is given the opportunity to and does interview the unlisted witness before the witness is allowed to testify, the purpose of this section is satisfied. Butler v. State, 139 Ga. App. 92, 227 S.E.2d 889 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If defense counsel is furnished, prior to trial, with the name of a witness, incorrectly spelled, as well as the witness's telephone number and address, and the trial court recesses the trial to allow defense counsel the opportunity to interview the witness, but before the witness testifies, defense counsel makes no motion for continuance or other time-gaining procedure, the defendant shows no prejudice to the defendant's rights in that the purpose of this section was substantially satisfied. King v. State, 147 Ga. App. 38, 248 S.E.2d 4 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If defense counsel knows of the existence of a witness not on the state's list and is given the opportunity to talk to the witness prior to trial, the witness may be allowed to testify. Stansifer v. State, 166 Ga. App. 785, 305 S.E.2d 481 (1983), but see Hatcher v. State, 224 Ga. App. 747, 482 S.E.2d 443 (1997); Stewart v. State, 232 Ga. App. 565, 502 S.E.2d 502 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

When the trial court allows a defendant an opportunity to interview "unlisted" witnesses, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was satisfied and the trial court properly allowed the witnesses to testify. White v. State, 253 Ga. 106, 317 S.E.2d 196 (1984); Boscaino v. State, 186 Ga. App. 133, 366 S.E.2d 789, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 366 S.E.2d 789 (1988); Moss v. State, 196 Ga. App. 81, 395 S.E.2d 363 (1990); Summerour v. State, 211 Ga. App. 65, 438 S.E.2d 176 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Trial court did not err in offering the defendant a reasonable time to interview an expert witness not included on the list of witnesses and to obtain an expert witness of the defendant's choice or in refusing to exclude the witness's testimony when the defendant refused the offer. Johnson v. State, 171 Ga. App. 91, 318 S.E.2d 799 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Although the state failed to include the witness's name on the list of witnesses, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was met since the trial court allowed counsel for the defendant to interview the witness before the witness was called to testify. Kickery v. State, 185 Ga. App. 274, 363 S.E.2d 805 (1987), cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 363 S.E.2d 805 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

State witness was properly allowed to testify even though the witness's name was not on the list of witnesses provided to the defendant since the witness had only become known to the prosecutor within the preceding 72 hours and defense counsel acknowledged that counsel interviewed the witness prior to trial. McIntosh v. State, 185 Ga. App. 612, 365 S.E.2d 454, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 365 S.E.2d 454 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Admission of testimony by a witness is admissible even though the witness's name does not appear on a list of witnesses furnished by the prosecution to the defense since: (1) the name of the witness appeared in an allegation in an indictment charging the defendant; (2) the defendant did not file a demand for a list of witnesses prior to an arraignment; (3) the prosecutor provided the name of the witness to the defendant in a notice of intent to present evidence of similar transactions; and (4) the defendant did not request a continuance or otherwise seek an opportunity to interview the witness prior to trial. State v. McBride, 258 Ga. 321, 368 S.E.2d 758 (1988); Ronskowsky v. State, 190 Ga. App. 147, 378 S.E.2d 185 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Allowing the state to call two police officers whose names were not on the list of witnesses was not error since the names were contained in the state's file, which was made available to defendant's counsel and was examined by counsel prior to trial. Wade v. State, 198 Ga. App. 15, 400 S.E.2d 377 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

When the identity and involvement of a witness was otherwise disclosed to the defendant in discovery and was provided to the defendant by the state, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was duly served and no error laid in permitting the state to call such a witness even though he or she was not listed as a witness in response to a demand pursuant to the statute. Gossett v. State, 199 Ga. App. 286, 404 S.E.2d 595, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 404 S.E.2d 595 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Trial court in the court's discretion may allow an unlisted witness to testify upon giving the defense an opportunity to interview the witness prior to the time the witness testifies. Willis v. State, 202 Ga. App. 447, 414 S.E.2d 681 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Unlisted coindictee may testify. — Coindictee, charged with committing the robbery with the defendant, may be allowed to testify even though the coindictee's name was not on the list of witnesses provided to the defendant. Wright v. State, 167 Ga. App. 445, 306 S.E.2d 428 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

If a coindictee testified as a state witness even though the coindictee's name was not included on the list of witnesses prepared by the state, information that the coindictee was available for interviews by defense counsel prior to trial and that the attorneys representing the defendants had met with the coindictee for approximately one hour reinforced a finding of lack of surprise on the part of the defendants at the coindictee's appearance at trial on behalf of the state. Graham v. State, 171 Ga. App. 242, 319 S.E.2d 484 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Testimony by codefendant whose name was not furnished. — It was not error to permit a codefendant whose name appeared on the indictment to testify although the codefendant's name was not furnished to the defense as required by former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110. Lawrence v. State, 174 Ga. App. 788, 331 S.E.2d 600 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Calling unlisted witness in criminal trial in rebuttal is not error. Hearn v. State, 145 Ga. App. 469, 243 S.E.2d 728 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403); Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

It is not error to allow a witness to testify whose name was not on the list of witnesses if that witness is called in rebuttal. Savage v. State, 152 Ga. App. 392, 263 S.E.2d 218 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403); Hudgins v. State, 153 Ga. App. 603, 266 S.E.2d 284 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403); Rowell v. State, 176 Ga. App. 309, 335 S.E.2d 689 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

It is not error to allow the state to call a witness in rebuttal even though the witness's name did not appear on the list of witnesses furnished to the defendant. Gibby v. State, 166 Ga. App. 413, 304 S.E.2d 518 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Calling an unlisted witness in rebuttal is not error and does not violate former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110. Forney v. State, 255 Ga. 316, 338 S.E.2d 252 (1986); Crosby v. State, 188 Ga. App. 191, 372 S.E.2d 471 (1988); Kelly v. State, 197 Ga. App. 811, 399 S.E.2d 568 (1990); Cook v. State, 199 Ga. App. 523, 405 S.E.2d 341 (1991); Snider v. State, 200 Ga. App. 12, 406 S.E.2d 542 (1991); Leatherwood v. State, 212 Ga. App. 342, 441 S.E.2d 813 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Only material which creates a reasonable doubt as to guilt must be disclosed under a general request for anything exculpatory. Radford v. State, 251 Ga. 50, 302 S.E.2d 555 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Substitution of another witness. — Defendant was not unfairly surprised when the state substituted for a listed witness another department of public safety employee whose name had not been listed since the witness was qualified as a custodian of the records for the department and the primary purpose of the witness's testimony was merely to authenticate the defendant's driving records. Parks v. State, 180 Ga. App. 31, 348 S.E.2d 481 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Opportunity for further cross-examination or more time if state witness left off list. — Although the name of a witness for the state was inadvertently left off the witness list, defense counsel's interview of the witness prior to the witness being called to the stand and the trial judge's offer to allow defense counsel to call the witness back and to have further extensive cross-examination or more time sufficiently satisfied the purpose of former Code 1933, § 27-1403. Cates v. State, 245 Ga. 30, 262 S.E.2d 796 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Denial of motion for continuance when state's list of witnesses is amended. — If the prosecution amends the list of witnesses after voir dire of the witnesses had been completed and the defendant makes a motion that the substitute witness not be allowed to testify, or that the defense be granted a continuance in order to investigate the witness's proposed testimony and if the court gives the defense the opportunity to interrogate the witness prior to testifying, the court is not in error if the court overrules the defendant's motion for a continuance on the basis of the amended witness list. Legare v. State, 243 Ga. 744, 257 S.E.2d 247, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 984, 100 S. Ct. 491, 62 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Examining witness outside jury's presence. — Allowing a party an opportunity to examine the witnesses outside of the jury's presence is an inadequate means of curing the state's failure to comply with the defendant's demand for a list of witnesses. Brown v. State, 242 Ga. 536, 250 S.E.2d 438 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Testimony against defendant by codefendants. — If two codefendants change their plea to guilty upon the case being called for trial, and offer their testimony against the defendant, there is no prejudice in admitting their testimony even if their names were listed in the defendant's indictment. Anderson v. State, 141 Ga. App. 249, 233 S.E.2d 240 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Allowing a codefendant to testify although the codefendant's name was not on the original list of witnesses is not error since it could not be maintained that the defendant was surprised or unable to interview through lack of knowledge of the witness. Lingerfelt v. State, 238 Ga. 355, 233 S.E.2d 356 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If the defendant has notice that a designated witness will testify about certain records, and the true custodian of the records is subsequently substituted to give identical testimony, no harm results to the defendant merely because the name of the true custodian wasn't on the witness list. Clark v. State, 138 Ga. App. 266, 226 S.E.2d 89 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Unlisted witness subpoenaed by defense. — Trial court did not err in admitting the testimony of an accomplice even though the state failed to list the accomplice as a witness because the defendant personally subpoenaed the accomplice as a witness and the accomplice testified the accomplice previously discussed the facts of the case with the defendant's counsel. Herndon v. State, 187 Ga. App. 77, 369 S.E.2d 264 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Testimony of witness allowed. — See Conley v. State, 258 Ga. 339, 368 S.E.2d 502 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Newly Discovered Evidence

Even if the witnesses' names were not newly discovered, the overriding purpose of this section was to assure the defendant that the defendant will not be confronted at trial with the testimony of witnesses the defendant had not had time to interview prior to trial. Fleming v. State, 236 Ga. 434, 224 S.E.2d 15 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Evidence which state had no knowledge the state would need when list furnished. — Requirement that the accused, on demand, be furnished with a list of the state's witnesses is mandatory and it is error to permit a witness whose name is not on the list furnished to testify unless the solicitor (now district attorney) or prosecuting attorney shall state in the prosecutor's place that the evidence sought to be presented is newly discovered evidence which the state was not aware of at the time of the state's furnishing the defendant with a list of the witnesses. Huffaker v. State, 119 Ga. App. 742, 168 S.E.2d 895 (1969) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If the state's attorney does not state precisely that the evidence of rebuttal witnesses is newly discovered, but the state's attorney does state that it is evidence which the state attorney had no knowledge that the state's attorney would need at the time the state attorney furnished the list of witnesses, this rebuttal evidence would come within the exception of former Code 1933, § 27-1403. Yeomans v. State, 229 Ga. 488, 192 S.E.2d 362 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Because the state had no prior knowledge that the testimony of a witness would be needed for rebuttal at the time such list was furnished constitutes an exception under this section. Dagenhart v. State, 234 Ga. 809, 218 S.E.2d 607 (1975); Gibbons v. State, 136 Ga. App. 609, 222 S.E.2d 55 (1975), appeal dismissed, 237 Ga. 283, 227 S.E.2d 265 (1976); Smith v. State, 141 Ga. App. 720, 234 S.E.2d 385 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

That investigating officers may have known of the witnesses does not impute such knowledge to the prosecuting attorney and does not preclude such witnesses from being newly discovered evidence. Abner v. State, 139 Ga. App. 600, 229 S.E.2d 83 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Location of witness on morning of trial constitutes newly discovered evidence. — If the solicitor (now district attorney) states that the evidence is newly discovered because the witness had not been located until 6:30 of the morning of the trial, this is sufficient to meet the requirements of this section exception to consent of the defendant. Ferrell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 405, 254 S.E.2d 404 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1021, 100 S. Ct. 679, 62 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403); Berry v. State, 268 Ga. 437, 490 S.E.2d 389 (1997).

Witness's inability to testify does not make another's newly discovered evidence. — Fact that a witness previously called by the state for the purpose of establishing venue is unable to testify definitely in that regard does not make another's testimony as to venue such newly discovered evidence as would justify admission without the defendant's consent under former Code 1933, § 27-1403. Heard v. State, 135 Ga. App. 687, 218 S.E.2d 867 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Defense interview of newly discovered witnesses. — Allowing defense counsel to interview newly discovered witnesses is clearly permitted as an alternative to a further continuance. Lakes v. State, 244 Ga. 217, 259 S.E.2d 469 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

If the trial court has allowed a defendant the opportunity to interview a recently discovered and unlisted witness prior to the testimony, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 has been satisfied. Jones v. State, 181 Ga. App. 651, 353 S.E.2d 593 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

No violation upon discovery of witness's other name, absent inability to interview. — There was no violation of the provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 requiring the state, on the defendant's demand, to provide a list of witnesses to be called at trial since the defendant's counsel discovered two days before trial that the witness on the list had another name, when it was established that the witness was also known by the other name, and that the defendant's counsel knew of the second name but made no showing that the defendant was unable to interview the witness in the remaining time and made no motion for a continuance in order to interview the witness. Gardner v. State, 172 Ga. App. 677, 324 S.E.2d 535 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Serving witness list just prior to trial. — Because the defendant was served with a supplemental witness list five days prior to trial, the defendant had a reasonable time in which to interview the witness, and in view of other circumstances, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was satisfied. Alvin v. State, 253 Ga. 740, 325 S.E.2d 143 (1985), overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Evidence not known until morning of trial. — Although the trial court permitted testimony from a state's witness whose name had not been provided to the defendants prior to trial in accordance with the defendant's demand for a list of such witnesses made pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110, but the state's attorney stated that this evidence had not become known to the state's attorney until the morning it was offered and since the trial court provided defense counsel an opportunity to interview the witness before the witness testified, there was no error. Daniel v. State, 180 Ga. App. 179, 348 S.E.2d 720 (1986).

Realization just before trial that bill of sale is a copy, not the original. — When the prosecuting attorney stated that the prosecutor had been assured by a witness that the bill of sale was the original document, but when the prosecutor obtained the document just before the trial the prosecutor realized the document was not the original but a copy, and thereupon called the seller to the stand to prove the transaction and this witness testified in effect only that the copy bill of sale correctly delineated the transfer, such evidence, while not exactly newly discovered, was sufficiently within the spirit of this section as not to require a reversal. Elrod v. State, 128 Ga. App. 250, 196 S.E.2d 360 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Sufficient showing of surprise. — When a witness, a microanalyst, testified that the state learned the witness had received items from another microanalyst and not from a police officer, at which point the defendant objected as to the chain of custody of items, under the circumstances there was sufficient showing of surprise to warrant the trial court's action in allowing other microanalyst to testify even though that microanalyst's name was not on the list of witnesses. Harvey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 7, 299 S.E.2d 61 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Surprise witness not necessitating new trial. — Under the newly discovered evidence provision, the refusal of the trial court to grant a mistrial when the state produced a surprise witness about whom the jury had not been qualified, who was the son of the victim, who related that the defendant was the person who, on the night of the murder, had threatened to kill the witness's father for refusing to sell the defendant beer without the proper identification, was not error, where, when the son attended the first day of the trial and saw the defendants, the witness recognized the defendant as being the one who had made the threat, the witness revealed these facts to the state, the state decided to call the individual as a witness the next day, the defense was apprised of this fact, the trial court recessed to give the defendants two hours to interview this witness, and the trial did not commence until the next day, when this witness was vigorously cross-examined. Hughes v. State, 257 Ga. 200, 357 S.E.2d 80 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Testimony of a witness was properly allowed even though the witness's name was not given to the defendants until four days after the trial began. The prosecutor stated that the prosecutor had discovered new evidence regarding the witness on the evening before the prosecutor furnished the witness's name to the defendants and the trial judge gave the defendants' attorney an opportunity to interview the witness. The fact that the witness would not cooperate with the attorney did not justify disallowing the witness's testimony. Hayes v. State, 261 Ga. 439, 405 S.E.2d 660 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

It was not error to allow the testimony of a witness whose name was not included on the state's list of witnesses since the prosecutor stated that the prosecutor had no need to call the witness until the defendant's cross-examination of the cashier of the convenience store made it appear that another videotape of the robbery existed. Lattimore v. State, 203 Ga. App. 259, 416 S.E.2d 829 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Newly discovered rebuttal witness properly called. — The trial court did not err by permitting the state to call an unlisted out-of-state witness for rebuttal since the state had just learned of the witness's existence and had introduced the witness after the court had reconvened, originally in anticipation of the prosecution's medical examiner, but subsequently for the introduction of the unlisted witness, who, though in violation of the rule of sequestration, was properly called in light of the court's curative instructions thereto. Thomas v. State, 262 Ga. 754, 425 S.E.2d 872 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 27-1403 and former Code Section 17-7-110, decided prior to its 1994 repeal by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Section does not prohibit the addition of names to the list of witnesses, but does prohibit the witnesses from testifying, without the consent of the defendant, unless the witnesses' names appeared on the list given to the defendant. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-170 (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1403).

Defendant in probate court is entitled to the discovery rights under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-110 [repealed] and 17-7-211 [repealed]. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-13 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

17-16-4. Disclosure required by prosecuting attorney and defendant; inspections allowed; reducing oral reports to writing; continuing duty to disclose; discovery creating threat of physical or economic harm.

(a)(1) The prosecuting attorney shall, no later than ten days prior to trial, or at such time as the court orders, disclose to the defendant and make available for inspection, copying, or photographing any relevant written or recorded statements made by the defendant, or copies thereof, within the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution and that portion of any written record containing the substance of any relevant oral statement made by the defendant, whether before or after arrest, in response to interrogation by any person then known to the defendant to be a law enforcement officer or member of the prosecuting attorney's staff. The prosecuting attorney shall also disclose to the defendant the substance of any other relevant oral statement made by the defendant, before or after arrest, in response to interrogation by any person then known by the defendant to be a law enforcement officer or member of the prosecuting attorney's staff if the state intends to use that statement at trial. The prosecuting attorney shall also disclose to the defendant the substance of any other relevant written or oral statement made by the defendant while in custody, whether or not in response to interrogation. Statements of coconspirators that are attributable to the defendant and arguably admissible against the defendant at trial also shall be disclosed under this Code section. Where the defendant is a corporation, partnership, association, or labor union, the court may grant the defendant, upon its motion, discovery of any similar such statement of any witness who was:

(A) At the time of the statement, so situated as an officer or employee as to have been legally able to bind the defendant in respect to conduct constituting the offense; or

(B) At the time of the offense, personally involved in the alleged conduct constituting the offense and so situated as an officer or employee as to have been legally able to bind the defendant in respect to that alleged conduct in which the witness was involved.

(2) The prosecuting attorney shall, no later than ten days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, furnish to the defendant a copy of the defendant's Georgia Crime Information Center criminal history, if any, as is within the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution. Nothing in this Code section shall affect the provisions of Code Section 17-10-2.

(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the prosecuting attorney shall, no later than ten days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, permit the defendant at a time agreed to by the parties or ordered by the court to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, audio and visual tapes, films and recordings, or copies or portions thereof and to inspect and photograph buildings or places which are within the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution and are intended for use by the prosecuting attorney as evidence in the prosecution's case-in-chief or rebuttal at the trial or were obtained from or belong to the defendant. Evidence that is within the possession, custody, or control of the Forensic Sciences Division of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or other laboratory for the purpose of testing and analysis may be examined, tested, and analyzed at the facility where the evidence is being held pursuant to reasonable rules and regulations adopted by the Forensic Sciences Division of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or the laboratory where the evidence is being held.

(B) With respect to any books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, audio and visual tapes, films and recordings, or copies or portions thereof which are within the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution and are intended for use by the prosecuting attorney as evidence in the prosecution's case-in-chief or rebuttal at the trial of any violation of Part 2 of Article 3 of Chapter 12 of Title 16, such evidence shall, no later than ten days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, be allowed to be inspected by the defendant but shall not be allowed to be copied.

(4) The prosecuting attorney shall, no later than ten days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, permit the defendant at a time agreed to by the parties or ordered by the court to inspect and copy or photograph a report of any physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests or experiments, including a summary of the basis for the expert opinion rendered in the report, or copies thereof, if the state intends to introduce in evidence in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal the results of the physical or mental examination or scientific test or experiment. If the report is oral or partially oral, the prosecuting attorney shall reduce all relevant and material oral portions of such report to writing and shall serve opposing counsel with such portions no later than ten days prior to trial. Nothing in this Code section shall require the disclosure of any other material, note, or memorandum relating to the psychiatric or psychological treatment or therapy of any victim or witness.

(5) The prosecuting attorney shall, no later than ten days prior to trial, or at such time as the court orders but in no event later than the beginning of the trial, provide the defendant with notice of any evidence in aggravation of punishment that the state intends to introduce in sentencing.

(b)(1) The defendant within ten days of timely compliance by the prosecuting attorney but no later than five days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, shall permit the prosecuting attorney at a time agreed to by the parties or as ordered by the court to inspect and copy or photograph books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, audio and visual tapes, films and recordings, or copies or portions thereof and to inspect and photograph buildings or places, which are within the possession, custody, or control of the defendant and which the defendant intends to introduce as evidence in the defense's case-in-chief or rebuttal at the trial.

(2) The defendant shall within ten days of timely compliance by the prosecuting attorney but no later than five days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, permit the prosecuting attorney at a time agreed to by the parties or as ordered by the court to inspect and copy or photograph a report of any physical or mental examinations and of scientific tests or experiments, including a summary of the basis for the expert opinion rendered in the report, or copies thereof, if the defendant intends to introduce in evidence in the defense's case-in-chief or rebuttal the results of the physical or mental examination or scientific test or experiment. If the report is oral or partially oral, the defendant shall reduce all relevant and material oral portions of such report to writing and shall serve opposing counsel with such portions no later than five days prior to trial. Nothing in this Code section shall require the disclosure of any other material, note, or memorandum relating to the psychiatric or psychological treatment or therapy of any defendant or witness.

(3)(A) The defendant shall, no later than the announcement of the verdict of the jury or if the defendant has waived a jury trial at the time the verdict is published by the court, serve upon the prosecuting attorney all books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, audio and visual tapes, films and recordings, or copies or portions thereof and to inspect and photograph buildings or places which are within the possession, custody, or control of the defendant and which the defendant intends to introduce as evidence in the presentence hearing.

(B) The defendant shall, no later than the announcement of the verdict of the jury or if the defendant has waived a jury trial at the time the verdict is published by the court, serve upon the prosecuting attorney all reports of any physical or mental examinations and scientific tests or experiments, including a summary of the basis for the expert opinions rendered in the reports, or copies thereof, if the defendant intends to introduce in evidence in the presentence hearing the results of the physical or mental examination or scientific test or experiment. If the report is oral or partially oral, the defendant shall reduce all relevant and material oral portions of such report to writing and shall serve opposing counsel with such portions.

(C) The defendant shall, no later than five days before the trial commences, serve upon the prosecuting attorney a list of witnesses that the defendant intends to call as a witness in the presentence hearing. No later than the announcement of the verdict of the jury or if the defendant has waived a jury trial at the time the verdict is published by the court, the defendant shall produce for the opposing party any statement of such witnesses that is in the possession, custody, or control of the defendants or the defendant's counsel that relates to the subject matter of the testimony of such witnesses unless such statement is protected from disclosure by the privilege contained in paragraph (5), (6), (7), or (8) of subsection (a) of Code Section 24-5-501.

(c) If prior to or during trial a party discovers additional evidence or material previously requested or ordered which is subject to discovery or inspection under this article, such party shall promptly notify the other party of the existence of the additional evidence or material and make this additional evidence or material available as provided in this article.

(d) Upon a sufficient showing that a discovery required by this article would create a substantial threat of physical or economic harm to a witness, the court may at any time order that the discovery or inspection be denied, restricted, or deferred or make such other order as is appropriate. Upon motion by a party, the court may permit the party to make such showing, in whole or in part, in the form of a written statement to be inspected by the judge alone. If the court enters an order granting relief following such an ex parte showing, the entire text of the party's statement shall be sealed and preserved in the records of the court subject to further order of the court and to be made available to the appellate court in the event of an appeal.

(e) Discovery with respect to alibi witnesses shall be as provided for in Code Section 17-16-5.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 27-313, former Code Sections 17-7-210 and 17-7-211, decided prior to their repeal by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Constitutionality. — Discovery requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, relating to the presentence hearing, did not violate a defendant's right to effective assistance of counsel; counsel may freely investigate for mitigating evidence, knowing that the identity of any potentially harmful witness resulting from that investigation need only be produced to the state in reciprocal discovery should the defense decide to call that witness at the presentence hearing. Muhammad v. State, 282 Ga. 247, 647 S.E.2d 560 (2007).

Requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, part of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., that a defendant disclose any mitigating evidence the defendant intended to introduce in the presentence hearing did not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination; statements of witnesses a defendant intends to call to testify are not personal to the defendant, and although the disclosure of the list of witnesses a defendant intends to call is personal to the defendant, a trial court can exercise the court's discretion to specify the time, place, and manner of making the discovery and to enter such orders as seem just under the circumstances when self-incrimination concerns arise, such as a protective order or a continuance pending the completion of the guilt/innocence phase of the trial. Muhammad v. State, 282 Ga. 247, 647 S.E.2d 560 (2007).

Defendant, who was charged with child pornography, did not suffer a due process violation due to the U.S. Attorney's office not responding to letters seeking assurance that the defendant's expert would not be prosecuted under federal pornography laws for examining the defendant's computer hard drive; the trial court ordered that the expert be provided with a copy of the defendant's computer hard drive, and the trial court's order requiring written assurances from United States Attorneys of nonprosecution of the expert for any potential violations of federal child pornography statutes exceeded the trial court's authority. The trial court's finding that O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3)(B) was unconstitutional as applied to the defendant because the statute deprived the defendant of due process rights was not challenged by the state on appeal. Morris v. State, 324 Ga. App. 756, 751 S.E.2d 551 (2013).

Since a trial court found that there was no bad faith on the part of the state based on the failure of an expert's report to address testing done on a second bullet hole in the victim's shirt, exclusion of the evidence was not a viable option so trial counsel's decision to pursue a mistrial instead was reasonable. Bales v. State, 277 Ga. 713, 594 S.E.2d 644 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's claim that the destruction of blood samples constituted a failure by the state to comply with the reciprocal discovery requirements pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 since the defendant failed to show that the state acted in bad faith. Clay v. State, 290 Ga. 822, 725 S.E.2d 260 (2012).

Protection of accused. — This section protected an accused from introduction at trial of incriminating or inculpatory statements made by the accused while in custody unless the accused has been furnished with written copies of these statements prior to trial. Wallin v. State, 248 Ga. 29, 279 S.E.2d 687 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-313).

Former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 only applied to statements given by a defendant. The former statute did not apply to any comment which a witness may make with regard to the statement. Simpson v. State, 181 Ga. App. 558, 353 S.E.2d 55 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant had no standing to assert and rely on a codefendant's rights under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 regarding the admission into evidence of a statement made by the codefendant. Rogers v. State, 211 Ga. App. 67, 438 S.E.2d 140 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Applicability to victim's statements. — Defendant, charged with child molestation involving the defendant's stepdaughter, was not denied a right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination by the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for production of the victim's statements. Defendant did not prove error by showing that the defendant actually asked for the statement as required by former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Standridge v. State, 196 Ga. App. 697, 396 S.E.2d 804 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Section not applicable to unindicted individual. — O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 did not apply to authorize the grant of a request for a stay of grand jury proceedings until such time as the state provided the movant with copies of all statements from witnesses. Sauls v. State, 220 Ga. App. 115, 468 S.E.2d 771 (1996).

Application to felony cases. — O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 applies to felony cases; in misdemeanor cases, the state is only obligated to comply with the discovery requirements set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-16-20 et seq. Bowen v. State, 237 Ga. App. 597, 516 S.E.2d 311 (1999).

Discovery provisions applicable to misdemeanor prosecutions are not the same as those applicable to felony prosecutions, and discovery requirements applicable to misdemeanors did not require the state to produce the items that the defendant claimed should have been produced, including police reports, copies of 9-1-1 recordings, crime scene photographs, the victim's criminal history, witness statements, and repair records for the property the defendant damaged; the defendant admitted that the state provided the defendant with a copy of the accusation, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21, as well as the state's witness list and a copy of the defendant's criminal record so under the circumstances the state complied with the state's discovery obligations. Brooks v. State, 267 Ga. App. 663, 600 S.E.2d 737 (2004).

Purpose. — Intent of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 is to preclude the state from ignoring the discovery rights of an accused and to provide a penalty if the state ignores the state's responsibility. O'Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985); Dickey v. State, 179 Ga. App. 383, 346 S.E.2d 864 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 is to inform the defendant in writing of all relevant and material portions of the defendant's own statement that the state may rely upon to the defendant's disadvantage. Dickey v. State, 179 Ga. App. 383, 346 S.E.2d 864 (1986); Lands v. State, 189 Ga. App. 577, 376 S.E.2d 701 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 is not to insist upon a technical requirement for its own sake, but to ensure sufficient notice to defend against charges. Arnold v. State, 236 Ga. App. 380, 511 S.E.2d 219, aff'd, 271 Ga. 780, 523 S.E.2d 14 (1999).

O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 requires only that the state make a defendant's statements available for inspection, copying, or photographing, not that such statements be served upon the defendant. Guild v. State, 234 Ga. App. 862, 508 S.E.2d 231 (1998).

Written notice required. — If a defendant fails to provide written notice to the prosecuting attorney that the defendant elects to have O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2(a) apply to the defendant's case, the discovery disclosure provisions of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 do not apply. Miller v. State, 235 Ga. App. 724, 510 S.E.2d 560 (1999), appeal dismissed, 264 Ga. App. 801, 592 S.E.2d 450 (2003); Hammett v. State, 246 Ga. App. 287, 539 S.E.2d 193 (2000).

Because the state's written notice sufficiently notified the defendant of the state's intent to seek a recidivist sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 upon conviction of felony obstruction of an officer, and during plea negotiations the state again referenced the defendant's prior criminal history and reiterated the state would seek recidivist punishment, no error occurred in imposing the sentence based on lack of notice. Evans v. State, 290 Ga. App. 746, 660 S.E.2d 841 (2008).

Untimely disclosure. — Although the state did not provide the defendant with records showing the defendant previously threatened to kill the victim in a timely fashion, the defendant was not prejudiced as the defendant was aware that the state intended to present such evidence based on other documents provided earlier. Thompson v. State, 295 Ga. 96, 757 S.E.2d 846 (2014).

Presentence hearing discovery misconduct. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's trial counsel failing to object to the state failing to provide notice of the state's intent to use a prior conviction in aggravation of sentencing because the defendant could not show that the outcome of sentencing would have been different. Soler v. State, 354 Ga. App. 93, 840 S.E.2d 169 (2020).

Exclusion of evidence error when no bad faith shown. — In an aggravated assault case, because there was no showing that the defense's discovery violation in failing to produce jail medical records showing the defendant's injuries were in bad faith as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, the trial court erred in excluding the records, and the error was not harmless given the defendant's testimony that the shooting occurred during a physical confrontation with the defendant's boyfriend and the prosecutor's emphasis on the lack of evidence of the defendant's injuries. Phillips v. State, 347 Ga. App. 147, 817 S.E.2d 711 (2018).

Intent to use defendant's prior conviction at sentencing. — Because the trial court excluded the defendant's prior conviction based upon a belief that the court had no discretion based on the state's failure to give notice of the state's intent to use the prior conviction as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5), the trial court could consider the court's options under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 before re-sentencing. Kiser v. State, 327 Ga. App. 17, 755 S.E.2d 505 (2014).

Notice of intent sufficient for recidivist punishment. — Defendant was properly sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the prosecutor properly served under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5) the state's notice of intent to seek recidivist punishment and introduce evidence of the defendant's prior convictions on defense counsel on the first day of trial; any defects or untimeliness in the notice were waived as certified copies of the convictions were admitted without objection. Howard v. State, 297 Ga. App. 316, 677 S.E.2d 375 (2009).

State timely filed the state's notice of intent to use the defendant's prior convictions in aggravation of punishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) because the state provided the notice four days before trial; the state served and filed the state's notice of intent on March 20, 2008, and trial commenced on March 24. Shindorf v. State, 303 Ga. App. 553, 694 S.E.2d 177 (2010).

Trial counsel did not err in failing to object to the state's notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5) because although the state did not give notice ten days before trial, the state did give the defendant notice before the beginning of the trial; trial counsel was aware of the defendant's criminal record, and the defendant made no showing that the prior convictions could have been rebutted or explained had counsel objected. Ross v. State, 313 Ga. App. 695, 722 S.E.2d 411 (2012).

Because the evidence showed that the state notified the defendant of the state's continuing intention to use the defendant's prior convictions in aggravation of punishment at the second trial, and the defendant was aware of that intention, the defendant's motion for new trial on the ground that the state had failed to provide new written notices of recidivism to the defendant after the first trial was denied. Thomas v. State, 324 Ga. App. 898, 752 S.E.2d 67 (2013).

Defendant had sufficient notice of the state's decision to seek recidivist punishment when the state provided such notice several months before trial and attacked the defendant's Georgia Crime Information Center report. Barstad v. State, 329 Ga. App. 214, 764 S.E.2d 453 (2014).

Trial court did not err in finding that the state provided sufficient notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment because the state first provided the defendant with notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment in January 2014; and the amended notice from June 2016 was provided well before the February 10, 2017 hearing, at which the defendant ultimately pled guilty, and the state provided specific details regarding the defendant's previous three convictions that the state intended to use in aggravation of punishment, including the fact that those offenses were considered felonies in their respective jurisdictions and would similarly be considered felonies in Georgia. Nordahl v. State, 344 Ga. App. 686, 811 S.E.2d 465 (2018), aff'd, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99 (2019).

Failure to obtain recidivist notice of accomplice. — Defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to obtain a copy of the recidivist notice filed against an accomplice because a recidivist notice indicated only possible sentences, and because the trial court ruled that no inquiry into such possible penalties was allowed in the accomplice's cross-examination, there was no likelihood of prejudice to the defendant as a result of counsel's failure to obtain the notice. Jackson v. State, 294 Ga. 34, 751 S.E.2d 63 (2013).

Trial court erred in admitting testimony. — Trial court erred in admitting in violation of subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 the testimony of the arresting officer that the defendant had responded, when questioned about the key found in the defendant's pocket at the time of arrest, since no other evidence was presented to show how the officer knew the key fit the lock on the front door of the house. Because the statement at issue in this case could be interpreted as an admission of possession of the premises, the court was unable to say with reasonable certainty that no harm resulted from the state's failure to obey the statutory requirements. McKenny v. State, 204 Ga. App. 411, 419 S.E.2d 731 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

It was not error to admit defendant's statements into evidence since the defendant was not furnished a copy of the statement, as requested, prior to trial because the defendant's statements were neither incriminating or inculpatory. Furlow v. State, 172 Ga. App. 185, 322 S.E.2d 317 (1984); Holland v. State, 190 Ga. App. 169, 378 S.E.2d 513 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Since the state timely provided the defendant with written copies of two tape-recorded statements the defendant gave to police and allowed the defendant's attorney to listen to the tapes before trial, the trial court did not err in admitting the statements into evidence. Gadson v. State, 264 Ga. 280, 444 S.E.2d 305 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

If the oral statement given to police by the defendant is not per se inculpatory or incriminating, the failure of the state to divulge the statement to the defendant prior to trial does not constitute reversible error. Dawson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 146, 416 S.E.2d 125, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 125 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant's statement properly admitted. — Defendant's statement that the defendant used but did not sell drugs was merely exculpatory or a mitigating statement not requiring additional disclosure by the state since the state had already disclosed the defendant's ownership of the seized drugs. Jackson v. State, 207 Ga. App. 190, 427 S.E.2d 566 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant voluntarily initiating issue of defendant's statements. — After the defendant introduced the issue of the defendant's statements in the defendant's direct testimony, cross-examination on that issue was allowed, even if the cross-examination included references to evidence the state could not introduce in the state's case-in-chief or rebuttal. Keller v. State, 208 Ga. App. 589, 431 S.E.2d 411 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Pleading. — To constitute a request for discovery under former Code 1933, § 27-1302, a pleading must either make specific reference to that Code section or make it clear that written copies of the defendant's own statements are to be furnished to the defense at least ten days prior to trial. McCarty v. State, 249 Ga. 618, 292 S.E.2d 700 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302). Satterfield v. State, 256 Ga. 593, 351 S.E.2d 625 (1987); Delay v. State, 213 Ga. App. 199, 444 S.E.2d 140 (1994).

Although the defendant's "motion for discovery" did not make reference to the applicable statute and did not make it clear that the statements sought by the defendant were to be furnished at least ten days prior to trial, the state could not complain on appeal that the motion was deficient after having treated the motion as a request. Ludy v. State, 177 Ga. App. 767, 341 S.E.2d 224 (1986) (decided under former §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

Specific written request required. — To constitute a valid demand for discovery under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, a specific written request must be made. Carter v. State, 181 Ga. App. 117, 351 S.E.2d 516 (1986); Matthews v. State, 221 Ga. App. 129, 470 S.E.2d 518 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Notice to produce under former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27) cannot be used as a discovery tool to circumvent discovery reciprocity under the discovery act. Farmer v. State, 222 Ga. App. 506, 474 S.E.2d 711 (1996).

Defendant's request that the officers suspend the officers' consensual search of the defendant's car was not a statement covered by subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 since the statement was not given by the defendant while in police custody and was, therefore, properly admitted into evidence. Merritt v. State, 165 Ga. App. 597, 302 S.E.2d 136 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Statements of codefendant. — Defendant was not entitled, under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, to statements made by a codefendant. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Racial epithets uttered by defendant after the defendant was detained by a store security guard for shoplifting were not incriminating or inculpatory statements that the state was required to furnish to the defendant under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, even if the defendant's detention by the guard constituted "police custody" under the statute. Williamson v. State, 188 Ga. App. 307, 372 S.E.2d 685 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Written waiver statement was not within the purview of former § 17-7-211. Dean v. State, 168 Ga. App. 172, 308 S.E.2d 434 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Those parts of oral statements required to be furnished upon request under this section must be relevant, material, and of an inculpatory cast. Howell v. State, 163 Ga. App. 445, 295 S.E.2d 329 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Tape recordings of drug transaction. — Tape recording of a drug transaction was not discoverable pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27) nor under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, since the recording was not of any taped statement given by the defendant while in police custody, nor under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 since the tape recording did not constitute a written scientific report. Weldon v. State, 204 Ga. App. 221, 419 S.E.2d 59 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

Section only applies to audio or video tape. — In a trial for driving under the influence of alcohol, there was no error in the trial court's ruling which allowed the playing of a video tape recording (without sound) of the defendant while the defendant was being given a breath test for alcohol following the defendant's arrest, although the defendant timely filed a motion for discovery of the defendant's in-custody statements pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 and the state failed to respond to this request, since, for discovery purposes, only the audio portion of a video tape recording was subject to the provisions of that section as it was written. Looney v. State, 180 Ga. App. 693, 350

S.E.2d 29 (1986); Orr v. State, 209 Ga. App. 832, 434 S.E.2d 723 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Failure to prove tape existed of entire witness interview. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion finding no reciprocal discovery violation on the part of the state as to a witness interview because there was no evidence that a recording of the entire interview ever existed as the record showed that the state provided the defendant with a recording of a brief portion of the witness's interview and represented to the trial court that no other portion of that interview was recorded, apparently due to an equipment malfunction. Irving v. State, 351 Ga. App. 779, 833 S.E.2d 162 (2019).

Standardized form containing defendant's physical characteristics, recorded by police following the defendant's arrest, was a "written statement" within the meaning of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Gilbert v. State, 193 Ga. App. 283, 388 S.E.2d 18 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Accessibility to prosecutor's files. — Neither a generalized notice to produce statements seized from a defendant nor a demand for scientific reports would authorize the defendant to pursue at will the prosecutor's files to ascertain if there are any witness statements which might refer to the defendant or admissions made by the defendant to that witness. Griffin v. State, 168 Ga. App. 696, 310 S.E.2d 278 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

There is no Georgia procedure requiring the district attorney to open the district attorney's files to the accused, nor is the accused entitled as a matter of right to receive copies of police reports and investigation reports made in the course of preparing the case against the accused. O'Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Accessibility to defendant's files. — Because the defendant, who agreed to discovery under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2, was supplied by the police with a number of police reports, including the defendant's in-custody statement, the defendant was not prejudiced by the court's requirement that the defendant provide the materials to the state. McWhorter v. State, 229 Ga. App. 875, 495 S.E.2d 139 (1997).

Defense duty to comply. — Defense counsel was not required to provide the prosecution with a summary of an expert witness's opinion. Beck v. State, 250 Ga. App. 654, 551 S.E.2d 68 (2001).

Admission of statement not supplied to counsel was harmless error. — Admission of the defendant's statement concerning the defendant's telephone number, which statement was not supplied to counsel pursuant to a timely request, was harmless error since the statement was merely cumulative of other, properly admitted, statements concerning the defendant's residence address. Christopher v. State, 190 Ga. App. 393, 379 S.E.2d 205 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Name of person to whom statement made. — Former § 17-7-210 did not require the state to inform a defendant of the name of the person to whom the defendant made a statement while in custody and a failure to do so does not render the statement inadmissible. Roman v. State, 185 Ga. App. 32, 363 S.E.2d 329 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Inquiry into making or failure to make statement. — Although an inquiry as to why a certain statement was or was not made is not an impermissible comment on a defendant's right to remain silent, since the defendant in fact did not remain silent, a different situation may arise in a case where the defendant did not remain silent but the defendant's statement is nevertheless inadmissible for any purpose for failure of the state to produce under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. In such a case, generally, an inquiry into the making of or failure to make a certain statement runs a grave risk of enticing or tempting the appellant to confess the appellant's own statement, thereby getting in the back door what the state could not get in through the front. The question of error will depend upon the circumstances of the case. Bryan v. State, 168 Ga. App. 711, 310 S.E.2d 533 (1983)

(decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Excludable statement may enter record as response to question by defendant's counsel. — Sanction for the state's failure to comply with a timely request for discovery of a defendant's custodial statement(s) is the exclusion and suppression of the statement from the state's use in the state's case-in-chief or in rebuttal. But if the statement enters the record as a response to a question posed to the arresting officer by the defendant's counsel on cross-examination, the trial court does not err in denying a motion for mistrial on this ground. Henson v. State, 168 Ga. App. 210, 308 S.E.2d 555 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Incriminating effect of statement. — No reversible error occurred when during the defendant's interrogation by police the defendant denied being present in the vicinity of the crime or knowing the victim, but testified differently at trial; consequently, the state could not have anticipated the possibly incriminating effect of the statement at issue at the time the state furnished the summary. Dawson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 146, 416 S.E.2d 125, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 125 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Failure to deliver statement. — If the prosecution fails to deliver a statement made to investigating police officers prior to trial, the statement must be excluded or suppressed even though the prosecution was not fully aware of the statement. Ludy v. State, 177 Ga. App. 767, 341 S.E.2d 224 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Mistrial properly denied. — Motion for mistrial, based on failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, was properly denied since the trial court correctly instructed the jury to disregard the offending portion of a witness' testimony concerning the statements made to the witness by the defendant while in custody. McKenzie v. State, 187 Ga. App. 840, 371 S.E.2d 869, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 371 S.E.2d 869 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210); Hanson v. State, 229 Ga. App. 205, 493 S.E.2d 605 (1997).

Sanction of prohibiting the introduction of evidence improperly withheld from the defense applies only if there has been a showing of prejudice to the defense and bad faith by the state. Guild v. State, 236 Ga. App. 444, 512 S.E.2d 343 (1999); Reece v. State, 250 Ga. App. 1, 550 S.E.2d 414 (2001).

As the state did not attempt to impeach the defendant with the defendant's custodial statement that was first disclosed during the charge conference, the defendant was not harmed by the state's belated disclosure of the statement and the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for mistrial based on the state's untimely disclosure of the defendant's custodial statement. Burton v. State, 330 Ga. App. 503, 767 S.E.2d 510 (2014).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on the prosecutor's misconduct in failing to disclose the statement the defendant made to the first investigator until eliciting testimony about the statement from the first investigator at trial because the undisclosed statement that the defendant made to the first investigator was the same in substance as the defendant's longer, more detailed, and audio-recorded statement to the second investigator, which was properly disclosed to the defendant and was played for the jury at trial; and trial counsel admitted that the first investigator's testimony did not provide any information from the defendant that had not already been disclosed in discovery. Prince v. State, 295 Ga. 788, 764 S.E.2d 362 (2014).

No bad faith. — Theft by shoplifting conviction was upheld on appeal despite the defendant's claim that the state violated the reciprocal discovery requirements of the Georgia Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., as the defendant conceded at trial that the state did not act in bad faith, and failed to request a continuance, but instead, communicated a readiness for trial to both the court and the prosecutor. Brown v. State, 281 Ga. App. 557, 636 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

Prosecutor did not commit discovery misconduct by delaying service of the gang-related evidence that the prosecutor received on the Friday before trial for six hours because the defendant did not show that the prosecutor acted in bad faith or that the defense was demonstrably prejudiced, much less that any violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 rose to the level of a violation of constitutional due process. Cushenberry v. State, 300 Ga. 190, 794 S.E.2d 165 (2016).

Exclusion of evidence absent finding of bad faith held error. — In the absence of bad faith on the part of the state, as well as prejudice to the defendant, the trial court erred in excluding from evidence a videotape and photographs of child pornographic images taken from the defendant's computer as a sanction for the state's failure to comply with a court-ordered discovery deadline. State v. Jones, 283 Ga. App. 539, 642 S.E.2d 183 (2007).

Determining whether defendant's statement was improperly admitted. — When determining whether testimony concerning the defendant's inculpatory in-custody statement was improperly admitted, the appellate court must consider the statement in the context of the entire record. Christopher v. State, 190 Ga. App. 393, 379 S.E.2d 205 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

When reversal required. — Court of Appeals must reverse if the court is unable to say with reasonable certainty that no harm resulted from the state's failure to obey the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Ludy v. State, 177 Ga. App. 767, 341 S.E.2d 224 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Failure to provide statement harmless error. — If the evidence of the defendant's guilt, exclusive of the custodial statement, is overwhelming, the state's failure to provide the defendant with a complete in-custody statement was harmless error. Dickey v. State, 179 Ga. App. 383, 346 S.E.2d 864 (1986); Cook v. State, 199 Ga. App. 14, 404 S.E.2d 128, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 404 S.E.2d 128 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Even if a discovery violation occurred in the defendant's criminal trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(1), as the defendant failed to show any harm by the state's alleged failure to timely produce recordings of jail telephone conversations by a codefendant, there was no reversible error; the state did not seek to introduce evidence of the recordings and the defendant's counsel received copies during the trial. Taylor v. State, 296 Ga. App. 212, 674 S.E.2d 81 (2009).

Juror information. — State was not obliged to provide the defendant with the criminal histories of prospective jurors since: (1) such information could be disclosed only with the jurors' consent or fingerprints, under O.C.G.A. § 35-3-34(a)(1)(A); and (2) it was discoverable only if the state planned to use it in the state's case in chief or in rebuttal, and the sole use the state had for this information was to disqualify venire members. Williams v. State, 255 Ga. App. 177, 564 S.E.2d 759 (2002).

Indictment and guilty plea. — In introducing evidence that one of the defendant's parents was indicted for extortion and other offenses and pled guilty to obstruction and false statement, the state did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3); the indictment and guilty plea were public records that were accessible to all, including the defendant. Gonzales v. State, 286 Ga. App. 821, 650 S.E.2d 401 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1765, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 70 (Ga. 2008).

No ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to pursue fingerprint expert. — Defendant failed to show that the defendant's trial counsel's failure to obtain a continuance to challenge fingerprint evidence was the result of deficient performance because the defendant could not show prejudice resulting from the lack of opportunity for expert review of the fingerprint report when no expert testified at the motion for new trial hearing, and without that testimony, the court of appeals could not evaluate whether there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the proceeding could have been different; the trial court noted in the new trial hearing that counsel's strategy was to contest the occurrence of any kidnapping offense and concede the lesser crimes, and further analyzing the finger-print evidence was not material to the trial strategy. Thornton v. State, 305 Ga. App. 692, 700 S.E.2d 669 (2010).

Ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to challenge expert's testimony. — Defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by trial counsel's failure to seek the exclusion of an expert's testimony as a sanction for the state's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by excluding, as a remedy, any specific testimony about the three victims. Love v. State, 349 Ga. App. 741, 824 S.E.2d 745 (2019).

Ineffective assistance of counsel. — Counsel's own statement in a written motion for a continuance that, without the continuance, counsel's representation would be ineffective did not equate to a finding that counsel was ineffective at trial. Sims v. State, 278 Ga. 587, 604 S.E.2d 799 (2004).

When defense counsel did not provide the prosecutor with timely notice of the defendant's expert witness or timely provide a copy of the witness's report, as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-4(b)(2), 17-16-7, and 17-16-8(a), and the witness was excluded, the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel; while counsel was deficient, it was not shown that the defendant was prejudiced as another expert testified to essentially the same facts and conclusions as the excluded witness, and referred to the excluded witness's findings, so the excluded witness's testimony would have been cumulative, and it was not shown that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have differed had counsel's performance not been deficient. Mann v. State, 276 Ga. App. 720, 624 S.E.2d 208 (2005).

Because any error in the trial court's exclusion of the evidence of the male victim's prior convictions was harmless, the defendant's trial counsel could not have been found ineffective due to an alleged failure to comply with reciprocal discovery. Skaggs-Ferrell v. State, 287 Ga. App. 872, 652 S.E.2d 891 (2007).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the state's introduction of evidence in aggravation of punishment on the ground that the notice was untimely and that the state had failed to list specifically what convictions were to be introduced. By filing notice five days before trial, the state had given timely notice under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, and the state, counsel, and the trial court had discussed the prior convictions in detail at two pretrial hearings more than 60 days before trial. McClam v. State, 291 Ga. App. 697, 662 S.E.2d 790 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1635, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 798 (Ga. 2008).

Ineffective assistance of counsel not established by sequestration issue. — Trial counsel was not deficient in failing to properly invoke sequestration because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the state's expert to testify in rebuttal based in part on their review of the recorded testimony of the appellant's expert; accordingly, even if the appellant's counsel had invoked the rule of sequestration earlier in the trial, the court would not have abused the court's discretion in excepting the state's expert from the rule. Davis v. State, 299 Ga. 180, 787 S.E.2d 221 (2016).

State's Duty to Comply

Burden of compliance with requirements of this section was on the state. Tanner v. State, 160 Ga. App. 266, 287 S.E.2d 268 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Upon proper application by a defendant, the burden of compliance with the requirements of this section is on the state, otherwise the statute would be "'a toothless tiger,' 'a fish that cannot swim,' indeed, a law that it is not necessary to enforce." Garner v. State, 159 Ga. App. 244, 282 S.E.2d 909 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

In order for statements to be discoverable there must be sufficient notice to the state that discovery is being sought. This consists of either a request by the defendant specifically referring to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 or a request that statements must be furnished to the defendant ten days prior to trial. Huguley v. State, 253 Ga. 709, 324 S.E.2d 729 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

State excused from complying with notice period. — State was excused from complying with the ten day notice period in subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 since the record clearly established that the statement in issue was made after the defendant's request was filed and only six days prior to trial. Rife v. State, 203 Ga. App. 353, 416 S.E.2d 864 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Because the state did not gain possession of letters that were entered into evidence until after the beginning of the trial and because the letters were not relevant until the defendant testified, the state did not violate the criminal discovery statute by failing to give prior notice of the letters. Boykin v. State, 264 Ga. App. 836, 592 S.E.2d 426 (2003).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel at a trial for rape and aggravated sodomy because there was no basis to request a continuance or disallowance of a colposcope printout, which showed the victim's anal bruising, based on the state's failure to produce the printout before trial because: (1) the defendant already had the assistant's examination report, which mentioned the picture; (2) the defendant's counsel was permitted to interview the assistant before the assistant's testimony; (3) the day of the trial was the first time that the prosecutor saw the picture; (4) there was no bad faith by the state; and (5) the printout was cumulative of other testimony. McMorris v. State, 263 Ga. App. 630, 588 S.E.2d 817 (2003).

General request for discovery directed to any and all evidence in the possession or control of the state which might be favorable to the defendant was insufficient to invoke the provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Dinkins v. State, 202 Ga. App. 403, 414 S.E.2d 545 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Verbatim account not required. — Even if the defendant's statement had been custodial, a "verbatim account" was not required since counsel was given a written summary of the statement prior to trial which included "all relevant and material portions of the defendant's statement." Johnson v. State, 177 Ga. App. 705, 340 S.E.2d 662 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Inaccurate transcript deemed sufficiently complete. — Although a 24-page transcript of the defendant's pretrial statement originally furnished the defendant contained some inaccuracies (which were corrected in a supplemental transcript furnished the defendant during the trial) it was sufficiently complete to satisfy the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Todd v. State, 261 Ga. 766, 410 S.E.2d 725 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 838, 113 S. Ct. 117, 121 L. Ed. 2d 73, cert. denied, 506 U.S. 838, 113 S. Ct. 117, 121 L. Ed. 2d 73 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Summary of defendant's in-custody statement which was furnished by the state prior to trial in response to the defendant's request for discovery made pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was sufficiently complete to satisfy the requirements of that statute. Myers v. State, 196 Ga. App. 104, 395 S.E.2d 372 (1990).

Service of defendant's statements not required. — Language of O.C.G.A. § 17-6-4(a)(1) requires only that the state make a defendant's statements available for inspection, copying, or photographing, not that such statements be served upon the defendant. Lawson v. State, 224 Ga. App. 645, 481 S.E.2d 856 (1997).

Harm to defendant. — Demand made pursuant to this section entitled the defendant to a written statement of all relevant and material portions of any statement made by the defendant while in police custody, including spontaneous statements made at the time of arrest which were not reduced to writings, and since the court was unable to say with reasonable certainty that no harm resulted from the state's failure to provide such statements to the defendant, reversal of the defendant's conviction was required. Reed v. State, 163 Ga. App. 364, 295 S.E.2d 108 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Since the defendant made no showing that the defendant was prejudiced as a result of the state's failure to make a custodial statement available to the defendant prior to trial or that the state acted in bad faith in failing to list a witness, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in permitting the witness to testify. Jones v. State, 243 Ga. App. 351, 532 S.E.2d 120 (2000).

State did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 when the state's witness began to testify about a police report as such was held to be newly-discovered evidence and the defendant made no showing of bad faith and prejudice. Williams v. State, 261 Ga. App. 410, 582 S.E.2d 556 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in admitting two police-made videotapes of the pursuit of the stolen vehicle, even though the tape was not provided to the defense ten days prior to trial, as the tape was provided to the defendant prior to the defendant's trial and the defendant expressly stated that no further time was required to review the tapes or to interview the officers who made the tapes. McCullough v. State, 268 Ga. App. 445, 602 S.E.2d 181 (2004).

Defendant's trial counsel was ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to move for a mistrial after the prosecutor, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(1), failed to notify the trial counsel of the defendant's oral admission made in custody and then elicited testimony from the officer to whom the admission was made indicating that the officer testified about the admission at a pretrial hearing when the officer, in fact, had not so testified; the state acted in bad faith as the prosecutor intentionally elicited testimony about the admission and knew about the admission long before trial, the defense counsel was prejudiced by the misconduct as, had the misconduct not occurred, the defense counsel would have understood the importance of obtaining the officer's pretrial testimony, and the defendant was prejudiced by counsel's failure as the admission was central to the state's case and was not cumulative of other evidence. Johnson v. State, 281 Ga. App. 455, 636 S.E.2d 178 (2006).

While the state did not deliver a copy of a DNA report to defense counsel until five days prior to trial, despite the ten-day requirement in O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4), admission of the DNA evidence was not an abuse of discretion when the defendant did not articulate what prejudice the defendant suffered that would have been cured by having the report five days earlier. Leger v. State, 291 Ga. 584, 732 S.E.2d 53 (2012).

Murder defendant's claim that the defendant was prejudiced by being unable to prepare for the damaging evidence of a booking photograph showing the defendant wearing clothes that were later shown to have the deceased's blood on them was rejected because the photograph was cumulative of other evidence, including testimony regarding the defendant's clothing and the clothing itself. Carson v. State, 843 S.E.2d 421, No. S20A0288, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 348 (2020).

Pretrial statements excluded when section not complied with. — Former Code 1933, § 27-1302 and O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 exclude from evidence any statements or scientific reports pertaining to a case if a defendant is not given copies of such at least ten days prior to trial after a proper request is made therefor. Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 530, 281 S.E.2d 252 (1981).

Discovery of statement on morning of trial. — Since, prior to trial and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, the defendant requested copies of any custodial statements the defendant made which were in the state's possession, but the prosecutor only became aware of the defendant's statement at 11:30 the morning of the trial, sanctions for failing to supply the statement were not applicable since subsection (e) of that section exempted evidence discovered after the request was filed. Marlow v. State, 192 Ga. App. 670, 385 S.E.2d 759 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Request made morning after obtaining evidence held timely. — State did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4) when the state disclosed x-rays to the defense during the trial since the state disclosed the x-rays as soon as the state acquired the x-rays. Thompson v. State, 262 Ga. App. 17, 585 S.E.2d 125 (2003).

Statement not disclosed excluded even though prosecutor is unaware of statement. — Statement by the defendant to a police officer which was not turned over to defense counsel pursuant to pretrial discovery proceedings should have been excluded and suppressed at trial and was not admissible as newly discovered evidence merely because the prosecutor was unaware of the statement. Talley v. State, 251 Ga. 42, 302 S.E.2d 355 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

If prosecuting attorney and defense counsel discovered evidence at the same time, there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4. Crawley v. State, 240 Ga. App. 891, 525 S.E.2d 739 (1999).

If omitted evidence creates a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist, constitutional error has been committed. This means the omission must be evaluated in the context of the entire record. If there is no reasonable doubt about guilt whether or not the additional evidence is considered, there is no justification for a new trial. Wallin v. State, 248 Ga. 29, 279 S.E.2d 687 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

What is "material." — Constitution requires that, upon request by the defendant, the state disclose all favorable evidence which is material either to guilt or to punishment. Implicit in the requirement of materiality is a concern that the suppressed evidence might have affected the outcome of the trial. Wallin v. State, 248 Ga. 29, 279 S.E.2d 687 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Failure to disclose evidence may require reversal even if cumulative. — Prosecutor failed to reveal to defense that the alleged victim had given a nonverbal denial of one of the acts charged. In applying the four factors making up the standard of review for a Brady violation, and considering that the alleged victim was the only witness, the suppression of the evidence was a Brady violation which required reversal of the defendant's conviction. Brownlow v. Schofield, 277 Ga. 237, 587 S.E.2d 647 (2003).

Bullet recovered in related case. — Habeas petitioner alleged facts showing grounds for relief which could not reasonably have been raised in the petitioner's original habeas petition and which could not have been discovered by diligence, including a juror's misconduct in visiting the scene and the state's failure to disclose ballistic evidence, satisfying O.C.G.A. §§ 9-14-42(c)(4) and 9-14-51. Watkins v. Ballinger, 308 Ga. 387, 840 S.E.2d 378 (2020).

Statement which is neither inculpatory nor exculpatory. — Admission of a statement made by the defendant to the arresting officer which was not furnished to the defendant even though the defendant made a proper request was not error since the district attorney was not aware of the statement until the day of the officer's testimony, the statement was not directly inculpatory but was relevant only in rebuttal, and the statement in and of itself was neither inculpatory nor exculpatory. Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 487, 306 S.E.2d 629 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1069, 104 S. Ct. 975, 79 L. Ed. 2d 213 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

If during the testimony of one of the state's witnesses, the defendant moved for a mistrial arguing that the state had used a statement at trial that the state had not included in the summary produced in response to the defendant's request pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, and the statement concerned the amount of money the defendant had in the defendant's possession at the time of the defendant's arrest, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for mistrial since the defendant's statement did not tend to prove or disprove the defendant's guilt of the crime with which the defendant was charged. Dixson v. State, 191 Ga. App. 410, 382 S.E.2d 357 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Duty of compliance if defendant asks for "anything exculpatory." — If a defendant asks for "anything exculpatory" such a request really gives the prosecutor no better notice than if no request is made. In such a case, the prosecutor will not have violated the prosecutor's constitutional duty of disclosure unless the prosecutor's omission is of sufficient significance to result in the denial of the defendant's right to a fair trial; the mere possibility that an item of undisclosed information might have helped the defense, or might have affected the outcome of the trial, does not establish "materiality" in the constitutional sense. Wallin v. State, 248 Ga. 29, 279 S.E.2d 687 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Statements about education and other personal data about defendant would not be in any way inculpatory so as to be subject to the objection that the defendant was improperly served with all inculpatory statements upon the defendant's request. Hilburn v. State, 166 Ga. App. 357, 304 S.E.2d 480 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Transcript of testimony already possessed by defendant. — Discovery request pursuant to subsection (a) of this section was substantially complied with since the district attorney failed to furnish a statement only because there was no substantial difference in the testimony of the witnesses to be used on the second trial than at the first trial, a transcript of which was in the defendant's possession. Tyson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 22, 299 S.E.2d 69 (1983) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Transcript of taped statement provided. — Defendant's in-custody statement was properly admitted since the state provided the defendant with a copy of the transcript of the defendant's taped statement well in advance of the trial and defense counsel was allowed to compare the tape to the transcript prior to the tape's being used at trial and pointed to no material changes or inconsistencies in the content of the statement. Sullivan v. State, 213 Ga. App. 308, 444 S.E.2d 392 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Summary of felony-murder defendant's taped statement was adequate since, although the summary omitted the exact number of blows, the summary showed that the defendant hit the victim a number of times over an extended period of time. Johnson v. State, 261 Ga. 236, 404 S.E.2d 108 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Denial of tape recordings if transcript supplied. — It was not error to refuse to require production of original tape recordings of the defendant's statements after defense counsel listened to the tapes and received a transcript of all the statements made by the defendant. Hardin v. State, 252 Ga. 99, 311 S.E.2d 462 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Videotaped statements without sound. — State did not fail to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(1) in not producing videotaped interviews of a witness and a defendant until three days prior to trial in the defendant's prosecution for felony murder because due to an equipment malfunction both recordings were soundless; the defendant failed to show how the interviews had any exculpatory value. Vega v. State, 285 Ga. 32, 673 S.E.2d 223 (2009).

Police surveillance videotape was not subject to discovery since there was no motion to produce and the tape was not needed for use as evidence on the defendant's behalf and was only introduced on re-direct examination to rehabilitate the testimony of a witness. Deal v. State, 199 Ga. App. 184, 404 S.E.2d 343 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Statements given while in police custody. — If the defendant was not in police custody but was only detained pursuant to a traffic stop at the time the defendant made the voluntary statements, the statements need not have been disclosed pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 and the trial court committed no error in allowing the statement's admission. Conley v. State, 181 Ga. App. 375, 352 S.E.2d 394 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Former § 17-7-210 applied only when the statement was given while in custody. Banther v. State, 182 Ga. App. 333, 355 S.E.2d 709 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Since the defendant was not in police custody at the time the statements were made, the state's failure to produce the statements did not make the testimony inadmissible. Baker v. State, 193 Ga. App. 498, 388 S.E.2d 402 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Former § 17-7-210 required the state to provide a defendant with copies of any statements given while in police custody. Inasmuch as the statement of which the appellant complains was not made while in police custody and the appellant can point to no other statements made while in police custody which the state failed to produce, the trial court did not err in denying the appellant's motion to suppress under that Code section or on the various assorted constitutional grounds asserted by the appellant relative to improper custodial interrogation. Mattarochia v. State, 200 Ga. App. 681, 409 S.E.2d 546 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

With regard to the defendant's convictions on one count of simple assault and two counts of battery resulting from a fight with a romantic friend (the victim), the trial court did not err by admitting testimony by an officer as to what the defendant said to the officer, when the state had failed to disclose the substance of the statement to the defendant until the first day of trial as, considering that the victim failed to answer the subpoena and to appear at trial, and the state being advised that the defendant was going to assert self-defense, the defendant did not show that the state acted in bad faith. Thompson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 355, 662 S.E.2d 135 (2008).

Presence of sheriff during interview by caseworker. — Presence of a uniformed sheriff's deputy during the interview of the defendant by a caseworker of the Department of Family and Children Services did not require the conclusion that the defendant was in custody. Banther v. State, 182 Ga. App. 333, 355 S.E.2d 709 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Statements from city clerk. — If the city clerk testified to statements elicited by the clerk when the defendant walked into the clerk's office to surrender, but the clerk testified to no statements given by the defendant "while in police custody," former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 did not apply. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Routine traffic stop is not custodial. — Under subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, a defendant was entitled to a copy of any statement given by the defendant while in police custody. However, roadside questioning after a routine traffic stop does not constitute a custodial situation. Jones v. State, 196 Ga. App. 842, 397 S.E.2d 181 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

No duty to provide officers' handwritten notes. — Trial court did not err in determining that absent a showing by the defense that it was legally entitled to the discovery of handwritten notes by officers on some other basis, the state had no duty to provide the officers' notes under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4. Brannon v. State, 298 Ga. 601, 783 S.E.2d 642 (2016).

Demand for oral statement similar to written statement executed by defendant. — Trial court did not err in admitting an oral statement made by a defendant to a police officer which had not been delivered to the defendant more than ten days prior to trial and which had been demanded by an appropriate motion for discovery since the written statement the defendant executed contained the same material elements as the oral statement, the minor discrepancies as did appear were subject to exposure on cross-examination, and the defendant made no showing of surprise as to the contents of the oral statement or prejudice from the admission of the oral statement. Rhodes v. State, 170 Ga. App. 473, 317

S.E.2d 285 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Similar statement made to two detectives at different times. — Although the defendant was only given a copy of the summary of the defendant's statement to one detective and the similar statement the defendant gave to another detective was not mentioned, the purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was satisfied as the defendant was clearly notified by the state of the substance of the statement the state anticipated using against the defendant. White v. State, 253 Ga. 106, 317 S.E.2d 196 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Failure of the state to disclose pre-interview statements did not provide a basis for excluding a recorded statement that was provided to the defendant and found to be freely and voluntarily given. Smith v. State, 269 Ga. 72, 495 S.E.2d 280 (1998).

Filing of "Brady" motion failed to give state reasonable notice that the defendant sought discovery pursuant to the provisions of former Code 1933, § 27-1302. Williams v. State, 164 Ga. App. 148, 296 S.E.2d 739 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Request insufficient. — Request that "(a)ll written or recorded statements and all summaries or memoranda of any oral or written statements made by the named the defendant …" be produced "prior to … trial … at a time to be fixed by the court" was not sufficient to invoke the provisions of former Code 1933, § 27-1302. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Applicability to oral statements. — This section stated clearly that the defendant shall be entitled to a copy of any statement and if the defendant's statement was oral or partially oral, the prosecution shall furnish in writing all relevant and material portions of the defendant's statement. Ellison v. State, 158 Ga. App. 419, 280 S.E.2d 371 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Talley v. State, 251 Ga. 42, 302 S.E.2d 355 (1983) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Oral statements made by victims of abuse. — Victim's testimony that the defendant threatened to kill the victim's family if the victim told anyone about the defendant's molestation of the victim did not have to be revealed before trial because it was not a custodial statement of the defendant. Frazier v. State, 252 Ga. App. 627, 557 S.E.2d 12 (2001).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on the state's alleged failure to comply with the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., requirements as the plain terms of that law dictated that the defendant, who allegedly molested the defendant's daughter, was not entitled to the oral, unrecorded statement the daughter provided to a police investigator as the state was required to produce statements within the state's possession, custody, or control and the daughter's unrecorded, oral statement did not qualify. Downs v. State, 257 Ga. App. 696, 572 S.E.2d 54 (2002).

Newly discovered evidence of oral statements given by the defendant which were unintentionally omitted from a police report fall within the exception provided in subsection (e) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Jenkins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 840, 308 S.E.2d 14 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

If evidence of in-custody statements was newly discovered and was revealed to defense counsel as soon as practicable after its discovery and defense counsel was then afforded an opportunity to question the witness outside the presence of the jury, the trial court's decision that the evidence was governed by subsection (e) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was not erroneous. Broomall v. State, 260 Ga. 220, 391 S.E.2d 918 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Late disclosure of newly discovered evidence. — Defendant's request for a mistrial after receiving new evidence five days before trial was properly denied as the state turned over the information as soon as the information was discovered, the defendant failed to request a continuance, and the evidence was part of the res gestae of the charged crime. Goggins v. State, 330 Ga. App. 350, 767 S.E.2d 753 (2014).

No prejudice shown in denial of continuance. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the appellant's motion for a continuance based on the state untimely serving a portion of a witness's custodial interview three days prior to trial because the appellant's contention that proper cross-examination questioning was prevented was unsupported by the evidence and the appellant did not present the testimony of any potential witnesses or offer any other evidence to show that any prejudice resulted from the denial of the motion. Easley v. State, 352 Ga. App. 1, 833 S.E.2d 591 (2019).

Production within reasonable time. — If a request for a statement has been timely made, production of that statement one day before trial is not production within a reasonable time. Smith v. State, 181 Ga. App. 595, 353 S.E.2d 35 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Since after a timely request by the defendant, the state failed to supply the defendant with a written copy of the defendant's in-custody confession at least ten days prior to trial, the defendant's motion in limine seeking to exclude the confession should have been granted. Livingston v. State, 222 Ga. App. 298, 474 S.E.2d 1 (1996).

It was reversible error for the state on the morning of the trial to provide defense counsel with notice regarding the introduction of the defendant's statement that contradicted counsel's planned defense. Baker v. State, 238 Ga. App. 285, 518 S.E.2d 455 (1999).

Rights of the accused to reasonable pretrial access to evidence are not subject to the vagaries of a police department "policy" not to develop evidentiary photographs until the day before trial. Thompson v. State, 240 Ga. App. 26, 521 S.E.2d 876 (1999).

Because it was apparent that the prosecutors acted in good faith by immediately mailing a copy of the report on a scientific test to the defendant once the prosecutors received the report themselves, absent any evidence of bad faith, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion in limine to exclude evidence of the test. Berry v. State, 246 Ga. App. 9, 539 S.E.2d 516 (2000).

Trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's statement upon seeing the informant at the jail that the informant was the person "that busted him," even though the statement was supposed to be disclosed ten days prior to trial and was not disclosed to the defense until the trial was in progress as the statement was newly discovered evidence; the state disclosed the statement as soon as practicable after learning about the statement, and the defendant did not show that the state acted in bad faith regarding discovery and disclosure of the statement. Dixon v. State, 252 Ga. App. 385, 556 S.E.2d 480 (2001).

"Reasonable time" for making a request is to be determined by considering the facts and circumstances of each case. Smith v. State, 181 Ga. App. 595, 353 S.E.2d 35 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Request made shortly after obtaining counsel held timely. — Because it was impossible for the defendant to submit a timely request in accordance with former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 because the defendant had no representation by counsel until a week before trial, the defendant's request six days before trial was within a reasonable time even though made within ten days of trial. Pealor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 387, 299 S.E.2d 904 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant's request for a statement, filed within five days of retaining defense counsel but less than ten days prior to trial, was a reasonable time in which to make the request. Smith v. State, 181 Ga. App. 595, 353 S.E.2d 35 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant notified of substance of statement. — Purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was satisfied when, even though there was no direct reference by the state that the defendant made an oral statement to a police officer and that the state intended to rely solely on the oral statement, the defendant was fully notified by the state of the substance of the oral statement the state indeed did use in the trial of the case. Lewis v. State,

183 Ga. App. 41, 357 S.E.2d 862 (1987).

Statements not used by state. — Penalty for failure of the prosecution to serve a defendant timely with a copy of inculpatory in custody statements is the exclusion and suppression of the statements from use in the prosecution's case-in-chief or in rebuttal, but if the state made no attempt to use the indicated statements as a result of cross-examination of an officer by defense counsel, although a police officer testified as to the defendant's age and education, the obvious purpose of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was satisfied. Hilburn v. State, 166 Ga. App. 357, 304 S.E.2d 480 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Upon failure of the prosecution to comply with the defendant's timely written request for a copy of written or oral statement given by the defendant while in police custody, the statement is not used by the prosecution at all and the trial court gives the jury corrective instructions to disregard any question on this matter, the trial court need not grant a mistrial. Lee v. State, 166 Ga. App. 644, 305 S.E.2d 175 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Photographs. — State was not required to take the initiative and "furnish" the defense with copies of photographs; the state's obligation was fulfilled by making the photographs available to the defense to inspect and copy. McSears v. State, 226 Ga. App. 90, 485 S.E.2d 589 (1997).

If the state failed to produce photographs ten days before trial, but the defendant rejected the trial court's offer of a continuance, and if the photographs were merely cumulative of other evidence, there was no prejudice to the defendant shown and no abuse of discretion in admitting the photographs. Brown v. State, 236 Ga. App. 478, 512 S.E.2d 369 (1999).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in reopening the evidence and allowing the state to introduce photographs as rebuttal evidence since the evidence did not become relevant until the defendant's defense was presented. Potter v. State, 272 Ga. 430, 530 S.E.2d 725 (2000).

State's failure to produce the photographs of the victim ten days before trial was not a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3) and the trial court did not err in admitting the photographs because the defendant did not present any evidence of bad faith on the part of the state and the photographs were no more than cumulative of the testimony of the victim to the effect that the defendant had beaten the victim in the head with a stick as well as the testimony of the other witnesses for the state. Davis v. State, 257 Ga. App. 500, 571 S.E.2d 497 (2002).

When the prosecution did not provide the defendant a photograph of the victim's injuries in pre-trial discovery, it was not error to admit the photograph at trial because, under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3), the prosecution was only required to allow the defendant to inspect and copy the photograph, and the defendant chose not to take advantage of an offer to inspect the photograph. Banks v. State, 269 Ga. App. 653, 605 S.E.2d 47 (2004).

With regard to the defendant's domestic violence convictions, the trial court did not err in denying the admission into evidence of a photograph detailing the defendant's injuries based on failing to provide inspection of the photograph because any error by the trial court in excluding the photograph was harmless since the photograph was cumulative of both the defendant's testimony that the wife scratched the defendant as well as the wife's testimony that the wife tried to scratch the defendant. Palmer v. State, 330 Ga. App. 679, 769 S.E.2d 107 (2015).

If the testimony to which defendant objected merely was cumulative of testimony to which the defendant did not object concerning other oral and written in-custody statements and was not significantly different in substance from the defendant's other oral and written statements, there was no error in the denial of the motion for mistrial. Gay v. State, 199 Ga. App. 80, 403 S.E.2d 895 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

State's failure to supply written copies of the defendants' video taped statements was not reversible error since the statements on the videotape were merely cumulative of other previously rendered testimony to which the defendants interposed no objection. Bowe v. State, 201 Ga. App. 127, 410 S.E.2d 765 (1991), overruled on other grounds, Watts v. State, 274 Ga. 373, 552 S.E.2d 823 (2001), overruled on other grounds, Watts v. State, 261 Ga. App. 230, 582 S.E.2d 186 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Reversal not required unless error contributed to verdict. — Admission of a defendant's statement in violation of subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 did not require reversal unless it was highly probable that the error contributed to the verdict. Davis v. State, 198 Ga. App. 375, 401 S.E.2d 581 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to challenge sufficiency of notice. — Defendant failed to show trial counsel's performance was deficient for failing to challenge the sufficiency of the state's notice of intent to seek punishment as a recidivist because there was no evidence in the record that the state failed to provide a copy of the criminal history report, nor was there any evidence that the defendant and counsel were unaware of the specific felony convictions listed in the criminal history record. Williams v. State, 326 Ga. App. 784, 757 S.E.2d 448 (2014).

Miranda-waiver form. — State-withheld signed Miranda-waiver form which could not be construed as incriminating did not fall within the ambit of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 and thus did not need to be furnished to a defendant. Brady v. State, 206 Ga. App. 497, 426 S.E.2d 15 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Failure to comply held harmless. — State's failure to furnish a written copy of the defendant's oral, in-custody statement upon request at least ten days prior to trial was harmless error since the victim positively identified the defendant as the perpetrator of the crimes and the defendant presented no evidence in the defendant's defense. Russell v. State, 183 Ga. App. 209, 358 S.E.2d 631 (1987).

State's failure to timely provide the defendant with a written copy of the defendant's in-custody statement was harmless error since the evidence against the defendant was overwhelming. Coney v. State, 198 Ga. App. 272, 401 S.E.2d 304 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Failure of the state to provide the defendant with a knife before trial did not require the court to exclude the knife from evidence since the defendant made no showing that the defendant was prejudiced and since no continuance was requested to cure any prejudice which may have precipitated as a result of the state's failure to comply. Tucker v. State, 222 Ga. App. 517, 474 S.E.2d 696 (1996); Parrott v. State, 240 Ga. App. 173, 523 S.E.2d 29 (1999); Roberts v. State, 244 Ga. App. 330, 534 S.E.2d 526 (2000).

Trial court did not have authority, under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, to exercise discretion and exclude the defendant's incriminating statement from evidence. Defendant made no showing of prejudice by the state's failure to make the defendant's custodial statement available prior to the trial, and the defendant did not ask for a continuance. Bell v. State, 224 Ga. App. 191, 480 S.E.2d 241 (1997); Knight v. State, 239 Ga. App. 710, 521 S.E.2d 851 (1999).

Because the defendant made no showing at trial that the defendant was prejudiced by the state's failure to make a scientific report available before trial, the trial court did not err in allowing the state's use of the report. Aleman v. State, 224 Ga. App. 391, 480 S.E.2d 393 (1997).

Since defense counsel admitted at trial that the notice of intent to present similar transaction evidence informed the defendant that the defendant had been convicted of a similar transaction because the notice recited that the state intended to introduce certain documents, including "disposition, guilty by trial," the fact that a copy of the conviction was not included did not affect the adequacy of the notice because no prejudice to the defendant was shown, and harm as well as error must be shown to warrant reversal. Arnold v. State, 236 Ga. App. 380, 511 S.E.2d 219, aff'd, 271 Ga. 780, 523 S.E.2d 14 (1999).

Although the state violated O.C.G.A.

§ 17-16-4(a)(3) because discoverable evidence of a photographic line-up was in the state's possession but not disclosed within the applicable statutory time period, the defendant could not show that the defendant suffered harm as a result of the late disclosure; thus, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant a mistrial. Jones v. State, 276 Ga. App. 728, 624 S.E.2d 275 (2005).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to exclude the medical examiner as a witness after the state failed to include the examiner's name on a witness list and provide the defense with the autopsy report as the defendant interviewed the examiner, the trial was continued to allow a gunshot residue test to be completed, and the defendant failed to show prejudice. Tarpley v. State, 298 Ga. 442, 782 S.E.2d 642 (2016).

Defendant failed to show prejudice from the state's failure to provide timely notice of an expert's particular opinion as the expert was included on the state's witness list, the expert's report was provided to defense counsel prior to trial, and the defendant made no showing of what additional evidence the defendant would have presented or how the undisclosed opinion would have changed the defense strategy. Murphy v. State, 299 Ga. 238, 787 S.E.2d 721 (2016).

Admission of 9-1-1 tape admitted. — Because defense counsel had the opportunity to listen to the tape before allowing the tape's admission into evidence, the trial court acted within the court's discretion in allowing the 9-1-1 tape into evidence. Rooks v. State, 238 Ga. App. 177, 518 S.E.2d 179 (1999).

Admission of evidence held reversible error. — Admission of a detective's testimony regarding the defendant's custodial statement in violation of subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was not harmless error and required reversal of the defendant's conviction of theft by receiving stolen property since the challenged statement directly contradicted the defendant's trial testimony that the defendant thought the property belonged to an acquaintance. Davis v. State, 198 Ga. App. 375, 401 S.E.2d 581 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Admission of evidence concerning an incriminating in-custody statement which a statutory rape the defendant made to police during their investigation of a prior rape was reversible error due to the state's failure to produce the statement in response to the defendant's request, notwithstanding the state's contention that the state was not required to provide the defendant with a copy of the statement because the statement did not concern the offense for which the defendant was on trial. Byars v. State, 198 Ga. App. 793, 403 S.E.2d 82 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Even though the state did not receive a scientific report until four days before trial, a continuance was warranted for the state's failure to provide the defendant with a copy ten days before trial, and denial of a motion therefor was reversible error. Brady v. State, 233 Ga. App. 287, 503 S.E.2d 906 (1998).

State's discovery obligations met. — As the trial court found no due process violation in the release of the defendant's pickup truck, allegedly involved in a murder, to the lienholder, due to a lack of bad faith on the part of the state and a lack of exculpatory value in the truck, and for the same reasons, the trial court also determined that the state did not violate the state's discovery obligations, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss or to exclude evidence. Brannan v. State, 275 Ga. 70, 561 S.E.2d 414, cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1021, 123 S. Ct. 541, 154 L. Ed. 2d 429 (2002).

Because: (1) the defendant did not object to the admissibility of three cash invoices on the ground that the state failed to produce the invoices during discovery; and (2) the state produced a jail inventory list as soon as was practicable, the defendant denied an offer for a continuance, and never presented any evidence of prejudice based on its admission, no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 occurred requiring sanctions against the state under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Bennett v. State, 289 Ga. App. 110, 657 S.E.2d 6 (2008).

Four boxes of documents were properly admitted into evidence despite the defendant's claim that the documents had not been made available during discovery because the documents had been provided to previous trial counsel and counsel and an associate were given a break during trial to review the documents. Raymond v. State, 322 Ga. App. 404, 745 S.E.2d 689 (2013).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial based on the prosecution's failure to disclose the existence of certain documents because the prosecutor gave notice to the defendant that the physical objects were available for inspection, copying, or photographing and O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3)(A) did not require the state to take the initiative and furnish the defense with copies of physical evidence. Ananaba v. State, 325 Ga. App. 829, 755 S.E.2d 225 (2014).

Plain language of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3)(A) does not require the state to take the initiative and furnish the defense with copies of physical evidence; the state fulfills the state's obligation by making the evidence available to the defense to inspect and copy. Ananaba v. State, 325 Ga. App. 829, 755 S.E.2d 225 (2014).

Trial court did not err in refusing to grant a mistrial based on the state's failure to disclose a therapist's notes until just before trial began as the state shared the notes shortly after receiving the notes, the defendant asserted no bad faith on the part of the state, the defendant was granted a short continuance to review the materials, and the defendant had notice that the therapist might testify two weeks before trial and could have retained an expert to counter the therapist's testimony. Reinhard v. State, 331 Ga. App. 235, 770 S.E.2d 314 (2015).

Because there was no evidence the emergency room doctor who treated the defendant made an oral or partially oral report, the state was under no duty to reduce to writing a non-existent oral report. Williams v. State, 302 Ga. 474, 807 S.E.2d 350 (2017).

Time of Receipt of Statements

Waiver of ten-day period. — Since the defendant gave no indication that the defendant's motion to suppress the defendant's statements at the crime scene was intended to encompass the time limitations of this section, nor did the defendant make any attempt to explain why the motion was not filed in time to allow ten days for compliance, the ten-day time limitation must be considered waived. Thomas v. State, 163 Ga. App. 151, 293 S.E.2d 540 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Since the defendant made a proper and timely request for production of the defendant's pretrial statement but was not served with a copy of such statement until the scheduled trial date, after the jury was selected but not sworn, any error in admission of the statement was waived since the defendant refused the offer of another jury more than ten days after receiving the statement. Todd v. State, 163 Ga. App. 814, 294 S.E.2d 714 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Harmless error in late disclosure of Facebook posts. — Late disclosure of Facebook messages sent by the defendant did not necessitate reversal as no bad faith or prejudice was shown. Hawkins v. State, 304 Ga. 299, 818 S.E.2d 513 (2018).

Harmless error. — Fact that the defendant's first taped interview, in which the defendant admitted furnishing a gun to a minor, was not provided to the defendant until nine days before trial was harmless error because nothing in the material surprised the defendant as the defendant testified to the same information at the minor's trial. Rollinson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 375, 623 S.E.2d 211 (2005).

Substitution of defense counsel. — Because defense counsel succeeded prior defense counsel five days before trial and requested statements under this section three days before trial, and because the statements were received the day before trial, the trial court did not err in overruling the defense's objection to the introduction of the defendant's pretrial statements on the ground that the statements had not been furnished ten days before trial. McCannon v. State, 161 Ga. App. 685, 288 S.E.2d 663 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

English transcription to Spanish defendant. — Failure to provide the defendant with a copy of the defendant's statement in Spanish at least ten days prior to trial did not require suppression of an English transcription of the statement which had been timely provided to the defendant since the defendant was clearly notified by the state of the substance of the statement the state anticipated using against the defendant. Windelberg v. State, 257 Ga. 289, 357 S.E.2d 583 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Late disclosure of witness statement not done in bad faith. — Due to interpretation difficulties, the state did not know that the defendant held a knife during an armed robbery until the Thursday before trial. As the state's disclosure to the defendant of this newly discovered evidence by at least the following Monday complied with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(c), the state did not act in bad faith, and the defendant was not prejudiced by the late disclosure; thus, evidence of the knife was properly admitted. Herieia v. State, 297 Ga. App. 872, 678 S.E.2d 548 (2009).

Trial court did not err by refusing to exclude evidence of the state's expert witness due to the state failing to provide a written summary of the expert's findings no later than ten days before trial, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4), because the defendant failed to show either prejudice or bad faith on the part of the state, and the defendant did not seek a recess or continuance or request any other remedy authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, except to object to the expert's qualifications. Hodges v. State, 319 Ga. App. 657, 738 S.E.2d 111 (2013).

Oral additional recollections by a caseworker. — With regard to a defendant's convictions on two counts of cruelty to children, the trial court did not err by allowing a caseworker to testify to additional recollections the caseworker realized were not contained in the report that was prepared following an interview with the defendant as the information that the defendant asserted that the defendant should have received before trial did not involve a written statement, a written summary of a statement, or a contemporaneous recording of a statement by the caseworker; therefore, the recollections did not constitute a "statement of a witness" under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2), and the state was not obligated to produce the information prior to trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7. Hinds v. State, 296 Ga. App. 80, 673 S.E.2d 598 (2009).

Report disclosed immediately upon receipt by state. — Defendant was not entitled to relief based on an alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 and failure to remedy the violation under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 because the state turned over the subject records immediately after receiving the records and counsel did not move for a continuance, but the trial court gave counsel additional time to review the records. Hambrick v. State, 353 Ga. App. 666, 839 S.E.2d 664 (2020).

Time of Making Statement

Statement by defendant after pat-down search and before arrest. — Statement was noncustodial and not subject to discovery under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 since the oral statement by the defendant as to ownership of and license for a derringer was given to the officer when the officer had probable cause to conduct a pat-down weapon search and the burden of proving that the defendant had a valid license for carrying the pistol was upon the defendant. The defendant was arrested only after the defendant admitted to not having a license. Jordan v. State, 166 Ga. App. 417, 304 S.E.2d 522 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Section only applies to statements made while in custody. — Former § 17-7-210 related only to those statements made by the defendant while in police custody. Shelton v. State, 196 Ga. App. 163, 395 S.E.2d 618 (1990), overruled on other grounds by State v. Burns, 829 S.E.2d 367, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 400 (Ga. 2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Statement made by the defendant to another while both were in jail constituted a statement while in police custody requiring disclosure upon the defendant's request. Walraven v. State, 250 Ga. 401, 297 S.E.2d 278 (1982), aff'd, 255 Ga. 276, 336 S.E.2d 798 (1985) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Time of Making Statement (Cont'd)

Statements not made while defendant in custody. — See Yeargin v. State, 164 Ga. App. 835, 298 S.E.2d 606 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302); Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731 (1998) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302), but see Mason v. State, 177 Ga. App. 184, 338 S.E.2d 706 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Section inapplicable to statement made while not in custody. — Because a party suspected of drunk driving was stopped by a police officer and asked to recite the alphabet that party was not in custody and therefore there was no requirement under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 that the state provide a written summary of the attempted recitation. Wilson v. State, 173 Ga. App. 805, 328 S.E.2d 418 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Only a custodial statement is required to be supplied pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Johnson v. State, 177 Ga. App. 705, 340 S.E.2d 662 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant's statement to a police officer which is made at a time when the defendant is not in custody is not subject to discovery pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Webb v. State, 179 Ga. App. 101, 345 S.E.2d 648 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant was not entitled to receive summaries of statements that the defendant made in a recorded telephone conversation which occurred while the defendant was free on bond and not in custody. Martin v. State, 179 Ga. App. 551, 347 S.E.2d 247 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant's statements are not custodial and therefore not subject to discovery pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210, when, although the object of the police officers' visit to the defendant's residence was for the defendant's arrest, the defendant was not under arrest at the time of the defendant's spontaneous statements to the officers. That Code section related only to those statements made by the defendant while in police custody. Hudgins v. State, 186 Ga. App. 883, 369 S.E.2d 54 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Only a custodial statement is required to be supplied pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-6-4, and an accused is not in custody when an accused is out on bond. Newsome v. State, 192 Ga. App. 111, 385 S.E.2d 794 (1989).

Belief of defendant and police that defendant in custody. — When statement occurred at a time when the defendant believed the defendant was not free to leave and both officers also agreed that the defendant was not free to leave, although the decision to formally arrest came later, the lower court was in error in concluding that former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 did not apply. D'Anna v. State, 201 Ga. App. 731, 412 S.E.2d 857 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Testimony before court official. — Person testifying before a magistrate or other judicial officer in open court at a preliminary hearing was not in police custody within the contemplation of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210. Maddox v. State, 210 Ga. App. 526, 436 S.E.2d 730 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Statement made by defendant to victim during commission of offense was not a statement as was required to be produced under this section. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 69, 299 S.E.2d 402 (1983) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Utterances made by appellant during commission of, or in connection with, crime charged do not constitute statements given "while in custody." Holbrook v. State, 162 Ga. App. 400, 291 S.E.2d 729 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Statements made during driving while under influence stop. — State had no duty to provide a driver with statements made to an officer in response to preliminary questions after the driver was stopped but before the driver was arrested for driving under the influence. Hudgins v. State, 176 Ga. App. 719, 337 S.E.2d 378 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110).

Statements made following driving while under influence arrest. — State had no duty to provide a driver with statements made to and officer after a driving under the influence arrest and Miranda warning as the statements were made voluntarily and were neither incriminating nor exculpatory. Hudgins v. State, 176 Ga. App. 719, 337 S.E.2d 378 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Statement while out on bond. — Incriminating letter written by a defendant while the defendant was out on bond to the child whom the defendant was accused of molesting was not discoverable pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 and was not erroneously admitted into evidence. McCoy v. State, 174 Ga. App. 621, 330 S.E.2d 746 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Waiver on appeal for failing to object. — If the state did not supply the defendant with a statement through pretrial discovery, the defendant waived this ground of appeal by failing to make a timely objection to the testimony as the statement was being presented into evidence. Cloud v. State, 169 Ga. App. 51, 311 S.E.2d 491 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

If the defendant makes a motion for discovery of all statements made while in police custody, and of all scientific tests to be introduced at trial, the denial of such information to the defendant, and the subsequent use of the information by the prosecutor at trial, will not be grounds for an appeal unless a proper objection or motion for mistrial is made at the trial court level. Huguley v. State, 253 Ga. 709, 324 S.E.2d 729 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

If an objection pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 was not made at the time the testimony was offered, the objection is waived. Johnson v. State, 191 Ga. App. 845, 383 S.E.2d 346 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Letter voluntarily written to a party other than the state or law enforcement officers is prima facie not a statement given by the defendant while in policy custody and therefore the defendant is not allowed to receive a copy of the letter as a statement made by the defendant while in police custody. Williams v. State, 202 Ga. App. 728, 415 S.E.2d 327 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Scientific Reports

This section was an extension of defendant's right to pretrial discovery by making scientific reports available to a the defendant upon proper and timely written demand if such information was in the possession of or available to the district attorney. Hartley v. State, 159 Ga. App. 157, 282 S.E.2d 684 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Preparation of expert's report not required. — O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4) does not require the state to have the state's expert prepare a report; rather, it requires that if such a report exists the report be made available to the defendant. Garey v. State, 273 Ga. 133, 539 S.E.2d 123 (2000).

Section does not apply to testimony of therapists and psychologists. — Former § 17-7-211 did not apply to the testimony of mental health therapists and psychologists, even if such testimony was based on written notes or reports. Horne v. State, 192 Ga. App. 528, 385 S.E.2d 704, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 385 S.E.2d 704 (1989), 494 U.S. 1006, 110 S. Ct. 1302, 108 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Section does not provide basis for discovery of child abuse records. — Former § 17-7-211 does not provide an independent statutory basis for discovery of "scientific records" of child abuse maintained by institutions listed in O.C.G.A. § 49-5-40. In the absence of obtaining a statutory exception by compliance with O.C.G.A. § 49-5-41 or O.C.G.A. § 49-5-41.1, as applicable, such child abuse records remain protected. Horne v. State, 192 Ga. App. 528, 385 S.E.2d 704, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 385 S.E.2d 704 (1989), 494 U.S. 1006, 110 S. Ct. 1302, 108 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211), cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 385 S.E.2d 704 (1989); 494 U.S. 1006, 110 S. Ct. 1302, 108 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Not introduced into evidence. — Inasmuch as a scientific report that was not made available to defense counsel was not introduced into evidence by the state in the state's case-in-chief or in rebuttal, the state did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3) by failing to disclose the report to a defendant with regard to the defendant's trial for murder and related offenses. Castillo v. State, 281 Ga. 579, 642 S.E.2d 8 (2007).

Illegible writing. — This section was not violated since the physician's handwriting was illegible but the state allowed the defense to confer with the physician and the parties during trial and agreed to a recess to decipher the physician's handwriting. Brown v. State, 161 Ga. App. 544, 288 S.E.2d 882 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1302).

Use of tests conducted other than pursuant to crime in question. — If the state was planning to put into evidence the results of comparison tests of material not collected from the defendant, the victim, or the crime scene, but which tests were performed as part of the investigation of the crime, and the results of the test have been reduced to the form of a written report, then former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 required the prosecution to provide the defendant with a copy of that report within the statutory period. State v. Mulkey, 252 Ga. 201, 312 S.E.2d 601 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Tests performed immediately prior to or during trial. — Former § 17-7-211 did not prohibit the prosecution from introducing evidence of scientific tests performed immediately prior to or during the trial absent a showing that the prosecution attempted to circumvent the discovery process. Wellborn v. State, 258 Ga. 570, 372 S.E.2d 220 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Defendant is not entitled to internal documents and work products of crime lab, such as a computer printout. Walker v. State, 168 Ga. App. 130, 308 S.E.2d 404 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

State is not entitled to discover from defendant that which defendant would not be entitled to discover from state. Livingston v. State, 264 Ga. 402, 444 S.E.2d 748 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

State's right to defendant's reports. — State is entitled to obtain a copy of a written scientific report by a defendant's expert. Caldwell v. State, 260 Ga. 278, 393 S.E.2d 436 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

When denial, and prosecutorial use, of information appealable. — If the defendant makes a motion for discovery of all statements made while in police custody, and of all scientific tests to be introduced at trial, the denial of such information to the defendant, and the subsequent use of the information by the prosecutor at trial, will not be grounds for an appeal unless a proper objection or motion for mistrial is made at the trial court level. Huguley v. State, 253 Ga. 709, 324 S.E.2d 729 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Prosecutorial misconduct. — Any error on the part of the prosecution in failing to produce a document cannot be classified as prosecutorial misconduct barring retrial unless the prosecutor's action was intended to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 305, 369 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1988) (decided under former §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

Prosecution did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 by failing to turn over the recordings of the defendant's conversations because the prosecutor did not access the jail's telephone monitoring system, which was under the dominion of the county jail and, thus, there was nothing in the prosecutor's possession, custody, or control to turn over to the defendant. Kitchens v. State, 289 Ga. 242, 710 S.E.2d 551 (2011).

Accessibility to prosecutor's files. — Neither a demand for scientific reports nor a generalized notice to produce statements seized from a defendant would authorize the defendant to pursue at will the prosecutor's files to ascertain if there are any witness statements which might refer to the defendant or admissions made by the defendant to that witness. Griffin v. State, 168 Ga. App. 696, 310 S.E.2d 278 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Five minutes to review polygraph test results unreasonable. — If the trial court allowed evidence regarding a polygraph test over the objection that no report of the results had been furnished pursuant to a timely request and then permitted defense counsel five minutes to read such report, the time permitted was unreasonable and was tantamount to failing altogether to furnish a report thus making admission of the evidence error. Taylor v. State, 172 Ga. App. 408, 323 S.E.2d 212 (1984) (decided under former §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

Machine printout of numerals or letters, which required interpretation by the machine's operator to attain significance, was not a "scientific report" and was thus not discoverable under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Dunn v. State, 178 Ga. App. 6, 341 S.E.2d 877 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Testimony concerning unsuccessful breath test. — In a trial for driving under the influence of alcohol, the trial court's allowing certain testimony in evidence concerning a breath test given the defendant following the defendant's arrest was not erroneous since the test was ultimately unsuccessful due to the defendant's inability to provide a sufficient sample to be tested and the evidence complained of was the testimony of the intoximeter operator relating to the steps the operator took to prepare the breath-testing device for the test to be conducted on the defendant's breath. Looney v. State, 180 Ga. App. 693, 350 S.E.2d 29 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Codefendant not precluded from cross-examining witness regarding report. — Exclusionary portion of former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211 applied only if the state sought to admit scientific reports the state had not timely provided to the defendant; those sections did not prevent a codefendant from cross-examining a witness with regard to the contents of a scientific report. Shearer v. State, 259 Ga. 51, 376 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 492 U.S. 922, 109 S. Ct. 3251, 106 L. Ed. 2d 597 (1989) (decided under former §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

State's discovery rights. — With regard to scientific reports, the state is entitled to only those discovery rights specifically granted to the defendant by former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211, overruling in part, Sabel v. State, 248 Ga. 10, 282 S.E.2d 61 (1981). Rower v. State, 264 Ga. 323, 443 S.E.2d 839 (1994); Johnson v. State, 265 Ga. 833, 463 S.E.2d 123 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

State may discover only those written reports generated by defense experts which the defense intends to introduce at trial. Thornton v. State, 264 Ga. 563, 449 S.E.2d 98 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

State's failure to respond to demand for scientific reports. — When the defendant was told of the information or knew as much as the prosecution did and had an equal opportunity to obtain the document from a nonaffiliated witness, it was not a violation of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 for the state to fail to produce the document in response to a demand for scientific reports. Kosal v. State, 204 Ga. App. 708, 420 S.E.2d 621 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Motion to produce inadequate. — Motion to produce pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27) which included a demand for production of all reports of any scientific tests, experiments, or studies made in connection with the defendant's case was not adequate pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 for production of scientific reports. Murray v. State, 203 Ga. App. 858, 418 S.E.2d 624 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Service of scientific reports not required. — Language of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4) requires only that the state make reports of scientific tests available for inspection and copying, not that such reports be served upon the defendant. Lawson v. State, 224 Ga. App. 645, 481 S.E.2d 856 (1997).

With regard to a defendant's trial on various drug charges, the trial court did not err by refusing to exclude the evidence of a crime lab report for the methamphetamine allegedly sold based upon defense counsel not receiving a copy of the report as the record showed that the prosecution provided the defense with a certificate of service showing that the state served defense counsel with the crime lab results and the certificate of service also included the handwritten note that defense counsel was free to inspect the report at any time. The prosecution was not obligated to serve a copy of the lab report upon the defense and the defendant failed to prove bad faith on the part of the state and prejudice to the defense. Rogers v. State, 298 Ga. App. 895, 681 S.E.2d 693 (2009).

Trial court did not err in admitting testimony and evidence relating to the second and third reports of an investigator who compared the latent fingerprints taken from the scene of the crime with the defendant's fingerprints and confirmed a match of the defendant's fingers because the state did not act in bad faith by failing to provide the second and third reports to the defendant prior to trial; the second report was provided to the defendant in discovery from the state, and the third report revealed newly discovered evidence, which the state did not discover until the investigator enlarged the defendant's fingerprint on charts in the investigator's preparation for trial, and as soon as the state received the third report from the state's investigator, the state provided the report to the defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(c). Mallory v. State, 306 Ga. App. 684, 703 S.E.2d 120 (2010).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed based on defense counsel failing to object to the testimony of a firearms examiner concerning the results of the examiners' ballistics examination because the testimony complained of was elicited by the co-defendant during cross-examination and not by the state so the state had no obligation to provide the defendant with notice of the firearms examiner's opinion and the defendant also failed to show any prejudice or bad faith. Bryant v. State, 296 Ga. 456, 769 S.E.2d 57 (2015).

Blood tests not scientific report. — Blood testing conducted by the American Red Cross was not the type of investigation-generated written scientific report subject to the discovery provision of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. White v. State, 263 Ga. 94, 428 S.E.2d 789 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Death certificate was not a scientific report that the state must furnish to the defense upon the state's timely written request pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Conklin v. State, 254 Ga. 558, 331 S.E.2d 532, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1038, 106 S. Ct. 606, 88 L. Ed. 2d 584 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Defendant was entitled to a copy of a scientific report even though the prosecutor orally informed defense counsel prior to trial of the information the defendant received from the crime lab. Alexander v. State, 203 Ga. App. 375, 416 S.E.2d 762, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 762 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

State was not required to explain testing procedures used by the FBI in a scientific report furnished to the state by the FBI and requested by the defendant. Moody v. State, 210 Ga. App. 431, 436 S.E.2d 545 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Operating record for a photo-electric intoximeter was a pre-printed form which was essentially a checklist of steps to insure proper operation of the machine; this was essentially the recording of an officer's working notes, not a scientific report within the ambit of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Johnson v. State, 174 Ga. App. 579, 330 S.E.2d 791 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Intoximeter results printout. — Intoximeter breath test results printout was a written scientific report for purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Ratliff v. State, 207 Ga. App. 112, 427 S.E.2d 85 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Tape recordings of drug transaction. — Tape recording of a drug transaction was not discoverable pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27) nor under § 17-7-210 [repealed], since the recording was not of any taped statement given by the defendant while in police custody, nor under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 since the tape recording did not constitute a written scientific report. Weldon v. State, 204 Ga. App. 221, 419 S.E.2d 59 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

Photograph depicting defendant, printed from negative taken from stolen camera was not a "written scientific report" under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Gosdin v. State, 176 Ga. App. 381, 336 S.E.2d 261 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Photograph depicting fingerprint smudges on windowsill of victim's apartment was not a written scientific report, and, therefore, not subject to discovery under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Thomas v. State, 176 Ga. App. 53, 335 S.E.2d 135 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Enlargements of fingerprints, which were prepared as jury aids, were not written scientific reports within the meaning of this section. Rivers v. State, 250 Ga. 288, 298 S.E.2d 10 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Latent fingerprint card which had to be interpreted by a testifying police officer in order to attain significance was not a "scientific report" discoverable under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Griffin v. State, 183 Ga. App. 386, 358 S.E.2d 917 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Report of the officer who lifted the fingerprint was not a "scientific report" discoverable under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211; the trial court did not err in allowing the officer to testify that a latent print had been lifted or in allowing an expert to testify that, in the officer's opinion, that print had been made by the defendant. Wester v. State, 205 Ga. App. 336, 422 S.E.2d 433 (1992).

Written waiver of rights signed by the defendant is not a scientific report. Dean v. State, 168 Ga. App. 172, 308 S.E.2d 434 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Emergency room record is a "written scientific report" although not specifically included in the statutory language. Paggett v. State, 188 Ga. App. 174, 372 S.E.2d 504 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Physician's notes do not constitute written report. — Hospital emergency room record containing a physician's notes of the defendant's inculpatory statement did not constitute a scientific report subject to discovery under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Conyers v. State, 260 Ga. 506, 397 S.E.2d 423 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Medical investigator's notes not "scientific report." — Chief medical investigator's notes compiled solely upon the investigator's observation of the scene of a homicide were not a "scientific report" for purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Pierce v. State, 209 Ga. App. 366, 433 S.E.2d 641 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Handwritten notes and experiments of state's experts were not scientific reports for purposes of discovery under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Williams v. State, 251 Ga. 749, 312 S.E.2d 40 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Graphs not scientific reports. — Graphs from an instrument known as a micro spectro photometer were not scientific reports for the purposes of discovery under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 because the graphs did not contain the conclusions of the microanalyst from the crime laboratory, but had to be interpreted by a microanalyst in order to attain the significance of the graphs. Williams v. State, 251 Ga. 749, 312 S.E.2d 40 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former § 17-7-211 did not mandate that notes, graphs, preliminary tests, and work product be furnished because those items did not constitute scientific reports. Andrews v. State, 196 Ga. App. 790, 397 S.E.2d 63 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Reports prepared by arson investigators not scientific reports. — In an action for arson, any reports prepared by the county and state arson investigators did not constitute "scientific reports" within the meaning of former O.C.G.A.

§ 17-7-211 because the investigators' analyses of the fire scene was based upon the investigators' general knowledge gleaned from experience and training rather than on any tests performed on material taken from the scene. Kosal v. State, 204 Ga. App. 708, 420 S.E.2d 621 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Autopsist's photographs were not "written scientific reports" discoverable under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Taylor v. State, 261 Ga. 287, 404 S.E.2d 255, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 947, 112 S. Ct. 393, 116 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Experiment of forensic serologist to determine whether serological testing could show the presence of blood in a bloodprint impressed on plastic after the print had gone through fingerprint processing, when neither the experiment nor the experiment's results were reduced to writing, was not subject to exclusion under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Ruger v. State, 263 Ga. 548, 436 S.E.2d 485 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Dental impressions, x-rays, and photographs were not discoverable as written scientific reports inasmuch as those items did not contain the dentist's conclusions and findings but had to be interpreted by the dentist to attain significance. Harris v. State, 260 Ga. 860, 401 S.E.2d 263 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Ballistics examination. — Court would reject the contention that the state violated the statute by failing to provide sufficient discovery regarding the ballistics examination since: (1) the record showed that the defendant was provided before trial with the report of the state firearms expert listing the expert's conclusions, which were based on the expert's microscopic examination of bullets and shell casings for each weapon tested in the case; and (2) the defendant was not entitled to the internal documents and work product of the crime lab. Cook v. State, 270 Ga. 820, 514 S.E.2d 657, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 974, 120 S. Ct. 419, 145 L. Ed. 2d 327 (1999).

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective because there was no evidence that the state acted in bad faith with respect to the time within which the state provided the ballistics testing report to trial counsel as the record revealed that the state provided the test results to defense counsel as soon as the results became available; and, to the extent that the defendant claimed that the defendant's trial counsel should have objected to the state expert's testimony at trial based on having received the ballistics report less than ten days prior to trial, the admission of that testimony could not have created a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Crump v. State, 301 Ga. 871, 804 S.E.2d 364 (2017).

Drug's physical effects not scientific report. — Testimony by two expert witnesses that, in the witnesses' knowledge and experience, a drug was a hallucinogenic which also caused certain physical effects in those who used the drug was properly admitted. The expert witnesses were not testifying as to any undisclosed scientific test results of appellant's own bodily fluids. Kirkland v. State, 206 Ga. App. 27, 424 S.E.2d 638 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Failure to provide summary of basis for expert opinions. — Trial court did not err by ordering the defendant's psychologist to provide the state with a copy of the interview notes upon which the psychologist was relying as the basis for the expert opinions because the defendant had not otherwise provided an updated "summary" of the basis for those opinions; during the psychologist's testimony, it became apparent that the psychologist was basing the expert testimony in part on additional interviews that the psychologist had conducted since the defendant had served the state with discovery. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

In an action for aggravated assault and aggravated battery, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance after the state failed to provide the defendant, no later than ten days prior to trial, a written summary of an oral report by a gang expert. Williams v. State, No. A20A0397, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 403 (June 29, 2020).

Trial court erred in disclosing to the state its ex parte orders. — In a capital murder case in which the defendant was granted ex parte orders for mental health experts to examine the defendant, the trial court erred in revealing to the state the identities of the experts, their areas of practice, and the bases for the examinations; remand was required to assess the likelihood of prejudice and take curative measures. Putnal v. State, 303 Ga. 569, 814 S.E.2d 307 (2018).

Report not excludable. — Since the record showed that there were no scientific reports to be provided ten days before trial and that the prosecution advised the defendant of the results of the test concerning the presence of semen on the rape kit slides when learned, the report itself was not excludable under the statute since there was no written report available before the trial. Davis v. State, 204 Ga. App. 657, 420 S.E.2d 349 (1992) (decided under former §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

Since the indictment charged the defendant with possession of cocaine and marijuana, the cocaine field-tested positive, the witness who performed the test was timely included in the state's witness list and the transcript contained no evidence that the admission of the test report impaired the defendant's trial strategy in any way, the fact that the state did not provide the defense with the report pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 did not necessitate the report's exclusion, particularly as the defendant did not argue that the defendant was surprised by the results and had declined a continuance. Guild v. State, 236 Ga. App. 444, 512 S.E.2d 343 (1999).

Timely Request for Scientific Reports

For a request for disclosure of scientific reports to be timely, whether it be made "at arraignment" or at some other time, the request must precede the tenth day before trial of the case. State v. Meminger, 249 Ga. 561, 292 S.E.2d 681 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303); Randall v. State, 195 Ga. App. 755, 395 S.E.2d 2 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Five-day span between the demand and trial precludes a finding of timeliness under subsection (b) of this section. Law v. State, 165 Ga. App. 687, 302 S.E.2d 570, aff'd, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Continuance or recess. — Only when the prosecutor fails altogether to furnish a written scientific report does the exclusionary rule apply; when a written scientific report is furnished late, the appropriate remedy "perhaps" is to grant a continuance or recess upon timely request by the defendant. Wilburn v. State, 199 Ga. App. 667, 405 S.E.2d 889 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Shannon v. State, 205 Ga. App. 831, 424 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 424 S.E.2d 51 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by failing, sua sponte, to allow the defendant more than a 15-minute recess to examine medical records which were not provided to the defendant until the day of trial since the defendant never requested a continuance or a recess. Wilburn v. State, 199 Ga. App. 667, 405 S.E.2d 889 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Request by Defense for Scientific Reports

Brady motion insufficient to invoke discovery. — Brady motion requesting to have disclosed and produced "the results of reports of any scientific or other tests, analysis, experiments, or studies made in connection with this case" was insufficient to invoke the disclosure requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Massey v. State, 251 Ga. 515, 307 S.E.2d 489 (1983); McCutchen v. State, 177 Ga. App. 719, 341 S.E.2d 260 (1986); Johnson v. State, 187 Ga. App. 803, 371 S.E.2d 419 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Since the defendant contended that the trial court erred in allowing evidence of scientific reports to which the defendant objected because the prosecution allegedly failed to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211, and since the record showed that the defendant made no written request pursuant to that Code section and the defendant's Brady motion failed to make reference to that Code section or to specifically invoke the ten-day time frame of that Code section, the trial court's ruling admitting the evidence was not error. Cassie v. State, 192 Ga. App. 484, 385 S.E.2d 129, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 901, 385 S.E.2d 129 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Adequacy of notice. — Notice under this section is adequate if the defense specifically referred to that Code section or if it makes clear that scientific reports, whether inculpatory or exculpatory, should be furnished prior to the ten-day limit. State v. Madigan, 249 Ga. 571, 292 S.E.2d 406 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303); State v. Meminger, 249 Ga. 561, 292 S.E.2d 681 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Court did not err in admitting certain scientific reports which were not provided to the defendant at least ten days prior to trial pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 since the request made was a general "Brady" motion without reference to scientific reports. Harden v. State, 166 Ga. App. 279, 304 S.E.2d 456 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Pretrial motion demanding a copy of any written scientific reports in the possession of the prosecution and to be introduced against the defendant but which did not mention former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 as authority for such demand and did not request that the scientific reports be produced ten days prior to trial did not constitute a valid request for discovery under that section. Lariscey v. State, 254 Ga. 241, 328 S.E.2d 213 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Defense request must precede tenth day before trial. — For a request to be timely, whether it was made at arraignment or at some other time, the request must precede the tenth day before trial as otherwise it would be impossible for the state to comply with former Code 1933, § 27-1303. State v. Meminger, 249 Ga. 561, 292 S.E.2d 681 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Motion for discovery of scientific reports filed at arraignment held ten days prior to trial was untimely. Abrams v. State, 164 Ga. App. 553, 297 S.E.2d 324 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Evidence allowed if state complied with request. — If the trial transcript revealed that the defendant's demand for scientific reports was made after arraignment and seven days prior to trial and that the defendant's trial attorney received a copy of the relevant scientific report seven days prior to trial, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to exclude the laboratory expert's testimony identifying the substance the defendant sold to an undercover officer as cocaine. Rolling v. State, 204 Ga. App. 13, 418 S.E.2d 396 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

No continuance for defense-requested testing. — Defendant was not entitled to a continuance pending receipt of the results of government laboratory testing which had not been requested by the state since the defendant had no right to seek, and the trial court had no authority to order, such a test for the defendant in the first place. Kendrix v. State, 206 Ga. App. 627, 426 S.E.2d 251 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

State's Duty to Comply with Request

Complete disclosure of all work materials used in compiling a scientific report was not contemplated under this section. The denial of such information did not unnecessarily prejudice the defendant or curtail the defendant's attorney in the presentation of the defendant's defense. Hartley v. State, 159 Ga. App. 157, 282 S.E.2d 684 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303); Ledford v. State, 264 Ga. 60, 439 S.E.2d 917 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1085, 115 S. Ct. 740, 130 L. Ed. 2d 641 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former § 17-7-211 applied only to "written scientific reports." If there was no writing, there was nothing to which the statute attaches. Law v. State, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former § 17-7-211 applied only when there was a writing. Faircloth v. State, 253 Ga. 67, 316 S.E.2d 457 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former § 17-7-211 applied to scientific reports in writing and not oral reports of experts relaying the results of tests. Perry v. State, 255 Ga. 490, 339 S.E.2d 922 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Herndon v. State, 187 Ga. App. 77, 369 S.E.2d 264 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Beck v. State, 196 Ga. App. 269, 396 S.E.2d 59 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Fulmer v. State, 205 Ga. App. 679, 423 S.E.2d 300 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Crumpton v. State, 213 Ga. App. 358, 444 S.E.2d 847 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Martin v. State, 214 Ga. App. 614, 448 S.E.2d 471 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Odom v. State, 214 Ga. App. 354, 447 S.E.2d 704 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former § 17-7-210 did not attempt to mandate the furnishing of written scientific reports that did not in fact exist. Givens v. State, 214 Ga. App. 774, 449 S.E.2d 149 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211); Gay v. State, 228 Ga. App. 248, 491 S.E.2d 469 (1997).

Exclusion of informal notes of investigator. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in imposing the extreme sanction of evidence exclusion for the state's failure to produce the investigator's notes because the record did not show that the investigator's informal notes, which the state could not produce, were subject to discovery under any of the provisions of Georgia's Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. State v. Brown, 333 Ga. App. 643, 777 S.E.2d 27 (2015).

Luminal test not required for disclosure. — "Luminal" test which was performed on the suspect vehicle at the scene of the crime and never reduced to writing was not required to be provided to the defendant. Harley v. State, 263 Ga. 875, 440 S.E.2d 178 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 did not require the state to produce the actual physical evidence upon which the purported scientific report was based. Mercer v. State, 169 Ga. App. 723, 314 S.E.2d 729 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Photographic evidence. — Photo developer's cropping procedure eliminated one the defendant's cap from a photo; the state had the photo developed again, but the newly-developed photo, which showed the cap, was not provided to the defendants until the first day of jury selection. As the state did not act in bad faith, and alerted both the defendants and the court as soon as the state became aware of the problem, the trial court did not err by admitting the photo. Culler v. State, 277 Ga. 717, 594 S.E.2d 631 (2004).

When, in an aggravated assault case, a police officer's report notified defense counsel that photographs had been taken of the crime scene, the prosecution was not obligated by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3) to further notify counsel that those photographs had been developed as counsel was on notice of the distinct possibility that the photographs were part of the state's file, and counsel was given full access to that file and chose not to exercise that privilege, so the photographs were admissible even though the defendant had not seen the photographs. Monroe v. State, 273 Ga. App. 14, 614 S.E.2d 172 (2005).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault with intent to rape, the fact that the state failed to produce photos of the victim's injuries ten days before trial, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3), was not grounds for reversal since the defendant did not ask for a continuance, did not show prejudice, and did not show that the state acted in bad faith. Murray v. State, 293 Ga. App. 516, 667 S.E.2d 382 (2008).

Defendant did not show that defense counsel provided ineffective assistance by not objecting to the admission of photographs on the ground that the defense was not informed of the photographs in a timely manner, as required by O.C.G.A.

State's Duty to Comply with Request (Cont'd)

§ 17-6-4, because counsel did object on that ground, the objection was overruled, and that ruling was not appealed. Taylor v. State, 298 Ga. App. 145, 679 S.E.2d 371 (2009).

Defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to autopsy photographs solely on the ground that the photographs were not provided to the defense ten days before trial lacked merit as the defendant failed to show counsel performed in an objectively unreasonable way by objecting on several grounds and made no showing the outcome would have been different. Sloans v. State, 304 Ga. 363, 818 S.E.2d 596 (2018).

Summary of official report. — Any defect in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 was not harmful error when the document produced pursuant to the defendants' request was not the official lab report itself, but was only a summary and differed from the official report produced at trial, and since the defendants had full right of cross-examination. Moon v. State, 194 Ga. App. 777, 392 S.E.2d 19 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Polygraph examination results to be provided to defendant. — When a county police officer testified that two persons previously charged with the crime had been released on bond after the results of polygraph examination showed that one "was being honest in her statement", the results of this polygraph examination should have been turned over to the defense under the defendant's request for copies of scientific reports. Ford v. State, 256 Ga. 375, 349 S.E.2d 361 (1986) (decided under former §§ 17-7-210 and 17-7-211).

No violation if state does all state could reasonably do to furnish report. — If the trial court heard the parties and ruled as a factual matter that the state's attorney had properly mailed fingerprint reports to defense counsel and had done all the attorney reasonably could do to furnish the defendant with a copy and if, in fact, defense counsel knew of the report and was not surprised by the report's admission at trial, the defendant's rights under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 were not violated. Pridgett v. State, 173 Ga. App. 409, 326 S.E.2d 581 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

No written report available. — Former § 17-7-211 did not serve to exclude testimony if no written scientific report was in the possession of the state and there was no evidence suggesting the state deliberately instructed witnesses not to prepare reports otherwise discoverable. McDaniel v. State, 169 Ga. App. 254, 312 S.E.2d 363 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Since there was no written report of tests analyzing marijuana until the date of trial, no evidence of prosecutorial discovery circumvention, the test results were furnished as soon as the results became available, and the defendant did not request a continuance but did speak with the witness, the trial court did not err in admitting the analysis results. Hand v. State, 206 Ga. App. 501, 426 S.E.2d 18 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Term "written report" limited in scope. — Right of pretrial discovery was intended by the legislature to allow a defendant to receive a complete written copy of the results of any scientific analysis, but the term "written report" as used in this section does not encompass the written work materials upon which the conclusions contained in the report were based. Hartley v. State, 159 Ga. App. 157, 282 S.E.2d 684 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Defendant's rights in pretrial discovery do not extend to a complete and detailed accounting of all police investigatory work on a case or to a detailed description of all analytical work performed by the crime laboratory. Sears v. State, 161 Ga. App. 515, 288 S.E.2d 757 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Notes and other work product. — State is not required to furnish the defendant with the state's expert's notes, work product, recordation of data, internal documents, or graphs. Roberts v. State, 196 Ga. App. 450, 396 S.E.2d 81 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Testimony of chemist as to tests conducted. — State crime laboratory forensic drug chemist's testimony as to scientific tests conducted on alleged cocaine was properly admitted since the individual test results did not include any expression of the expert's conclusions or opinion so as to amount to a "written scientific report." Roberts v. State, 196 Ga. App. 450, 396 S.E.2d 81 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Exclusion of evidence for noncompliance. — Former Code 1933, §§ 27-1302 and 27-1303 excluded from evidence any statements or scientific reports pertaining to a case if the defendant was not given copies of such at least ten days prior to trial after a proper request was made therefor. Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 530, 281 S.E.2d 252 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 27-1302 and 27-1303).

Evidence admissible when motion fails to invoke provisions of section. — Trial court did not err in admitting into evidence a death certificate because the prosecution failed to furnish the defendant a copy of the certificate prior to trial since the discovery motion failed to invoke the provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Dunn v. State, 251 Ga. 731, 309 S.E.2d 370 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Defendant entitled to document within reasonable time. — Defendant is entitled to have a scientific report at least ten days prior to trial. If ten days are not available, the defendant is entitled to the document within a reasonable time and may be entitled to a continuance or recess as the trial judge shall determine. Only if the prosecuting attorney fails altogether to furnish the document does the exclusionary rule apply. Law v. State, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983) (overruling State v. Meminger, 249 Ga. 561, 292 S.E.2d 681 (1982)) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Availability and not copies is the requirement. — Record revealed that the defendant was given complete access to the state's file on at least three occasions, and the state's file included copies of the experts' scientific reports; O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4) did not require the state to serve the defendant with copies of scientific reports, but only to make such reports available for inspection and copying. Lopez v. State, 259 Ga. App. 720, 578 S.E.2d 304 (2003).

Former § 17-7-211 did not provide for personal service on defense counsel. Hodge v. State, 262 Ga. 242, 416 S.E.2d 518 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

No prejudice to preparation of defense. — Since the state showed without contradiction that the materials were delivered to defense counsel's office more than ten days before trial and defense counsel did not assert at trial any actual prejudice to the preparation of the defense, the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 have clearly been served. Hodge v. State, 262 Ga. 242, 416 S.E.2d 518 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Production of evidence not admitted at trial not required. — Evidence not admitted at trial was not statutorily required to be provided to the defense. Zamora v. State, 291 Ga. 512, 731 S.E.2d 658 (2012).

Delivery to counsel of copy of coroner's report four days prior to trial was not unreasonable under all of the circumstances, including the fact that the defendant was given fair warning of what the coroner's testimony would be not only by the coroner's report, but also by the autopsy report submitted to the defendant on the very day the appellant filed the appellant's request for scientific reports. Biddy v. State, 253 Ga. 289, 319 S.E.2d 842 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Intoximeter results two days prior to trial. — One-hour continuance by trial court sufficed to compensate the state's provision of intoximeter results to the defendant only two days prior to trial since the defendant had not shown how additional time would have benefited the defendant or how the lack of time harmed the defendant. Johnson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 395, 433 S.E.2d 638 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Furnishing report on day prepared. — Since it appears from the transcript that a microanalyst's report was made available to defense counsel on the same day the report was prepared and furnished to the state's attorney, and it further appears that the witness did not actually testify until several days later, and, further, since former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 did not require that scientific reports be made available to the defense until the reports are "in the possession of or available to the prosecuting attorney", there was no violation of the defendant's discovery rights under the statute. Daniel v. State, 180 Ga. App. 179, 348 S.E.2d 720 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Omission of actual figures regarding quantity of alcohol or other drugs found in the defendant's blood and urine after a laboratory test rendered the test results in noncompliance with former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 and was fatal to the prosecution's case. Camarata v. State, 188 Ga. App. 41, 371 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 911, 371 S.E.2d 885 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Furnishing wrong report held harmless error. — If a scientific report is furnished on demand and timely, albeit the wrong report, and there is no evidence whatsoever that the error was other than an innocent mistake, and no harm results to the defendant, the rule of exclusion should not automatically apply. White v. State, 181 Ga. App. 170, 351 S.E.2d 536 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Defendant's remedy for noncompliance. — Remedy under this section for the state's failure to furnish a defendant with a copy of any written scientific report when a proper and timely demand had been made therefor was the exclusion and suppression of such reports from evidence in the state's case-in-chief or in rebuttal. Tanner v. State, 160 Ga. App. 266, 287 S.E.2d 268 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Since the state had not provided the state crime lab's report when requested by the defendant under this section, testimony and evidence arising from the report must be suppressed as well as the report itself. Luck v. State, 163 Ga. App. 657, 295 S.E.2d 584 (1982) (overruling Blackmon v. State, 158 Ga. App. 665, 281 S.E.2d 634 (1981)) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Even if there has been a violation by the state, the remedy is exclusion of the evidence rather than a mistrial. Dawson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 515, 304 S.E.2d 570 (1983); Pontoon v. State, 177 Ga. App. 868, 341 S.E.2d 505 (1986); Burton v. State, 191 Ga. App. 822, 383 S.E.2d 187 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Remedy for a violation of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 is not the grant of a motion for mistrial, but the suppression of the evidence. Curtis v. State, 183 Ga. App. 6, 357 S.E.2d 849 (1987); Burton v. State, 191 Ga. App. 822, 383 S.E.2d 187 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Remedy for a violation of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 is the exclusion of the evidence rather than the grant of a mistrial. Green v. State, 194 Ga. App. 343, 390 S.E.2d 285, aff'd, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 935, 111 S. Ct. 2059, 114 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

If the state did not provide the defendant with the fingerprint examination report demanded pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211, it was error to exclude the report itself, but allow the expert to testify about the fingerprint examination and the examination's results. Wester v. State, 260 Ga. 228, 391 S.E.2d 765 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Defendant's remedy for a violation of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 was to request a continuance or to make a motion to strike the contested testimony, and as neither of these remedies was sought, the court's refusal to grant the defendant's mistrial motion was proper. Prejean v. State, 209 Ga. App. 411, 433 S.E.2d 628 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Scientific report in the possession of the FBI laboratory was available to the state prosecutor, and it was error to deny the defendant's motion for a continuance when the defendant sought to prepare a defense to the report which was provided to the defendant by the state only seven days before the trial. Moody v. State, 210 Ga. App. 431, 436 S.E.2d 545 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Proper remedy for the state's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4) was to postpone the testimony of the state's blood spatter expert until late in the trial as the trial court did, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Further, by failing to ask for more time to prepare for the expert, the defendant waived any claim of error. Valentine v. State, 293 Ga. 533, 748 S.E.2d 437 (2013).

Failure to produce held not error. — If the defendant is told of the requested information or knows as much as the prosecution does and has an equal opportunity to obtain the pertinent document from a nonaffiliated witness, it is not a violation of the statute for the state to fail to produce the document in response to a demand for scientific reports. Worth v. State, 183 Ga. App. 68, 358 S.E.2d 251, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 907, 358 S.E.2d 251 (1987); Paggett v. State, 188 Ga. App. 174, 372 S.E.2d 504 (1988); Morris v. State, 196 Ga. App. 811, 397 S.E.2d 159 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

In a prosecution for drug possession, the state did not violate the defendant's discovery requests by failing to give the defendant the result of a negative urine test. There was no indication that the defendant was unable to obtain the test report personally. Defendant could not simply neglect to compel production of the report before trial and then complain after trial that the report's absence prejudiced the defendant. Sanders v. State, 199 Ga. App. 671, 405 S.E.2d 727 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Statement the defendant made while attempting to elude police was not required to be disclosed under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(1); trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the introduction of the statement on the grounds that the state failed to disclose the statement during discovery. Usher v. State, 258 Ga. App. 459, 574 S.E.2d 580 (2002).

If the defendant has already been provided with a copy of test results by the police, the defendant cannot be harmed by the state's failure to provide the results. Henson v. State, 168 Ga. App. 210, 308 S.E.2d 555 (1983); Johnson v. State, 194 Ga. App. 501, 391 S.E.2d 132 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

If the defendant already had been provided with a copy of intoximeter test results, the defendant was not harmed by the state's failure to provide the results pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Starnes v. State, 196 Ga. App. 262, 395 S.E.2d 603 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Certificate of service prima facie proof that report was provided. — Trial court did not commit reversible error by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance and allowing crime reports and testimony concerning those reports to be admitted at trial since an assistant district attorney's certificate of service established prima facie proof that a scientific report had been furnished. Williams v. State, 201 Ga. App. 384, 411 S.E.2d 316 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Restriction on oral testimony as to inadmissible report. — State cannot establish the substance of a scientific crime laboratory report through oral testimony if failure of the state to comply with this section rendered the report itself inadmissible. Madigan v. State, 160 Ga. App. 656, 288 S.E.2d 34 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 249 Ga. 571, 292 S.E.2d 406 (1982); Osborn v. State, 161 Ga. App. 132, 291 S.E.2d 22 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

In a prosecution for violation of the Controlled Substances Act, the state failed to produce to appellant the crime lab analysis of suspect plants until the morning of trial, and since the appellant asked for a continuance and was denied one, the trial court erred in permitting the crime lab expert to testify concerning the expert's analysis of the plants since the expert's testimony was the chief and conclusive proof that the suspect plants were marijuana, and it was highly probable that the error of the trial court in admitting such testimony contributed to the guilty verdict and required reversal.

Asbell v. State, 163 Ga. App. 514, 295 S.E.2d 182 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

If scientific reports are not provided, the testimony of witnesses based upon the reports is also excluded. Ramsey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 854, 303 S.E.2d 32 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Familiarity with preparer's testimony obviated need for disclosing report. — If appellant was already aware of the testimony the physician would offer, the appellant could not have been harmed by the state's failure to disclose the substance of the medical report pursuant to this section. Mackler v. State, 164 Ga. App. 874, 298 S.E.2d 589 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Notes an FBI employee prepared to assist the employee in testifying did not constitute a "scientific report." Ramsey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 854, 303 S.E.2d 32 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Letter of transmittal from an FBI employee, which stated that two enhanced copies of an original tape were made, one reel and one cassette, and that in order to obtain maximum intelligibility the enhanced reel copy should be played on a good tape player and reviewed using quality headphones, does not qualify as a "scientific report." Ramsey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 854, 303 S.E.2d 32 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Avoiding discovery by calling experts who performed tests. — State cannot avoid discovery of documentary recording of test results by calling instead the actual experts who performed the tests and thereafter contending that the defense was not entitled to documentation of the test results because the state did not use the results. Metts v. State, 162 Ga. App. 641, 291 S.E.2d 405 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Former § 17-7-211(c) did not serve to exclude other testimony since no report was in the possession of the state. Olson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 104, 303 S.E.2d 309 (1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1209, 104 S. Ct. 2397, 81 L. Ed. 2d 354 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Tests conducted after commencement of trial. — If a forensic scientist testifying for the state performed tests after the trial began so as to rebut evidence presented by the defendant at trial, the results of such test were not "in the possession of or available to the prosecuting attorney" when the defendant sought discovery and thus were admissible. Billings v. State, 161 Ga. App. 500, 288 S.E.2d 622 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Bangs v. State, 198 Ga. App. 404, 401 S.E.2d 599 (1991) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Document from health department showing that defendant had been treated for herpes constituted report required to be provided by state. Bramlett v. State, 162 Ga. App. 584, 291 S.E.2d 739 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Testimony not based on scientific analysis admissible. — Since none of a state fire marshal investigator's testimony was derived from any scientific analysis, as the testimony only related to what the investigator had seen and done at the fire site and in connection with an informant's activities, and the investigator offered no opinions or conclusions based upon any scientific examinations, the investigator's testimony was not excludable under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Ramsey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 854, 303 S.E.2d 32 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Report available to but not received by the district attorney is discoverable, and if the report is not provided to the defendant upon request, it is error to admit testimony based on the report. Luck v. State, 163 Ga. App. 657, 295 S.E.2d 584 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Results of laboratory test admissible when no written scientific report prepared. — Trial court properly admitted testimony of a forensic chemist with the Georgia State Crime Lab, describing the results of the laboratory analysis of the substance found in the motel room, since there was no written scientific report and the record revealed no apparent effort by the state to circumvent subsection (b) of former Code 1933, § 27-1303 nor even a hint of prosecutorial "sandbagging," but, on the contrary, there was testimony that the substance was tested by an independent analyst on behalf of the defense with the cooperation of the state. Law v. State, 165 Ga. App. 687, 302 S.E.2d 570, aff'd, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

State is not required to furnish the defendant a "scientific report" showing the results of the comparison between prints taken at the scene of the crime and those taken from the defendant at the jail if the crime lab expert who makes the comparison does not see the prints obtained from the defendant at the jail until they are shown to the expert at trial and, consequently, has no opportunity to prepare a report on the expert's findings. Lemons v. State, 167 Ga. App. 863, 307 S.E.2d 747 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Results via traffic citation. — Providing the defendant with a notation of the test results in writing on the Uniform Traffic Citation given to the defendant constituted sufficient notice of the test results for purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211. Ratliff v. State, 207 Ga. App. 112, 427 S.E.2d 85 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Specificity required on lab reports. — Results of chemical tests administered to the defendant are inadmissible when the crime laboratory report on the tests does not state on the report's face the exact numerical quantity of the drugs found in the defendant's blood and urine. Box v. State, 187 Ga. App. 260, 370 S.E.2d 28 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Former § 17-7-211 did not require the creation of a report if none exists. Ramsey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 854, 303 S.E.2d 32 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Remedy meaningless if pathologist allowed to testify from recollection. — Allowing a pathologist to testify from the pathologist's recollection, or from the pathologist's recollection as refreshed by an autopsy report otherwise excluded from evidence because the defendant was denied a copy of the report contrary to provisions of former Code 1933, § 27-1303, rendered meaningless the exclusionary remedy provided by that section. Tanner v. State, 160 Ga. App. 266, 287 S.E.2d 268 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-1303).

Evidence lost by state. See Dawson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 515, 304 S.E.2d 570 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Complete failure to furnish means exclusions. — If the prosecuting attorney furnished a copy of a scientific report but not in the time frame specified, there was nothing in former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 to require exclusion of the document from evidence. Only if the prosecuting attorney failed altogether to furnish the document did the exclusionary rule apply. Wade v. State, 258 Ga. 324, 368 S.E.2d 482 (1988), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 112 S. Ct. 941, 117 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Conviction reversed. — Defendant's conviction for driving under the influence was reversed since the state's failure to produce evidence of marijuana usage in a "written scientific report" left the defense counsel at a huge disadvantage in trying to cross-examine the state's witness as to the implications of the test results and the formation of the defense counsel's opinion based upon the results. Durden v. State, 187 Ga. App. 154, 369 S.E.2d 764 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Waiver

Failure to request continuance. — Trial court did not err in admitting into evidence the CDs retrieved from inside a CD changer seized from the defendant's home since: (1) the state timely disclosed the CD changer, which contained the CDs, and the prosecutor asserted that the prosecutor told defense counsel prior to trial that the CDs might be inside; (2) even if there was a discovery violation, the defendant failed to show bad faith by the prosecutor and prejudice; and (3) the defendant failed to request a continuance to cure any prejudice that might have resulted from the state's failure to comply with the reciprocal discovery requirements under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4. Mullins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 393, 599 S.E.2d 340 (2004).

Failure to identify harm. — Defendant's claim of a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3) was rejected as the defendant failed to identify any harm resulting from the alleged error. Dupree v. State, 267 Ga. App. 561, 600 S.E.2d 654 (2004).

Failure to object to introduction of polygraph examination results waived issue. — When a witness made reference to the results of a polygraph examination, defense counsel made no objection, thus, the defendant's objection under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 with respect to the admission of the results of the polygraph examination was waived. Ford v. State, 256 Ga. 375, 349 S.E.2d 361 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant waived any objection to service of a laboratory report. — Defendant waived any objection that the defendant might have had to service of a laboratory report only nine days prior to trial by agreeing, after the trial court had granted the state's motion for a one-day continuance, to stipulate that the case was tried one day later than the case was actually tried. Campbell v. State, 191 Ga. App. 390, 381 S.E.2d 599 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Failure to object or strike testimony. — Defendant's demand for a mistrial after a fire scene investigator testified that the investigator had prepared a report regarding the defendant's arson case was rejected since the defendant had not objected to the fire scene investigator's testimony nor had the defendant made a motion to strike the testimony offered by the fire scene investigator. Owens v. State, 204 Ga. App. 5, 418 S.E.2d 631 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Objection waived to scientific expert's testimony. — Trial court did not err in admitting undisclosed scientific evidence from an expert witness since no objection or motion for mistrial was made when the testimony was given. Strawder v. State, 207 Ga. App. 365, 427 S.E.2d 792 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211).

Failure to object. — Failure of defense counsel to object to the evidence of the defendant's in-custody statements when the statement was proffered at trial constituted a waiver of the state's noncompliance with counsel's request for a copy of the defendant's in-custody statement. Parrish v. State, 194 Ga. App. 760, 391 S.E.2d 797 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

Defendant waived error based on the prosecutor's failure to provide the defendant with a complete copy of the defendant's in-custody statement by failing to object or move for a mistrial until after the defendant cross-examined the investigating officer concerning the omitted portion of the statement. Al-Beti v. State, 210 Ga. App. 312, 436 S.E.2d 50 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210).

When the prosecutor responded that the prosecutor did not have a copy of the 9-1-1 tapes, and the defense did not object or seek relief, the defendant waived the issue of whether the state violated the discovery rules by failing to turn over a copy of the tapes. Smith v. State, 250 Ga. App. 465, 552 S.E.2d 468 (2001).

Statement in the possession of an investigating officer is deemed to be in the possession of the state, whether or not the statement is in the state's file, and the state is obliged to notify the defense of the statement's existence. However, the defendant waived the right to object to testimony based on this statement by failing to object to the testimony during direct examination, or even earlier at the Jackson-Denno hearing. Finally, even if the defendant's objection had been properly preserved, any error from the investigative officer's testimony was harmless because the evidence was cumulative. Smiley v. State, 260 Ga. App. 283, 581 S.E.2d 310 (2003).

Because an inmate never argued that the state failed to comply with the discovery provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, nor did the inmate request a Jackson/Denno hearing to determine the voluntariness of a prior statement given in an administrative hearing, the inmate was precluded from making these arguments for the first time on appeal. Pugh v. State, 280 Ga. App. 137, 633 S.E.2d 439 (2006).

With regard to a defendant's challenges to the admission of the defendant's self-incriminating statements that were not timely disclosed to the defense by the state, the defendant waived the right to appeal the state's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., by both failing to specifically object on the grounds that the defendant's statements were not properly disclosed to the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, and by failing to seek a continuance to cure any prejudice which may have resulted from the state's failure to comply with the statute. Jaheni v. State, 285 Ga. App. 266, 645 S.E.2d 735 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing a witness to be called as an expert because the defendant's trial counsel agreed to the trial court's suggestion that the state's witness be treated as a rebuttal witness testifying out of order; trial counsel's affirmative withdrawal of an objection previously made returned the situation to one in which no objection was made, and the failure to object at trial constituted a waiver of the defendant's ability to raise the issue on appeal. Danenberg v. State, 291 Ga. 439, 729 S.E.2d 315 (2012), cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1124, 133 S. Ct. 941, 184 L. Ed. 2d 726 (2013).

Failure to elect. — Court of Appeals rejected the defendant's claimed discovery violation as the defendant could not complain that discovery materials were not made available to counsel before trial since the defendant failed to show an election to proceed under the reciprocal discovery statute and could not show what materials were withheld, or how the availability of the materials might have changed the outcome of the trial. Hall v. State, 282 Ga. App. 562, 639 S.E.2d 341 (2006).

Failure to request relief. — Pretermitting whether the state upheld the state's reciprocal discovery obligations, the defendant's failure during trial to assert a discovery violation deprived the trial court of an opportunity to formulate appropriate relief, if any. Garrett v. State, 285 Ga. App. 282, 645 S.E.2d 718 (2007).

Failure to request in camera inspection — In a child molestation conviction, after the defendant determined during trial that the state had not informed the defendant of an additional interview conducted by the victim's counselor, the state did not violate the Georgia Reciprocal Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3)(a), by failing to provide this material because the defendant had not requested an in camera inspection of the confidential therapist's records as required by O.C.G.A. § 49-5-41. Waters v. State, 303 Ga. App. 187, 692 S.E.2d 802 (2010).

Exclusion of doctor's opinion not required. — Although the defendant argued that a neurosurgeon's opinion should have been excluded because the state failed to provide notice of the neurosurgeon's opinion regarding Shaken Baby Syndrome ten days prior to trial as required by the reciprocal discovery statute, the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by the state's non-disclosure of the neurosurgeon's opinion, warranting an exclusion of the testimony as two of the state's expert witnesses had already testified regarding Shaken Baby Syndrome, defense counsel was on notice that the Shaken Baby Syndrome theory could be put forward by the state through those experts, and the defense presented its own expert at trial as rebuttal expert testimony. Wyatt v. State, 300 Ga. 509, 796 S.E.2d 701 (2017).

Expert testimony based on opinion not subject to this Code section. — When expert's testimony would have been independent of any scientific tests of experiments and would have been based on the expert's opinion derived from information available to both parties and which did not require the results and scientific tests or experiments, it was not subject to O.C.G.A. §17-16-4(b)(2) Green v. State, No. S19A0644, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 721 (Oct. 31, 2019).

Defendant's consent to move forward. — Defendant's counsel visited the defendant in jail prior to the trial and expressed counsel's belief that the trial court would grant the defendant a continuance based upon the short period of time between counsel's receipt of the state's discovery and the scheduled trial date under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 since the state must disclose and make available certain discoverable materials no later than ten days prior to trial. Defendant and defense counsel came to the mutual decision to move forward with the trial as scheduled and the fact that the defendant later regretted making that choice did not afford the defendant the right to a new trial. Hubert v. State, 297 Ga. App. 71, 676 S.E.2d 436 (2009).

State's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(1) by failing to timely to disclose the defendant's in-custody offer to bribe the victim not to testify did not mandate reversal as the defendant waived the right to assert this error by not requesting relief at trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Spencer v. State, 296 Ga. App. 828, 676 S.E.2d 274 (2009).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist sentencing was served on defense counsel on the first day of trial prior to the jury being sworn, and certified copies of the convictions were admitted without objection; therefore, any defects or untimeliness in the notice under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5) were waived. Ross v. State, 313 Ga. App. 695, 722 S.E.2d 411 (2012).

17-16-5. Alibi witnesses.

(a) Upon written demand by the prosecuting attorney within ten days after arraignment, or at such time as the court permits, stating the time, date, and place at which the alleged offense was committed, the defendant shall serve within ten days of the demand of the prosecuting attorney or ten days prior to trial, whichever is later, or as otherwise ordered by the court, upon the prosecuting attorney a written notice of the defendant's intention to offer a defense of alibi. Such notice by the defendant shall state the specific place or places at which the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense and the names, addresses, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of the witnesses, if known to the defendant, upon whom the defendant intends to rely to establish such alibi unless previously supplied.

(b) The prosecuting attorney shall serve upon the defendant within five days of the defendant's written notice but no later than five days before trial, whichever is later, a written notice stating the names, addresses, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of the witnesses, if known to the state, upon whom the state intends to rely to rebut the defendant's evidence of alibi unless previously supplied.

(c) If prior to or during trial, a party learns of an additional witness whose identity, if known, should have been included in the information furnished under subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section, the party shall promptly notify the other party of the existence and identity of such additional witness.

(d) Upon a showing that a disclosure required by this Code section would create a substantial threat of physical or economic harm to a witness, the court may grant an exception to any of the requirements of subsections (a) through (c) of this Code section.

(e) If the defendant withdraws the notice of intention to rely upon an alibi defense, the notice and intention to rely upon an alibi defense are not admissible. However the prosecuting attorney may offer any other evidence regarding alibi.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Duty of state. — Use of the word "shall" indicates clearly that the state is required to file a rebuttal to the defendant's notification. White v. State, 271 Ga. 130, 518 S.E.2d 113 (1999).

State did not satisfy the state's obligation under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5 because the state previously supplied a list of witnesses and the rebuttal witnesses were named on that list. White v. State, 271 Ga. 130, 518 S.E.2d 113 (1999).

State was obligated to respond to the defendants' notification of the defendants' intention to rely upon alibi as a defense, and neither the state's general witness list, nor the state's entitlement to rebut or impeach a witness's testimony with conflicting testimony or statements under former O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-82 and 24-9-83 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 24-6-608, 24-6-13, and 24-6-621), was a substitute for compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b). Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

"Witness" does not include defendant. — Term "witness", as it is used in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5, and as defined by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(3) "does not include the defendant"; thus, the trial court's ruling requiring the defendant to give notice to the state of any alibi testimony the defendant might give at trial on the defendant's own behalf was erroneous. Johnson v. State, 272 Ga. 468, 532 S.E.2d 377 (2000).

Failure to disclose. — If the defendant acted in bad faith in failing to provide information regarding alibi witnesses, and the state was prejudiced thereby, the defendant could be prevented from presenting the testimony of witnesses not properly disclosed. Davis v. State, 226 Ga. App. 83, 485 S.E.2d 508 (1997); Freeman v. State, 245 Ga. App. 384, 537 S.E.2d 776 (2000).

Defendant could not show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel met the notice requirements in O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a) and presented the defendant's alibi defense because of the overwhelming evidence against the defendant. Thus, the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when the defendant's counsel failed to properly notify the prosecution of the defendant's alibi defense, which resulted in the exclusion of alibi testimony at trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Jones v. State, 266 Ga. App. 679, 598 S.E.2d 65 (2004).

Exclusion of an alibi witness was proper as the record disclosed evidence of bad faith by the defense in failing to disclose the witness within ten days of trial as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a). Specific findings of fact regarding prejudice and bad faith had not been required as such findings were implicit in the trial court's decision to exclude the witness. Theophile v. State, 295 Ga. App. 517, 672 S.E.2d 479 (2009).

Failure to timely come forward with alibi defense. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court excluded the defendant's alibi evidence, including the testimony of the defendant's alibi witnesses, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, because the defendant's failure to timely come forward with the defendant's alibi defense constituted prejudice and bad faith; the state had notice of the alibi just three days before the start of trial, and although the defendant made the defendant's alibi witnesses available, at least one witness was uncooperative, further prejudicing the state. Huckabee v. State, 287 Ga. 728, 699 S.E.2d 531 (2010).

Exclusion of alibi evidence was not error as the defendant failed to notify the state of the alibi until the day of trial, despite the prosecutor's request for such evidence no more than five days prior to trial. Rembert v. State, 324 Ga. App. 146, 749 S.E.2d 744 (2013).

Presentation of alibi witness showed defendant not prejudiced by delay in appointment of counsel. — Defendant could not show that the delay in defense counsel's appointment denied the defendant the benefit of an alibi witness's testimony because the defendant's trial counsel filed a notice of intent to present an alibi defense, identifying the witness, and the witness was present and testified that the defendant's counsel had located the witness and interviewed the witness prior to the trial. Woods v. State, 342 Ga. App. 301, 802 S.E.2d 822 (2017).

Preservation of alibi defense. — Trial court erred in finding that the defendant failed to properly preserve an alibi defense pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a) because the defendant had not gone to trial. Johnson v. State, 313 Ga. App. 895, 723 S.E.2d 100 (2012).

Premature filing of notice of alibi not ineffective assistance. — In an armed robbery prosecution, trial counsel was not ineffective for disclosing the defendant's alibi defense before the prosecution filed a demand for notice of alibi under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a) because counsel knew that such a demand was going to be filed, and the defendant was not prejudiced by the premature disclosure. Fuller v. State, 295 Ga. App. 439, 672 S.E.2d 438 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C0749, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 220 (Ga. 2009).

Compliance required. — Defendant, whose evidence was the sole evidence in support of an alibi defense, was required to file an intention to offer an alibi defense under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a), even when the state was aware that the defendant claimed to be elsewhere on the day of the crime, and such did not affect the defendant's right to testify under the Sixth Amendment; moreover, it was irrelevant that the state was already aware that the defendant claimed to be elsewhere on the date of the crime because the statute provided no exception for such prior knowledge, and because the mere claim to be elsewhere when confronted by authorities was a far cry from intending to present the legal defense of alibi. State v. Charbonneau, 281 Ga. 46, 635 S.E.2d 759 (2006).

Defendant's testimony about alibi. — Trial court did not err in excluding the defendant's testimony regarding the defendant's alibi defense since the defendant failed to provide information as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5 ten days before the trial. Todd v. State, 230 Ga. App. 849, 498 S.E.2d 142 (1998).

State's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5 did not demand that the trial court grant the defendant's motion for acquittal since the defendant did not raise the noncompliance at trial, the court did not have the opportunity to exercise the court's discretion in formulating a remedy under O.C.G.A. § 17-6-6, and the defendant could not complain for the first time on appeal. White v. State, 271 Ga. 130, 518 S.E.2d 113 (1999).

Defendants were not entitled to relief based upon the state's failure to serve the defendants with the notice required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b) because the defendants did not show that the state acted in bad faith nor that the defendants were prejudiced by the state's failure to separately disclose the names of the witnesses who would rebut the defendants' alibi defense. Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion for a mistrial as the defendant's failure to disclose all of the defendant's alibi witnesses after the state demanded that the defendant do so, coupled with defense counsel's mentioning in opening statement several witnesses who could place the defendant in another state at the time of the murders for which the defendant was on trial, warranted granting the mistrial because a ruling otherwise would violate the state's right to a fair trial and reward the defendant for the misconduct of the defendant's counsel. Tubbs v. State, 276 Ga. 751, 583 S.E.2d 853 (2003).

In the defendants' trial on a charge of murder and other crimes, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by limiting the testimony of a defense witness who was named as an alibi witness shortly before trial began. Reddick v. State, 264 Ga. App. 487, 591 S.E.2d 392 (2003), overruled on other grounds by State v. Springer, 297 Ga. 376, 774 S.E.2d 106 (2015).

Defendant's choice not to testify about alibi. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a new trial based on ineffective assistance as although the state filed a notice for demand of alibi defense, the defendant never maintained such a defense at trial and the record showed that the defendant decided not to testify based on having a prior conviction; thus, trial counsel's choice of trial strategy was consistent with the defendant's desire not to testify and was a reasonable choice based upon the pretrial assessment. Bostic v. State, 341 Ga. App. 402, 801 S.E.2d 89 (2017).

Reply to defendant's notice not required. — Defendant's notice of the defendant's alibi defense did not place the burden on the prosecution to file a rebuttal. White v. State, 233 Ga. App. 24, 503 S.E.2d 26 (1998), aff'd, 271 Ga. 130, 518 S.E.2d 113 (1999).

Discretion of court in permitting witness to testify. — Although the state failed to comply with the notification requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b), the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that the appropriate remedy was not to exclude the alibi witness, but to grant a continuance and permit the witness to testify. Malaguti v. State, 273 Ga. 398, 543 S.E.2d 1 (2001), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Exclusion of witness was error. — Exclusion of a the defendant's alibi witness was error, although the defendant failed to give the state the required ten-days' notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a), as there was no finding of bad faith by the defendant or prejudice to the state under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Ware v. State, 298 Ga. App. 232, 679 S.E.2d 797 (2009).

Claim that defendant not at crime scene. — Defendant is not required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a) to give notice to the state of the anticipated testimony of a witness who would testify merely that the defendant was not present at the crime scene at the relevant time when such testimony will not also assert that the defendant was at a specified location other than the crime scene at the time of the crime. Johnson v. State, 272 Ga. 468, 532 S.E.2d 377 (2000).

Evidence did not warrant instruction on alibi. — Evidence did not warrant an instruction on alibi because the evidence proffered at trial was insufficient to warrant the trial court to give an instruction on alibi; the trial court properly excluded alleged evidence of an alibi because the defendant's failure to timely come forward with the defendant's alibi defense constituted prejudice and bad faith. Huckabee v. State, 287 Ga. 728, 699 S.E.2d 531 (2010).

Failure to elect. — Court of Appeals rejected the defendant's claimed discovery violation as the defendant could not complain that discovery materials were not made available to counsel before trial since the defendant failed to show an election to proceed under the reciprocal discovery statute and could not show what materials were withheld, or how the availability of the materials might have changed the outcome of the trial. Hall v. State, 282 Ga. App. 562, 639 S.E.2d 341 (2006).

Challenge was not preserved for review. — Since the defendant did not raise at trial the issue of the state's alleged failure to comply with the notice requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b), the defendant could not raise the issue for the first time on appeal. Cordy v. State, 257 Ga. App. 726, 572 S.E.2d 73 (2002).

Because the defendant failed to object to the introduction of the notice of alibi on abandonment grounds at trial, but rather asserted only that the notice was a privileged communication, any error as to the introduction of the notice was waived on appeal. Hester v. State, 287 Ga. App. 434, 651 S.E.2d 538 (2007).

Failure to sustain appellate burden. — Trial court did not err in refusing to grant the defendant's requested remedy for the state's failure to respond to the defendant's notice of an alibi because although the state's provision of the state's general witness list did not satisfy the state's obligations under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b); to be entitled to a new trial, the defendant was required to demonstrate what harm the defendant suffered as a result of the state's noncompliance, but the defendant showed no such harm; therefore, even assuming that the trial court erred, the defendant failed to sustain the defendant's appellate burden and reversal was not warranted. Martinez v. State, 306 Ga. App. 512, 702 S.E.2d 747 (2010).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to object that notice not required. — Counsel was not ineffective in failing to specifically object that the defendant was not required to give the state notice of an alibi defense because, even if the trial court erred in failing to give an alibi instruction to the jury, the defendant was not prejudiced as the evidence did not provide the defendant a good alibi for the crime; the defendant admitted being at the crime scene with the victim on the night of the murder; and the girlfriend's testimony about when the defendant was home left the defendant ample time to kill the victim that night, and did not put the defendant at home when the minivan, like the one the defendant borrowed, was seen near the crime scene at about 1:30 A.M. Prince v. State, 295 Ga. 788, 764 S.E.2d 362 (2014).

17-16-6. Failure to comply with discovery requirements.

If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that the state has failed to comply with the requirements of this article, the court may order the state to permit the discovery or inspection, interview of the witness, grant a continuance, or, upon a showing of prejudice and bad faith, prohibit the state from introducing the evidence not disclosed or presenting the witness not disclosed, or may enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances. If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that the defendant has failed to comply with the requirements of this article, the court may order the defendant to permit the discovery or inspection, interview of the witness, grant a continuance, or, upon a showing of prejudice and bad faith, prohibit the defendant from introducing the evidence not disclosed or presenting the witness not disclosed, or may enter such other order as it deems just under the circumstances. The court may specify the time, place, and manner of making the discovery, inspection, and interview and may prescribe such terms and conditions as are just.

General Consideration

Improper notice regarding witnesses. — Since the defendant acted in bad faith in failing to provide information regarding alibi witnesses, and the state was prejudiced thereby, the defendant could be prevented from presenting the testimony of witnesses not properly disclosed. Davis v. State, 226 Ga. App. 83, 485 S.E.2d 508 (1997); Bullard v. State, 242 Ga. App. 843, 530 S.E.2d 265 (2000); Freeman v. State, 245 Ga. App. 384, 537 S.E.2d 776 (2000).

Trial court was not required to consider any particular course of action in any particular order, but had discretion to take any listed corrective action the court deemed appropriate; the defendant's failure to notify the state that a witness had been discovered supported the finding that the defendant acted in bad faith. Jones v. State, 251 Ga. App. 285, 554 S.E.2d 238 (2001).

In the defendants' trial on a charge of murder and other crimes, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by limiting the testimony of a defense witness who was named as an alibi witness shortly before trial began. Reddick v. State, 264 Ga. App. 487, 591 S.E.2d 392 (2003), overruled on other grounds by State v. Springer, 297 Ga. 376, 774 S.E.2d 106 (2015).

Since the defendant failed to timely inform the attorney about the existence of an excluded witness, or to offer a justification or valid excuse for a failure to do so until three days before trial, the trial court did not err in excluding the witness's testimony. Card v. State, 273 Ga. App. 367, 615 S.E.2d 139 (2005).

Witness excluded. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding a witness as the defendant did not disclose the witness's written statement to the state within ten days of trial; further, the defendant did not include the witness's birth date on the witness list and the state was unable to investigate the witness' criminal record, if any. Clark v. State, 271 Ga. App. 534, 610 S.E.2d 165 (2005).

Ambiguity in trial court's order excluding evidence. — Trial court erred in excluding certain evidence on the basis that the evidence was not produced by the state until just over a month before trial, or had not been produced at all, in violation of the trial court's pre-trial scheduling order because the trial court's order was ambiguous both as to whether the trial court actually found bad faith on the part of the state at all in failing to produce the evidence, and as to the basis for the trial court's finding of prejudice to the defendant. State v. Bryant, 307 Ga. 850, 838 S.E.2d 855 (2020).

Bad faith justified exclusion. — Trial court had the discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 to exclude witnesses provided by the defendant on the day of trial in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a); bad faith was satisfied because nothing in the record indicated that the defendant did not know of the witnesses, or did not intend to call the witnesses, until the day of the trial, and prejudice was established because the state had no notice of the witnesses until the day of trial and had no opportunity to investigate the witnesses or the witnesses' testimony. Acey v. State, 281 Ga. App. 197, 635 S.E.2d 814 (2006).

Trial court did not err in excluding a witness's testimony because the state was not informed of the witness as a possible witness until the third day of trial and had no opportunity to investigate the witness's testimony or background. Similarly, the trial court was authorized to find bad faith because defense counsel knew about the witness's existence and had a plan to call the witness as a potential witness prior to trial, and yet failed to inform the state about the witness until the third day of trial. Hudson v. State, 284 Ga. 595, 669 S.E.2d 94 (2008).

With regard to the defendant's malice murder conviction arising from the suffocation death of the defendant's newborn daughter, the trial court did not err in excluding testimony from the defendant's proffered expert witness on police interrogation techniques and false confessions based on the state not being timely notified of that witness and because the area in which the expert would express an opinion had not reached a level of scientific reliability so as to allow the evidence. It was within the trial court's authority to exclude the expert's testimony for the defendant's failure to disclose the expert and there was no showing that the false confession theory and the interrogation method satisfied the evidentiary test in criminal cases set forth in case law. Wright v. State, 285 Ga. 428, 677 S.E.2d 82 (2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1123, 130 S. Ct. 1076, 175 L. Ed. 2d 903 (2010).

Bad faith or prejudice finding not required for exclusion. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's request to call a witness due to delay because the requirement of prejudice to the state under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 was satisfied since the state had no notice of the witness or a videotaped interview of a victim until the day of trial and, thus, had no opportunity to interview the witness, and the requirement of bad faith was satisfied since nothing indicated that the defendant did not know of the witness or the videotape until the day of trial; O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 does not require the trial court to make a finding of prejudice or bad faith. Vaughn v. State, 307 Ga. App. 754, 706 S.E.2d 137 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to allow an expert to testify that the defendant had post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) on the basis that the defendant did not disclose the expert as an expert witness in a timely fashion as the defendant did not make a proffer of the expert's testimony and, therefore, could not demonstrate prejudice; plus, the defendant testified at trial and informed the jury of the PTSD diagnosis. Keller v. State, 308 Ga. 492, 842 S.E.2d 22 (2020).

Failure to timely come forward with alibi defense. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court excluded the defendant's alibi evidence, including the testimony of the defendant's alibi witnesses, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, because the defendant's failure to timely come forward with the defendant's alibi defense constituted prejudice and bad faith; the state had notice of the alibi just three days before the start of trial, and although the defendant made the defendant's alibi witnesses available, at least one witness was uncooperative, further prejudicing the state. Huckabee v. State, 287 Ga. 728, 699 S.E.2d 531 (2010).

Exclusion of alibi evidence was not error as the defendant failed to notify the state of the alibi until the day of trial, and the finding that the defendant acted in bad faith was supported by the fact that the defendant presumably knew of an alibi when arrested but did not tell the arresting or investigating officers and neither alibi witness came forward to tell the prosecution or defense counsel of the alibi. Rembert v. State, 324 Ga. App. 146, 749 S.E.2d 744 (2013).

Defendant could not show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if counsel met the notice requirements in O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a) and presented the defendant's alibi defense because of the overwhelming evidence against the defendant. Thus, the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when the defendant's counsel failed to properly notify the prosecution of the defendant's alibi defense, which resulted in the exclusion of alibi testimony at trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Jones v. State, 266 Ga. App. 679, 598 S.E.2d 65 (2004).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a new trial based on ineffective assistance as although the state filed a notice for demand of alibi defense, the defendant never maintained such a defense at trial and the record showed that the defendant decided not to testify based on having a prior conviction; thus, trial counsel's choice of trial strategy was consistent with the defendant's desire not to testify and was a reasonable choice based upon the pretrial assessment. Bostic v. State, 341 Ga. App. 402, 801 S.E.2d 89 (2017).

Undisclosed witness allowed to testify. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in permitting a witness to testify for the state although the witness was not included on the state's witness list because the defendant made no showing that the prosecutor acted in bad faith in failing to disclose the witness before trial, nor that the defendant was prejudiced by the omission of the witness from the witness list. Childs v. State, 287 Ga. 488, 696 S.E.2d 670 (2010).

Defendant's claim that the trial court erred in allowing a witness not on the state's witness list to testify failed because there was no evidence of prosecutorial misconduct or bad faith by the state, and the witness' name, address, telephone number, and notes related to the witness' interview with police were included in the discovery report provided to the defense. Wilkins v. State, 291 Ga. 483, 731 S.E.2d 346 (2012).

Delaying expert witness's testimony as remedy. — Proper remedy for the state's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4) was to postpone the testimony of the state's blood spatter expert until late in the trial as the trial court did, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Further, by failing to ask for more time to prepare for the expert, the defendant waived any claim of error. Valentine v. State, 293 Ga. 533, 748 S.E.2d 437 (2013).

State did not act in bad faith. — Trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's statement that the informant the defendant saw at jail was the person "who busted him," as the defendant failed to show that the state acted in bad faith in disclosing the statement to the defendant during trial even though O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 normally requires such a statement to be disclosed ten days before trial. Dixon v. State, 252 Ga. App. 385, 556 S.E.2d 480 (2001).

Theft by shoplifting conviction was upheld on appeal, despite the defendant's claim that the state violated the reciprocal discovery requirements of the Georgia Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., as the defendant conceded at trial that the state did not act in bad faith, and failed to request a continuance, but instead, communicated a readiness for trial to both the court and the prosecutor. Brown v. State, 281 Ga. App. 557, 636 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

It could not be said that the state acted in bad faith or that the defendant was prejudiced; thus, a statement the defendant made to a coworker was properly admitted into evidence and the coworker allowed to testify at trial. When the state became aware six days before trial of the statement, the state immediately notified the defendant of the statement; two days later, the defendant was made aware of the fact that the state planned to use the coworker as a witness; and the trial court stated that the court was willing to make the witness available to the defendant for an interview and to give the defendant all the time necessary to question the witness before the witness took the stand. Holmes v. State, 284 Ga. 330, 667 S.E.2d 71 (2008).

Due to interpretation difficulties, the state did not know that the defendant held a knife during an armed robbery until the Thursday before trial. As the state's disclosure to the defendant of this newly discovered evidence by at least the following Monday complied with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(c), the state did not act in bad faith, and the defendant was not prejudiced by the late disclosure; thus, evidence of the knife was properly admitted. Herieia v. State, 297 Ga. App. 872, 678 S.E.2d 548 (2009).

Trial court did not err by refusing to exclude evidence of the state's expert witness due to the state failing to provide a written summary of the expert's findings no later than ten days before trial, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(4), because the defendant failed to show either prejudice or bad faith on the part of the state, and the defendant did not seek a recess or continuance or request any other remedy authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, except to object to the expert's qualifications. Hodges v. State, 319 Ga. App. 657, 738 S.E.2d 111 (2013).

Trial court's failure to exercise discretion. — Because the trial court excluded the defendant's prior conviction based upon a belief that the court had no discretion based on the state's failure to give notice of the state's intent to use the prior conviction as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5), the trial court could consider the court's options under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 before re-sentencing. Kiser v. State, 327 Ga. App. 17, 755 S.E.2d 505 (2014).

No showing of prejudice. — Failure of the state to provide the defendant with a knife before trial did not require the court to exclude the knife from evidence since the defendant made no showing that the defendant was prejudiced and since no continuance was requested to cure any prejudice which may have been precipitated as a result of the state's failure to comply. Tucker v. State, 222 Ga. App. 517, 474 S.E.2d 696 (1996); Parrott v. State, 240 Ga. App. 173, 523 S.E.2d 29 (1999); Roberts v. State, 244 Ga. App. 330, 534 S.E.2d 526 (2000).

Trial court did not have authority, under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, to exercise discretion and exclude the defendant's incriminating statement from evidence because the defendant made no showing that the defendant was prejudiced by the state's failure to make the defendant's custodial statement available to the defendant prior to the trial and because the defendant did not ask for a continuance. Bell v. State, 224 Ga. App. 191, 480 S.E.2d 241 (1997).

There was no error in denying the defendant's motion to exclude a supplemental crime lab report allegedly served in violation of the discovery act because the defendant did not request a continuance or make a showing of prejudice. Franklin v. State, 224 Ga. App. 578, 481 S.E.2d 852 (1997).

Abuse of discretion in exclusion of witness. — Without a basis to conclude that the state would have been prejudiced unless testimony of the defendant's witness was excluded, the trial court abused the court's discretion by excluding the witness. Hill v. State, 232 Ga. App. 561, 502 S.E.2d 505 (1998).

Since the defendant made no showing that the defendant was prejudiced as a result of the state's failure to make a custodial statement available to the defendant prior to trial or that the state acted in bad faith in failing to list a witness, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in permitting the witness to testify. Jones v. State, 243 Ga. App. 351, 532 S.E.2d 120 (2000).

Defendants were not entitled to relief based upon the state's failure to serve the defendants with the notice required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b) because the defendants did not show that the state acted in bad faith nor that the defendants were prejudiced by the state's failure to separately disclose the names of the witnesses who would rebut the defendants' alibi defense. Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court allowed a state's witness to testify even though the name of the witness did not appear on the state's witness list as the trial court granted the defendant an opportunity to interview the witness before the witness testified and the defendant did not demonstrate prejudice from the state's failure to list the name. Gay v. State, 258 Ga. App. 634, 574 S.E.2d 861 (2002).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the appellant's motion for a continuance based on the state untimely serving a portion of a witness's custodial interview three days prior to trial because the appellant's contention that proper cross-examination questioning was prevented was unsupported by the evidence and the appellant did not present the testimony of any potential witnesses or offer any other evidence to show that any prejudice resulted from the denial of the motion. Easley v. State, 352 Ga. App. 1, 833 S.E.2d 591 (2019).

Mistrial not required. — Failure of the state to produce transcripts or tapes of the statements of victim witnesses did not require a mistrial since there had been a substantial cross-examination of one of the witnesses about inconsistencies, counsel had the opportunity to review the transcripts during a recess, and the tapes were played for the jury. Hammitt v. State, 225 Ga. App. 21, 482 S.E.2d 437 (1997).

Provision of fingerprint report. — Because the trial court excluded fingerprint evidence that was not provided to the defendant before the trial and instructed the prosecutor to make no reference to the fingerprint evidence, the defendant could show no harm caused by the failure to disclose the fingerprint evidence before trial; therefore, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for mistrial. Davis v. State, 253 Ga. App. 803, 560 S.E.2d 711 (2002).

Mistrial inappropriate for failing to provide complete address. — Trial court properly dismissed the defendant's motion for a mistrial because the court did not abuse the court's discretion by concluding that the state did not act in bad faith by not furnishing the defendant with the victim's complete current address; furthermore, the defendant never requested a continuance to cure any prejudice which the defendant claimed may have resulted from the state's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a). Consequently, the trial court did not have the authority, under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, to exercise discretion and exclude the victim's testimony at trial. Shields v. State, 264 Ga. App. 232, 590 S.E.2d 217 (2003).

In a case charging child molestation, the prosecution was obligated to provide the defense with a copy of a child's pretrial statement to an officer, even though the statement was in the exclusive possession of the police. However, since the defendant did not seek to prevent introduction of the statement, and counsel was allowed to inspect the report, the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by the trial court's failure to order the state to make the report available to the defendant for copying, and the state's discovery violation did not give rise to any reversible error. Wilkerson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 721, 598 S.E.2d 364 (2004).

Provision of fingerprint report. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to exclude latent fingerprints due to the state's alleged noncompliance with the reciprocal discovery statute because the state did provide the defendant and the expert with an opportunity to examine the evidence. Alexander v. State, 276 Ga. App. 288, 623 S.E.2d 160 (2005).

With regard to the defendant's murder conviction, the defendant was not entitled to a mistrial because the state failed to provide an accomplice's statement about an alleged conversation between the defendant and a codefendant indicating a consciousness of guilt as the record showed that the witness was available to the parties for interview through an attorney prior to trial and the testimony provided at trial had not been reduced to a writing or otherwise recorded, but rather had been revealed during an interview the state conducted for the purposes of trial preparation; thus, there was nothing for the state to produce during discovery. Lewis v. State, 293 Ga. 110, 744 S.E.2d 21 (2013).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on the failure to produce witness statements because there was no evidence that the statements were lost or misplaced due to bad faith on the state's part; any argument that the statements might have aided the defense or provided a basis to impeach the state's witnesses was simply speculative; defense counsel was able to use the statements' absence to attempt to undermine a deputy's credibility at trial; and granting a mistrial would not be just under the circumstances, especially since there was no evidence in the record that the statements might yet be found and thus potentially alter the defendant's strategy in a new trial. Burton v. State, 330 Ga. App. 503, 767 S.E.2d 510 (2014).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on the prosecutor's misconduct in failing to disclose the statement the defendant made to the first investigator until eliciting testimony about the statement from the first investigator at trial because the undisclosed statement that the defendant made to the first investigator was the same in substance as the defendant's longer, more detailed, and audio-recorded statement to the second investigator, which was properly disclosed to the defendant and was played for the jury at trial; and trial counsel admitted that the first investigator's testimony did not provide any information from the defendant that had not already been disclosed in discovery. Prince v. State, 295 Ga. 788, 764 S.E.2d 362 (2014).

Any error remedied below. — Defendant's sole enumeration that the trial court erred in failing to exclude three new witnesses' testimony presented nothing to review; the trial court remedied the defendant's concern over the state's presentation of new witnesses by granting the defendant's request to voir dire the jurors and by removing the lone juror who knew one of the witnesses. Lee v. State, 255 Ga. App. 576, 565 S.E.2d 902 (2002).

Under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, the trial court's actions in allowing the defendant's counsel to inspect a detective's notes as well as the chance to question the detective in that regard were a permissible response to any failure by the state to comply with the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq.; furthermore, the defendant did not allege bad faith, and there was no prejudice because the evidence was merely cumulative of direct testimony. Swanson v. State, 282 Ga. 39, 644 S.E.2d 845 (2007).

Continuance granted to review evidence. — In a the defendant's child molestation trial, because a detective on the stand used notes that had not been disclosed in discovery, the trial court properly granted time for defense counsel to review the notes pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. McIntyre v. State, 302 Ga. App. 778, 691 S.E.2d 663 (2010).

Failure to grant continuance. — Defendant was not entitled to a continuance or sanctions since, prior to trial: (1) the defendant's attorney and the state viewed tapes of statements from both the defendant and the defendant's ex-girlfriend victim in which they discussed their prior difficulty; (2) the state offered the defendant's attorney the opportunity to look at the state's files regarding the prior difficulty; (3) the defendant and the defendant's attorney were well aware of the prior difficulty before the defendant's trial began; (4) there was no evidence of the state's bad faith; (5) the victim was cross-examined; and (6) there was no evidence of prejudice. Jackson v. State, 270 Ga. App. 166, 605 S.E.2d 876 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court refused to grant the defendant's motion for a continuance after the state violated the reciprocal discovery statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., because defense counsel attempted to interview three witnesses on the first day of trial and declined to seek another such opportunity despite the state's invitation to do so early on the second day, and although the witnesses declined an interview, defense counsel asked for no additional relief; the defendant failed to identify any testimony that was a surprise or to show that, with a continuance, the defendant would have uncovered helpful information that the defendant did not already know, and the defendant was able to use a prior inconsistent statement to impeach one of the three witnesses who, the defendant claimed, provided the testimony which was most beneficial for the state. Norris v. State, 289 Ga. 154, 709 S.E.2d 792 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 by denying the defendant a continuance and refusing to exclude evidence for the untimeliness of discovery because the trial court used the court's judgment to fashion a remedy appropriate to a case in which there was a speedy trial demand and no other reasonable time to proceed with the rather lengthy trial within the constraints of that demand. Higuera-Hernandez v. State, 289 Ga. 553, 714 S.E.2d 236 (2011).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to continue the trial because, instead of delaying the entire trial, the trial court gave the defendant the opportunity to interview the state's gang expert witness, who testified a full week later; and providing that remedy instead of a continuance was well within the trial court's discretion under the circumstances, particularly because the allegations of gang affiliation should not have surprised the defendant's counsel and did not alter the defense's theory of the case. Cushenberry v. State, 300 Ga. 190, 794 S.E.2d 165 (2016).

Trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion in denying a continuance because, assuming a discovery violation occurred, the trial court's remedy gave the defendant an oportunity to receive and review the recording before trial and the defendant made no showing that such remedy was inadequate or that any harm occurred; further, the recording in question was not even introduced into evidence at trial. Rowland v. State, 349 Ga. App. 650, 825 S.E.2d 231 (2019).

Denial of mistrial for failure to disclose officer's report appropriate. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for mistrial based on alleged discovery misconduct under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6; the defendant did not explain how the prosecution's failure to divulge a portion of an undercover officer's report prejudiced the defendant, and a mistrial, which would have been the equivalent of prohibiting the state from introducing or presenting the undisclosed evidence or witness, was not authorized by the statute. Ronoke v. State, 255 Ga. App. 420, 565 S.E.2d 594 (2002).

Defendant's failure to seek a continuance due to the state's alleged failure to comply with discovery waived the right to assert error on appeal; moreover, the defendant did not show that the defendant was prejudiced by the state improperly withholding any item to which the defendant was entitled, and thus failed to show reversible error. Sims v. State, 273 Ga. App. 723, 615 S.E.2d 785 (2005).

Pretermitting whether the state upheld the state's reciprocal discovery obligations, the defendant's failure during trial to assert a discovery violation deprived the trial court of an opportunity to formulate appropriate relief, if any. Garrett v. State, 285 Ga. App. 282, 645 S.E.2d 718 (2007).

State's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(1) by failing to timely to disclose the defendant's in-custody offer to bribe the victim not to testify did not mandate reversal as the defendant waived the right to assert this error by not requesting relief at trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Spencer v. State, 296 Ga. App. 828, 676 S.E.2d 274 (2009).

Defendant failed to show prejudice as a result of the trial court's failure to exclude testimony of the surviving victim based on an alleged discovery violation because, inter alia, the defendant did not seek a recess or continuance or seek any other remedy under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Falay v. State, 320 Ga. App. 781, 740 S.E.2d 738 (2013).

Remediation by post-trial grant of habeas corpus. — Convicted of capital murder, the defendant's habeas corpus petition was granted, the conviction was reversed, and the defendant was awarded a new trial because the defendant prevailed on the Brady claim that the state failed to disclose to the defendant that the state had paid a confidential informant money for information that led to the defendant's conviction; the payment of money was exculpatory since the payment indicated that the informant could be impeached since the informant had a motive to lie. Schofield v. Palmer, 279 Ga. 848, 621 S.E.2d 726 (2005).

Procedural bars not found. — Defendant's habeas corpus petition based upon failure to obtain Brady information was not procedurally barred since the defendant tried to obtain that information from the state but was not able to obtain the information until discovery in conjunction with the habeas corpus hearings. Schofield v. Palmer, 279 Ga. 848, 621 S.E.2d 726 (2005).

State met discovery obligations. — Because: (1) the defendant did not object to the admissibility of three cash invoices on the ground that the state failed to produce the invoices during discovery; and (2) the state produced a jail inventory list as soon as was practicable, the defendant denied an offer for a continuance, and never presented any evidence of prejudice based on its admission, no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 occurred requiring sanctions against the state under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Bennett v. State, 289 Ga. App. 110, 657 S.E.2d 6 (2008).

No error in refusing to exclude evidence. — Trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 in fashioning an appropriate remedy and in refusing the harsh remedy of evidence exclusion for the untimeliness of discovery because a codefendant's testimony was not at variance with the testimony at the defendant's first trial, though it was couched in different terms; the trial court allowed the defense to interview the agent off the record before the agent took the stand and to introduce the transcript of the agent's prior testimony. Chance v. State, 291 Ga. 241, 728 S.E.2d 635 (2012).

Expert opinion not provided within ten days. — Although the defendant argued that a neurosurgeon's opinion should have been excluded because the state failed to provide notice of the neurosurgeon's opinion regarding Shaken Baby Syndrome ten days prior to trial as required by the reciprocal discovery statute, the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by the state's non-disclosure of the neurosurgeon's opinion, warranting an exclusion of the testimony as two of the state's expert witnesses had already testified regarding Shaken Baby Syndrome, defense counsel was on notice that the Shaken Baby Syndrome theory could be put forward by the state through those experts, and the defense presented its own expert at trial as rebuttal expert testimony. Wyatt v. State, 300 Ga. 509, 796 S.E.2d 701 (2017).

Failure to give prior notice of letters. — Because the state did not gain possession of letters that were entered into evidence until after the beginning of the trial and because the letters were not relevant until the defendant testified, the state did not violate the criminal discovery statute by failing to give prior notice of the letters. Moreover, the record showed that the defendant did not present any evidence showing that the state acted in bad faith in failing to provide the defense attorney with the letters earlier or that the defendant was prejudiced by the state's failure to provide the letters to the defendant's attorney at an earlier time; consequently, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to exclude the letters from evidence at trial. Boykin v. State, 264 Ga. App. 836, 592 S.E.2d 426 (2003).

Admission of CDs when no bad faith by state. — Trial court did not err in admitting into evidence the CDs retrieved from inside a CD changer seized from the defendant's home since: (1) the state timely disclosed the CD changer, which contained the CDs, and the prosecutor asserted that the prosecutor told defense counsel prior to trial that the CDs might be inside; (2) even if there was a discovery violation, the defendant failed to show bad faith by the prosecutor and prejudice; and (3) the defendant failed to request a continuance to cure any prejudice that might have resulted from the state's failure to comply with the reciprocal discovery requirements under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4. Mullins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 393, 599 S.E.2d 340 (2004).

Admission of photographs. — Photo developer's cropping procedure eliminated one the defendant's cap from a photo; the state had the photo developed again, but the newly-developed photo, which showed the cap, was not provided to the defendants until the first day of jury selection. As the state did not act in bad faith, and alerted both the defendants and the court as soon as the state became aware of the problem, the trial court did not err in admitting the photo. Culler v. State, 277 Ga. 717, 594 S.E.2d 631 (2004).

Inadvertent omission of videotaped statements. — Defendant's new trial motion under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-22 was properly denied as the fact that the state failed to turn over two videotaped statements from the defendant's sons, arising from criminal charges due to a domestic dispute, was based on inadvertence rather than bad faith, there was unimpeached eyewitness testimony from other witnesses that was sufficient to support the defendant's convictions pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8), and there was no showing that the defendant suffered the kind of prejudice that undermined confidence in the outcome of the trial; accordingly, the defendant's Brady rights were not violated and there was no violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-6 and 17-16-7. Ely v. State, 275

No bad faith for exclusion of video and photographic pornographic images. — In the absence of bad faith on the part of the state, as well as prejudice to the defendant, the trial court erred in excluding from evidence a videotape and photographs of child pornographic images taken from the defendant's computer as a sanction for the state's failure to comply with a court-ordered discovery deadline. State v. Jones, 283 Ga. App. 539, 642 S.E.2d 183 (2007).

Review of audiotape of witnesses. — Because the record supported the trial court's ruling that the state did not act in bad faith with regard to disclosure of a witness's statement, the severe remedies that the defendant sought under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 were not applicable; the defendant had other audiotaped statements of the witness and had interviewed the witness and obtained an affidavit from the witness before trial, and the trial court granted the defendant an overnight continuance to review the additional statement before cross-examining the witness. Jones v. State, 290 Ga. 576, 722 S.E.2d 853 (2012).

Disclosure of 911 tape. — Even if the state had been required to disclose a 911 tape prior to trial, the tape's admission was not reversible error as the defendant failed to show that the state acted in bad faith as neither the prosecutor nor the investigator knew about the tape's existence before the start of the trial. Adams v. State, 340 Ga. App. 1, 795 S.E.2d 330 (2016).

Failure to request relief. — Defendant was not entitled to relief based on an alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 and failure to remedy the violation under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 because the state turned over the subject records immediately after receiving the records and counsel did not move for a continuance, but the trial court gave counsel additional time to review the records Hambrick v. State, 353 Ga. App. 666, 839 S.E.2d 664 (2020).

Handwritten statement cumulative of audio statement. — Failure of the trial court to turn over a handwritten statement of the victim in an assault case did not require a mistrial since the statement was merely cumulative of an audio tape of the victim's remarks and the court granted a continuance to allow the defendant to review the statement. Blankenship v. State, 229 Ga. App. 793, 494 S.E.2d 758 (1998).

No harm in admitting videotapes. — Because no specific evidence was cited, and no explanation was offered showing how the lack of evidence offered by a forensic examiner in opposition to the two challenged videotapes prejudiced the defense, and the defendant failed to show that any delay in production was in bad faith, no abuse of discretion resulted from admission of the videotapes. Milton v. State, 280 Ga. App. 179, 633 S.E.2d 606 (2006).

No prejudice from admission of audiotape. — Even if defense counsel had objected to the admission of an audiotape, the trial court would not have erred in permitting the audiotape to be played at trial as: (1) the defendant failed to object to the tape's admission at trial on the ground that the state failed to comply with discovery requirements; (2) the record disclosed that, during trial, the state made the defendant a copy of the audiotape, and permitted the defendant to listen to the audiotape during an overnight recess in the trial; and (3) the next day, the state did not play the tape, but had the investigator who conducted the taped interview testify only about the parts of the witness's statement that were inconsistent with that witness's trial testimony; hence, the defendant failed to show prejudice resulting from the admission of the audiotape. McNeal v. State, 281 Ga. 427, 637 S.E.2d 375 (2006).

No harm shown in admission of photographs. — Since the state failed to produce photographs ten days before trial, but the defendant rejected the trial court's offer of a continuance, and since the photographs were merely cumulative of other evidence, there was no prejudice to the defendant shown and no abuse of discretion in admitting the photographs. Brown v. State, 236 Ga. App. 478, 512 S.E.2d 369 (1999).

Even though the prosecutor did not give the defendant sufficient notice of the existence of certain photographs, the defendant was not prejudiced by the admission of the photographs at trial. Corbin v. State, 240 Ga. App. 788, 525 S.E.2d 365 (1999).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault with intent to rape, the fact that the state failed to produce photos of the victim's injuries ten days before trial, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3), was not grounds for reversal as the defendant did not ask for a continuance, did not show prejudice, and did not show that the state acted in bad faith. Murray v. State, 293 Ga. App. 516, 667 S.E.2d 382 (2008).

No harm in admission of booking photographs. — Murder defendant's claim that the defendant was prejudiced by being unable to prepare for the damaging evidence of a booking photograph showing the defendant wearing clothes that were later shown to have the deceased's blood on them was rejected because the photograph was cumulative of other evidence, including testimony regarding the defendant's clothing and the clothing itself. Carson v. State, 843 S.E.2d 421, No. S20A0288, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 348 (2020).

No harm arising out of delay in submission of audiotape. — Since defense counsel was unable to state any harm from the delay in being permitted access to an audiotape presented at trial by the state, the trial court did not err in refusing to exclude the tape from evidence. Sledge v. State, 223 Ga. App. 488, 477 S.E.2d 898 (1996).

Undiscovered audiotape evidence not introduced at trial. — Even if the defendant could show a violation of the discovery rule because a copy of an audiotape of the defendant's confession was not provided to the defendant's attorney, the defendant could show no harm because the tape was not introduced into evidence. Bertholf v. State, 224 Ga. App. 831, 482 S.E.2d 469 (1997).

Admission of photograph detailing injuries. — With regard to the defendant's domestic violence convictions, the trial court did not err in denying the admission into evidence of a photograph detailing the defendant's injuries based on failing to provide inspection of the photograph because any error by the trial court in excluding the photograph was harmless since the photograph was cumulative of both the defendant's testimony that the wife scratched the defendant as well as the wife's testimony that the wife tried to scratch the defendant. Palmer v. State, 330 Ga. App. 679, 769 S.E.2d 107 (2015).

Failure to grant continuance for viewing videotapes. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to grant a continuance to allow the defendant to review a police videotape of the defendant's arrest since the state failed to timely provide the tape during discovery, but the defendant did not show how the defendant was prejudiced by the delay, and, in addition, the court accommodated most of the defendant's concerns by allowing the defendant additional time to review the tape, by prohibiting the state from introducing the tape and allowing the defendant to introduce the tape at the defendant's discretion, and by making the state's witnesses available for cross-examination throughout the trial. Peeples v. State, 234 Ga. App. 454, 507 S.E.2d 197 (1998).

Wiretap communications. — Trial court did not err in admitting statements the defendant's coconspirators made during the commission of a crime because the defendant did not allege or show bad faith under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 and did not request a continuance upon learning of the alleged discovery violation; the defendant proceeded under the reciprocal discovery provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., and audiotapes of wiretap communications that transpired between a confidential informant and the coconspirators were not introduced at trial since the state relied upon U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents' testimony describing the communications. Kohler v. State, 300 Ga. App. 692, 686 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Application

No bad faith in handling expert's ballistics report. — Since a trial court found that there was no bad faith on the part of the state based on the failure of an expert's report to address testing done on a second bullet hole in the victim's shirt, exclusion of the evidence was not a viable option so trial counsel's decision to pursue a mistrial instead was reasonable. Bales v. State, 277 Ga. 713, 594 S.E.2d 644 (2004).

No misconduct in admission of DNA result. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to exclude the DNA results from testing of a bloody knife and tee-shirt in the defendant's trial for murder, which the state sought to introduce three days into the state's case-in-chief, since the state had just received the results and defense counsel acknowledged at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial that there was no evidence of prosecutorial misconduct and it was undisputed that the defendant was afforded an opportunity to interview the witnesses. Cockrell v. State, 281 Ga. 536, 640 S.E.2d 262 (2007).

Service of notice of report adequate. — With regard to a the defendant's trial on various drug charges, the trial court did not err by refusing to exclude the evidence of a crime lab report for the methamphetamine allegedly sold based upon defense counsel not receiving a copy of the report as the record showed that the prosecution provided the defense with a certificate of service showing that the state served defense counsel with the crime lab results and the certificate of service also included the handwritten note that defense counsel was free to inspect the report at any time. The prosecution was not obligated to serve a copy of the lab report upon the defense and the defendant failed to prove bad faith on the part of the state and prejudice to the defense. Rogers v. State, 298 Ga. App. 895, 681 S.E.2d 693 (2009).

Provision of fingerprint reports. — Trial court did not err in admitting testimony and evidence relating to the second and third reports of an investigator who compared the latent fingerprints taken from the scene of the crime with the defendant's fingerprints and confirmed a match of the defendant's fingers because the state did not act in bad faith by failing to provide the second and third reports to the defendant prior to trial; the second report was provided to the defendant in discovery from the state, and the third report revealed newly discovered evidence, which the state did not discover until the investigator enlarged the defendant's fingerprint on charts in the investigator's preparation for trial, and as soon as the state received the third report from the state's investigator, the state provided the report to the defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(c). Mallory v. State, 306 Ga. App. 684, 703 S.E.2d 120 (2010).

Trial court did not err by failing to exclude two fingerprint cards which had not been produced in discovery. Romero v. State, 247 Ga. App. 724, 545 S.E.2d 103 (2001).

Broad latitude in questioning late identified witness. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, the trial court had discretion to exclude an inmate witness upon a showing of prejudice to the state and bad faith by the defense. Implicit in the trial court's decision that the court was permitted to exclude the inmate from testifying is the determination that prejudice and bad faith were shown; however, these determinations were not made and the prosecutor was properly given broad latitude in cross examining the inmate witness. Walker v. State, 268 Ga. App. 669, 602 S.E.2d 351 (2004).

Exclusion of witness was error. — Exclusion of a the defendant's alibi witness was error, although the defendant failed to give the state the required ten-days' notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a), as there was no finding of bad faith by the defendant or prejudice to the state under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6. Ware v. State, 298 Ga. App. 232, 679 S.E.2d 797 (2009).

Trial court erred in excluding a witness's testimony based solely on the fact that the witness was not listed on the defendant's witness list because the defendant was entitled to rely on the state's supplemental witness list as a document furnished to the defendant pursuant to the Criminal Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-10 and was not required to also list the witness on the defendant's own witness list in order to call the witness as a witness at trial; when the trial court excluded the testimony, it was not aware that the witness had been identified by the state on the state's supplemental witness list, but when ruling on the state's objection to the witness because of an alleged discovery violation on the part of the defense. The trial court did not require the state to make the requisite showing of prejudice and bad faith on the part of the defendant as required by the Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, and the state could not have shown prejudice or bad faith on the part of the defendant because the state admitted that it had the witness's report and had researched the validity of the specific tests utilized by the witness, and the error was not harmless since it could not be said that the testimony would not have made a difference in the outcome of what the trial court described as a "very, very close case." Webb v. State, 300 Ga. App. 611, 685 S.E.2d 498 (2009).

Trial court erred in excluding testimony from two witnesses who came forward after the trial had started, because defense counsel could not have disclosed them prior to trial due to a lack of knowledge that they existed, and thus, there was no bad faith on the part of defense counsel. Mitchell v. State, 326 Ga. App. 899, 755 S.E.2d 308 (2014).

Same evidence used at probation revocation and trial. — Trial court did not err by admitting the state's evidence despite various alleged discovery violations because the state disclosed all of the state's evidence to the defendant and provided the defendant with the indictment and witness list during a probation revocation hearing 24 days prior to trial, and the defendant was informed at the revocation hearing that the evidence was the same as the evidence would be at the defendant's impending criminal trial; further, there was no evidence of bad faith on the part of the state. Fields v. State, 310 Ga. App. 455, 714 S.E.2d 45 (2011).

No bad faith in destruction of blood samples. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's claim that the destruction of blood samples constituted a failure by the state to comply with the reciprocal discovery requirements pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 when the defendant failed to show that the state acted in bad faith. Clay v. State, 290 Ga. 822, 725 S.E.2d 260 (2012).

No bad faith in providing gang evidence. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to exclude gang evidence that was provided to the defense on the Friday before and the morning of trial because the trial court found that the prosecutor had not acted in bad faith with regards to the state's statutory discovery obligations, but instead acted promptly as the prosecutor received new evidence; the defendant was not prejudiced by receiving the evidence on the eve of trial; and the late-disclosed evidence did not alter the defendant's theory of defense, which was and continued to be the assertion that, despite the defendant's relationship with the co-indictees, the defendant was merely present with them and did not aid and abet the attempted robbery. Cushenberry v. State, 300 Ga. 190, 794 S.E.2d 165 (2016).

No bad faith in failure to produce jail medical records. — In an aggravated assault case, because there was no showing that the defense's discovery violation in failing to produce jail medical records showing the defendant's injuries was in bad faith as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, the trial court erred in excluding the records, and the error was not harmless given the defendant's testimony that the shooting occurred during a physical confrontation with the defendant's boyfriend and the prosecutor's emphasis on the lack of evidence of the defendant's injuries. Phillips v. State, 347 Ga. App. 147, 817 S.E.2d 711 (2018).

Failure to provide report within ten days prior to trial. — Since the state did not receive and deliver a scientific report until four days before trial, permitting defense counsel to inspect the report during that time was not adequate, and a continuance was warranted. Brady v. State, 233 Ga. App. 287, 503 S.E.2d 906 (1998).

Exclusion of expert's testimony. — Defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by trial counsel's failure to seek the exclusion of an expert's testimony as a sanction for the state's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by excluding, as a remedy, any specific testimony about the three victims.

Application (Cont'd)

Love v. State, 349 Ga. App. 741, 824 S.E.2d 745 (2019).

Service of scientific reports not required for admission. — Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed based on defense counsel failing to object to the testimony of a firearms examiner concerning the results of their ballistics examination because the testimony complained of was elicited by a co-defendant during cross-examination and not by the state so the state had no obligation to provide the defendant with notice of the firearms examiner's opinion and the defendant also failed to show any prejudice or bad faith. Bryant v. State, 296 Ga. 456, 769 S.E.2d 57 (2015).

Trial court abused discretion excluding informal notes of investigator. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in imposing the extreme sanction of evidence exclusion for the state's failure to produce the investigator's notes because the record did not show that the investigator's informal notes, which the state could not produce, were subject to discovery under any of the provisions of Georgia's Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. State v. Brown, 333 Ga. App. 643, 777 S.E.2d 27 (2015).

Exclusion proper due to defendant's failure to preserve evidence. — In a first degree homicide by vehicle case, the exclusion of evidence that the car the defendant was driving had a possible mechanical malfunction was proper as the defendant violated the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., by acting in bad faith in failing to preserve the car for inspection by the state because defense counsel induced the court's order to preserve the car by assuring the court that the defendant's father owned the car and that the car was being preserved for inspection, but those assurances were not true; thus, defense counsel's action was designed to ensure that the court had no opportunity to take additional steps to preserve the car for inspection by the state and to obtain a tactical advantage for the defendant. Moceri v. State, 338 Ga. App. 329, 788 S.E.2d 899 (2016), cert. denied, No. S17C0095, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 210 (Ga. 2017).

Failure to provide birth dates of witnesses. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 in permitting witnesses to testify whose birth dates were not provided to the defendant at least ten days before the trial as required under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8 since: (1) the defendant did not request that the trial court exclude the witnesses' testimony; (2) the witnesses' birth dates were provided to the defense during trial; (3) the defense did not request a continuance to attempt to cure any prejudice from the failure to have the birth dates before trial; and (4) the defense had the opportunity to interview the witnesses before trial. Ehle v. State, 275 Ga. 560, 570 S.E.2d 284 (2002).

Mistrial warranted for conduct of defense counsel.. — Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion for a mistrial as the defendant's failure to disclose all of the defendant's alibi witnesses after the state demanded that the defendant do so, coupled with defense counsel's mentioning in opening statement several witnesses who could place the defendant in another state at the time of the murders for which the defendant was on trial, warranted granting the mistrial because a ruling otherwise would violate the state's right to a fair trial and reward the defendant for the misconduct of the defendant's counsel. Tubbs v. State, 276 Ga. 751, 583 S.E.2d 853 (2003).

Failure to disclose Brady information. — Defendant did not have to show that the defendant would have been acquitted if the defendant had been able to obtain the Brady information; the defendant simply had to show, and did show, that the state's evidentiary suppression undermined confidence in the outcome of the trial. Schofield v. Palmer, 279 Ga. 848, 621 S.E.2d 726 (2005).

Exclusion of telephone log and credit card receipt proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding a telephone log and credit card receipt the defendant produced two weeks after the start of the trial given the finding that the defendant acted in bad faith in failing to provide discovery and that a continuance would unfairly burden the court and the state. Watson v. State, 278 Ga. 763, 604 S.E.2d 804 (2004), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Testimony properly admitted. — Despite the fact that the state failed to notify the defendant of a similar transaction action witness more than ten days before trial, the admission of the testimony was not erroneous as the prosecutor indicated that the defense was informed of the witness as soon as the prosecutor got the evidence and defense counsel was given an opportunity to interview the witness prior to the witness's testimony. Johnson v. State, 322 Ga. App. 612, 744 S.E.2d 903 (2013).

Appeals

Showing of harm required for reversal of conviction. — Defendant could not rely on the erroneous exclusion of the defendant's witness as a basis for reversal of the defendant's conviction on appeal without an offer of proof in the trial record concerning the testimony the defendant expected the witness to give. Hill v. State, 232 Ga. App. 561, 502 S.E.2d 505 (1998).

In order to trigger the harsh sanction of excluding evidence improperly withheld from the defense, there must be a showing of prejudice to the defense and bad faith by the state. Brown v. State, 236 Ga. App. 478, 512 S.E.2d 369 (1999).

Since the defendant made no showing that the state improperly withheld evidence from the defendant or acted in bad faith so as to trigger the imposition of any of the sanctions authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-6-6, the defendant failed to sustain the defendant's appellate burden of establishing how the defendant was harmed by the trial court's ruling regarding the defendant's failure to properly provide written notice to the prosecution under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-2(a). Miller v. State, 235 Ga. App. 724, 510 S.E.2d 560 (1999), appeal dismissed, 264 Ga. App. 801, 592 S.E.2d 450 (2003); Davis v. State, 240 Ga. App. 301, 522 S.E.2d 729 (1999).

Fact that the defendant's first taped interview, in which the defendant admitted furnishing a gun to a minor, was not provided to the defendant until nine days before trial, was harmless error because nothing in the material surprised the defendant as the defendant testified to the same information at the minor's trial. Rollinson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 375, 623 S.E.2d 211 (2005).

Harmless error. — Trial court's exclusion from evidence of two letters sent by a codefendant, after the codefendant's arrest, to the defendant's alibi witness, in which the codefendant recanted the custodial statements identifying the defendant as a participant in a store robbery, on the ground that the letters were not timely disclosed to the prosecution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, even though the trial court made no specific finding that the defendant acted in bad faith and that the prosecution was prejudiced thereby, was harmless error, if any, as evidence was merely cumulative because the codefendant recanted the codefendant's custodial statement at trial. Brown v. State, 268 Ga. App. 24, 601 S.E.2d 405 (2004).

Objection waived. — Defendant waived the right to object to the introduction of a tape recording at trial by failing to object timely and expressly on the grounds that the introduction of the evidence would constitute a violation of any specific provision of the discovery statutes. Arrington v. State, 224 Ga. App. 676, 482 S.E.2d 400 (1997).

Failure to request relief. — Trial court did not err in allowing a witness to testify since the defendant did not request relief available under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-6, but merely stated that the defendant objected on the basis that the defendant was not properly served under the discovery statutes. Williams v. State, 226 Ga. App. 313, 485 S.E.2d 837 (1997).

17-16-7. Statements of witnesses.

No later than ten days prior to trial or at such time as the court permits, or at the time of any post-indictment pretrial evidentiary hearing other than a bond hearing, the prosecution or the defendant shall produce for the opposing party any statement of any witness that is in the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution or in the possession, custody, or control of the defendant or the defendant's counsel that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that the party in possession, custody, or control of the statement intends to call as a witness at trial or at such post-indictment pretrial evidentiary hearing.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-16-7, enacted by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 4; Ga. L. 1995, p. 1250, § 2.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1994, "pretrial" was substituted for "pre-trial" in two places.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Service of statements of witnesses not required. — Language of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 that statements of witnesses be produced does not require that such statements be furnished or served upon the defendant. Lawson v. State, 224 Ga. App. 645, 481 S.E.2d 856 (1997).

Failure of the state to produce oral statements. — Failure of the state to produce oral and unrecorded statements made by the defendant's brother to the police did not violate the state's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7. State v. Scales, 209 Vt. 425, 206 A.3d 1263 (2019).

Because there can be no "possession, custody, or control" of an oral statement, the state had no obligation to produce a statement which had been neither recorded nor committed to writing. Cox v. State, 242 Ga. App. 334, 528 S.E.2d 871 (2000).

State had no obligation to produce a gesture described by the victim as having been made by the defendant, assuming it were possible to do so. Thomas v. State, 249 Ga. App. 556, 548 S.E.2d 71 (2001).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on the state's alleged failure to comply with the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., requirements as the plain terms of that law dictated that the defendant, who allegedly molested the defendant's daughter, was not entitled to the oral, unrecorded statement the daughter provided to a police investigator as the state was required to produce statements within the state's possession, custody, or control and the daughter's unrecorded, oral statement did not qualify. Downs v. State, 257 Ga. App. 696, 572 S.E.2d 54 (2002).

Because no notes were taken during pre-trial interviews with witnesses, the defendant failed to establish that O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-1(1) and 17-16-7 had been violated by the state's failure to produce the written notes. Hunt v. State, 278 Ga. 479, 604 S.E.2d 144 (2004).

No merit existed as to the defendant's assertion that a mistrial was warranted upon the state's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 for withholding an oral statement by the deceased victim because the statement was not recorded or otherwise committed to writing. Buttram v. State, 280 Ga. 595, 631 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

Defendant was not entitled to a mistrial for the state's alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 for withholding an oral statement by a witness because the state had merely interviewed the witness during the state's investigation and any oral statement was not recorded or otherwise committed to writing. Parks v. State, 294 Ga. App. 646, 669 S.E.2d 684 (2008).

With regard to a defendant's convictions on two counts of cruelty to children, the trial court did not err by allowing a caseworker to testify to additional recollections the caseworker realized were not contained in the report that was prepared following an interview with the defendant as the information that the defendant asserted that the defendant should have received before trial did not involve a written statement, a written summary of a statement, or a contemporaneous recording of a statement by the caseworker; therefore, the recollections did not constitute a "statement of a witness" under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1(2), and the state was not obligated to produce the information prior to trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7. Hinds v. State, 296 Ga. App. 80, 673 S.E.2d 598 (2009).

With regard to a defendant's murder conviction, the defendant's claim on appeal that the trial court erred by failing to strike, in its entirety, the testimony of the victim's sibling's friend based on the defendant's assertion that the state violated O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 was found meritless. The statute did not apply to the friend's prior oral statement not recorded or memorialized in any way because it was not, in the words of the statute, "in the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution," thus, the friend's statement did not fall under the purview of the statute. Henley v. State, 285 Ga. 500, 678 S.E.2d 884, cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1076, 130 S. Ct. 800, 175 L. Ed. 2d 559 (2009).

Since there was no evidence in the record that any of the testifying witnesses gave the police or the prosecution a written or recorded statement that was not produced to the defendant, there was no evidence that a discovery violation occurred with regard to witness statements. Although O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 required the state to produce any statement of a witness that was in the possession or control of the state, this requirement applied only to statements that had either been recorded or committed to writing. Walker v. State, 314 Ga. App. 714, 725 S.E.2d 771 (2012).

Admission of a witness's testimony regarding the defendant's oral statement that someone had put something in the defendant's drink was not error as the statement was oral and subject to the disclosure requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 and, even assuming there had been error, it was harmless given the other evidence in the case. Simmons v. State, 321 Ga. App. 743, 743 S.E.2d 434 (2013).

Statutory obligation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 was not triggered when a witness merely made an oral statement and thus, the state was not obliged to inform the defendant that the victim had been taken for a medical exam until the state received written confirmation of the exam. Whatley v. State, 326 Ga. App. 81, 755 S.E.2d 885 (2014).

No bad faith in failing to turn over videotaped statements. — Defendant's new trial motion under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-22 was properly denied as the fact that the state failed to turn over two videotaped statements from the defendant's sons, arising from criminal charges due to a domestic dispute, was based on inadvertence rather than bad faith, there was unimpeached eyewitness testimony from other witnesses that was sufficient to support the defendant's convictions pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8), and there was no showing that the defendant suffered the kind of prejudice that undermined confidence in the outcome of the trial; accordingly, the defendant's Brady rights were not violated and there was no violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-6 and 17-16-7. Ely v. State, 275 Ga. App. 708, 621 S.E.2d 811 (2005).

State did not act in bad faith with regard to disclosure of witness statement. — Because the record supported the trial court's ruling that the state did not act in bad faith with regard to disclosure of a witness's statement, the severe remedies that the defendant sought under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 were not applicable; the defendant had other audiotaped statements of the witness and had interviewed the witness and obtained an affidavit from the witness before trial, and the trial court granted the defendant an overnight continuance to review the additional statement before cross-examining the witness. Jones v. State, 290 Ga. 576, 722 S.E.2d 853 (2012).

When a witness merely makes an oral statement, the obligation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 to produce the statement is not triggered since there can be no "possession, custody, or control" thereof. Forehand v. State, 267 Ga. 254, 477 S.E.2d 560 (1996), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020); Phagan v. State, 268 Ga. 272, 486 S.E.2d 876 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1128, 118 S. Ct. 1079, 140 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1998); Baldwin v. State, 232 Ga. App. 335, 501 S.E.2d 548 (1998).

Victim's testimony that the defendant threatened to kill the victim's family if the victim told about the defendant's molestation of the victim was not required to be revealed before trial because the testimony was not a recorded statement in the possession, custody, or control of the state or prosecution. Frazier v. State, 252 Ga. App. 627, 557 S.E.2d 12 (2001).

State violated neither the discovery statute nor the Brady rule when the state allegedly withheld statements by another codefendant and a fourth man as the other codefendant's statement was elicited by a codefendant's counsel and there was no evidence the state withheld that statement; also, as to the fourth man, the statement was oral, and was neither recorded nor committed to writing other than in notes or summaries prepared by counsel, which meant the state did not have possession or control of the statement for purposes of producing the statement. Burgess v. State, 276 Ga. 185, 576 S.E.2d 863 (2003).

Copying of statements. — O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 does not require the custodian of a document to allow copying; thus, the refusal to allow a party to photocopy a witness statement does not constitute reversible error. Taylor v. State, 272 Ga. 562, 532 S.E.2d 669 (2000).

Summary of statement not required. — Summary of a witness's statement to the prosecutor was not required to be provided to defense counsel. Williams v. State, 226 Ga. App. 313, 485 S.E.2d 837 (1997).

Reference to statement not required. — Even though the state had only a reference in an arrest report to an oral statement from a witness, the trial court did not err in admitting the eyewitness identification testimony over the defendant's objection that O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 had been violated. Thompson v. State, 240 Ga. App. 26, 521 S.E.2d 876 (1999).

Defendant's failure to object to witness' testimony regarding matters not contained in statement. — When, in a murder trial, a witness testified to matters not contained in a summary of the witness's statement prepared by the state, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7, the defendant's failure to object rendered meritless the error alleged on appeal. Moore v. State, 279 Ga. 45, 609 S.E.2d 340 (2005).

Failure to timely disclose written statement. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding a witness as the defendant did not disclose the witness's written statement to the state within ten days of trial; further, the defendant did not include the witness's birth date on the witness list and the state was unable to investigate the witness's criminal record, if any. Clark v. State, 271 Ga. App. 534, 610 S.E.2d 165 (2005).

No duty to disclose. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for mistrial on the grounds of prosecutorial misconduct because the defendant failed to show that the prosecutor violated the law, prejudiced the defense, or committed any act that could be construed as misconduct; there was no evidence in the record that the victim's mother gave the police or the prosecution a written or recorded statement that the victim had told the mother that the victim had lied about the molestation, but if the mother had given an unrecorded oral statement to that effect to the prosecutor, the prosecutor was not obligated under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 to disclose the oral statement to the defense, and it was patent from the opening statement that the defendant intended to offer evidence in the defendant's defense that the victim had lied about the molestation and that some of that evidence would come from the victim's own mother. Chandler v. State, 309 Ga. App. 611, 710 S.E.2d 826 (2011).

Knowing defendant prior to crime. — Defendant's contention that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to move to suppress the identification by a victim prior to trial, object to the in-court identification of the defendant, or move for a mistrial because the state allegedly failed to provide notice that the victim could identify the defendant failed because the defendant knew the victim before the armed robbery, thus, there was an independent basis for the in-court identification, making futile any objection to the testimony. Lane v. State, 324 Ga. App. 303, 750 S.E.2d 381 (2013).

Exclusion of informal notes of investigator. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in imposing the extreme sanction of evidence exclusion for the state's failure to produce the investigator's notes because the record did not show that the investigator's informal notes, which the state could not produce, were subject to discovery under any of the provisions of Georgia's Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. State v. Brown, 333 Ga. App. 643, 777 S.E.2d 27 (2015).

Deficient counsel did not mandate finding that defendant prejudiced. — When defense counsel did not provide the prosecutor with timely notice of the defendant's expert witness or timely provide a copy of the witness's report, as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-4(b)(2), 17-16-7, and 17-16-8(a), and the witness was excluded, the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel; while counsel was deficient, it was not shown that the defendant was prejudiced as another expert testified to essentially the same facts and conclusions as the excluded witness, and referred to the excluded witness's findings, so the excluded witness's testimony would have been cumulative, and it was not shown that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have differed had counsel's performance not been deficient. Mann v. State, 276 Ga. App. 720, 624 S.E.2d 208 (2005).

Failure to disclose ten days prior to trial statements of co-indictee. — State did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-16-7 by not disclosing, ten days before trial, a co-indictee's statement that the defendant threatened the co-indictee because the statement was not known by the state until trial, when the co-indictee and a second co-indictee were placed in the same holding cell. Silverio v. State, 306 Ga. App. 438, 702 S.E.2d 717 (2010).

Failure to prove tape existed of entire witness interview. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion finding no reciprocal discovery violation on the part of the state as to a witness interview because there was no evidence that a recording of the entire interview ever existed as the record showed that the state provided the defendant with a recording of a brief portion of the witness's interview and represented to the trial court that no other portion of that interview was recorded, apparently due to an equipment malfunction. Irving v. State, 351 Ga. App. 779, 833 S.E.2d 162 (2019).

Cited in Hammitt v. State, 225 Ga. App. 21, 482 S.E.2d 437 (1997); Harris v. State, 256 Ga. App. 120, 567 S.E.2d 394 (2002).

(a) The prosecuting attorney, not later than ten days before trial, and the defendant's attorney, within ten days after compliance by the prosecuting attorney but no later than five days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court, shall furnish to the opposing counsel as an officer of the court, in confidence, the names, current locations, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of that party's witnesses, unless for good cause the judge allows an exception to this requirement, in which event the counsel shall be afforded an opportunity to interview such witnesses prior to the witnesses being called to testify.

(b) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to require the prosecuting attorney to furnish the home address, date of birth, or home telephone number of a witness who is a law enforcement officer. Instead, in such cases, the prosecuting attorney shall furnish to the defense attorney the law enforcement officer's current work location and work phone number.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Failure to include coindictee's name on witness list was not reversible error since the defendant was notified a month before trial that the state was dropping charges against the coindictee in exchange for the coindictee's testimony against the defendant. Mize v. State, 269 Ga. 646, 501 S.E.2d 219 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1078, 119 S. Ct. 817, 142 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1999).

Even though a witness's name was not on the state's witness list, the state's formal disclosure of the witness as the confidential informant six weeks prior to trial, combined with: (i) the summary of the witness's testimony found in the search warrant affidavit given to the defendant; (ii) the defendant's admitted knowledge of the witness's identity prior to the formal disclosure; (iii) the defendant's own pretrial reference to the witness as a material witness; and (iv) the defendant's attempts to interview the witness prior to trial, fulfilled the purpose of the witness list rule. McLarty v. State, 238 Ga. App. 27, 516 S.E.2d 818 (1999).

No error occurred in permitting an unlisted witness, a police officer, to testify to facts contained in a police report regarding the defendant's arrest a decade earlier for rape as defense counsel was informed that the police officer would be called to testify if the victim of the attack a decade earlier could not be located, was notified during discovery that the police officer would have to testify, was given reports during discovery that contained the officer's name, and was allowed an opportunity to interview the officer. Rose v. State, 275 Ga. 214, 563 S.E.2d 865 (2002).

State was properly allowed to present a cab driver's testimony, even though the cab driver was not on the witness list, as the state established good cause for not having the cab driver on the witness list by demonstrating that the cab driver fled just before the trial commenced and as the defendant was given the opportunity to interview the cab driver prior to the cab driver testifying at trial. Puga-Cerantes v. State, 281 Ga. 78, 635 S.E.2d 118 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing two witnesses to testify regarding damages done to a business's gate at the defendant's trial for armed robbery, theft of a motor vehicle, and other crimes, who were not identified on the prosecutor's witness list as the manager of the location from which the defendant stole the vehicle and damaged the gate suffered a severe back injury the day before testifying. The trial court properly allowed defense counsel to interview the repairman and the bookkeeper, who did testify as to the gate's damages, and the defendant never requested a continuance. Johnson v. State, 293 Ga. App. 32, 666 S.E.2d 452 (2008).

No request for recess to interview witness. — O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8 was not violated since the state provided the defendants with a copy of the taped statement of a witness on the day it was taken, four days before trial, and with a transcript thereof the following morning, and since, at trial, neither the defendant sought a recess to interview the witness. Johnson v. State, 241 Ga. App. 448, 526 S.E.2d 903 (1999).

No surprise or prejudice. — In a prosecution for armed robbery and furnishing a pistol to a minor, the trial court did not err in a motion in limine to exclude the testimony of a K-9 officer identified as a witness less than ten days before trial because the defendant was neither surprised nor prejudiced by the officer's testimony. Rollinson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 375, 623 S.E.2d 211 (2005).

With regard to the defendant's conviction for burglary, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by allowing a government witness to testify even though the state failed to include the witness on the state's witness list because the witness was not a "surprise" witness or unknown to the defendant; rather, the witness was a key element of the defendant's own explanation for the defendant's presence at the victims' home. Further, the trial court granted defense counsel an opportunity to interview the witness, and counsel asked for no additional relief following that interview, and the defendant did not argue or cite any evidence that the state's failure to list the witness as a witness resulted from bad faith. Luker v. State, 291 Ga. App. 434, 662 S.E.2d 240 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing a new witness for the state to testify at trial even though the state failed to disclose the witness at least ten days before trial in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a) because the defendant did not contend that the state acted in bad faith, and the defendant acknowledged in the defendant's appellate brief that the defendant believed that the state's failure to provide the name of the witness was unintentional; the defendant did not seek an opportunity to interview the witness despite the state's invitation for the defendant to do so. Taylor v. State, 305 Ga. App. 748, 700 S.E.2d 841 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance and permitting the state's witnesses to testify because the defendant did not ask to interview the witnesses before the witnesses testified and did not contend that the defendant was surprised by the witnesses' testimony or prejudiced by not knowing earlier that the witnesses were going to testify; the defendant made no showing that the state acted in bad faith in failing to list the witnesses earlier. Powers v. State, 314 Ga. App. 733, 725 S.E.2d 848 (2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's request for a continuance when the court determined that the second similar transaction was admissible because the record showed months before trial, the state filed notice of the state's intent to introduce that similar transaction, listing the prior offense's case number, date of offense, county of offense, disposition, and victim's name, and defense counsel met with the victim prior to the testimony, but the victim refused to talk to counsel. Arbegast v. State, 332 Ga. App. 414, 773 S.E.2d 283 (2015).

Trial court erred in excluding the defendant's witness from testifying based on the failure to provide the state with a phone number and birth date for the witness because the state already possessed the information on the witness, who had been an occupant of the vehicle during the traffic stop. However, the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Diaz v. State, 348 Ga. App. 256, 820 S.E.2d 249 (2018), cert. denied, S20C0591, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 542 (Ga. 2019).

Birth dates not timely provided to defendant. — Because the defendant did not request a continuance upon denial of a motion to compel based on the state's failure to provide the birth date of a witness until shortly before trial, the defendant waived the right to argue that the trial court erred in allowing the witness to testify. Dickerson v. State, 241 Ga. App. 593, 526 S.E.2d 443 (1999).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 in permitting witnesses to testify whose birth dates were not provided to the defendant at least ten days before the trial, as required under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8, since: (1) the defendant did not request that the trial court exclude the witnesses' testimony; (2) the witnesses' birth dates were provided to the defense during trial; (3) the defense did not request a continuance to attempt to cure any prejudice from the failure to have the birth dates before trial; and (4) the defense had the opportunity to interview the witnesses before trial. Ehle v. State, 275 Ga. 560, 570 S.E.2d 284 (2002).

Failure to disclose birth date to state. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding a witness as the defendant did not disclose the witness's written statement to the state within ten days of trial; further, the defendant did not include the witness's birth date on the witness list and the state was unable to investigate the witness's criminal record, if any. Clark v. State, 271 Ga. App. 534, 610 S.E.2d 165 (2005).

Failure to provide information on witness harmless. — While the state failed to provide the defense with the requisite information on a witness, the trial court found no harm since information as to the witness's criminal history appeared in a transcript provided to the defense. Hammond v. State, 255 Ga. App. 549, 565 S.E.2d 873 (2002).

Failure to provide victim's address harmless. — Trial court properly dismissed the defendant's motion for a mistrial because the court did not abuse the court's discretion by concluding that the state did not act in bad faith by not furnishing the defendant with the victim's complete current address. Further, the defense counsel did not accept the offer to interview the victim under the condition that the victim imposed, and the defendant did not request a continuance. Shields v. State, 264 Ga. App. 232, 590 S.E.2d 217 (2003).

Incorrect contact information. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion in limine to exclude the testimony of two witnesses since the state's witness list provided 17 days prior to trial failed to contain the name of either witness and the list provided ten days prior to trial contained only one name but had incorrect contact information for that witness. Defendant failed to show how the defendant was prejudiced by the late identification or that the outcome would have been different absent such; nor did the defendant request a continuance to cure any prejudice the defendant claimed may have arisen as a result of the state's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a). Morris v. State, 268 Ga. App. 325, 601 S.E.2d 804 (2004).

DNA evidence admitted despite lateness. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to exclude the DNA results from testing of a bloody knife and tee-shirt in the defendant's trial for murder, which the state sought to introduce three days into the state's case-in-chief, since the state had just received the results and the defense counsel acknowledged at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial that there was no evidence of prosecutorial misconduct and it was undisputed that the defendant was afforded an opportunity to interview the witnesses. Cockrell v. State, 281 Ga. 536, 640 S.E.2d 262 (2007).

Affirmative duty of the producing party. — Since the defendant made no showing that the defendant was prejudiced as a result of the state's failure to make a custodial statement available to the defendant prior to trial or that the state acted in bad faith in failing to list a witness, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in permitting the witness to testify. Jones v. State, 243 Ga. App. 351, 532 S.E.2d 120 (2000).

A party charged with producing the statutorily charged information may not rest solely on the fact that the information is not within their possession because the statute imposes an affirmative duty on the producing party to attempt to acquire the information. State v. Dickerson, 273 Ga. 408, 542 S.E.2d 487 (2001).

State provided opportunity to testify. — Although the name of the emergency medical technician (EMT) had not been provided to the state before trial in violation of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8, the EMT should have been allowed to testify after the state was afforded the opportunity to interview the EMT. Massey v. State, 272 Ga. 50, 525 S.E.2d 694 (2000).

Prosecution has no obligation to locate defense witnesses. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's request for a continuance based on the state violating the state's discovery obligations and failing to disclose exculpatory evidence when the state failed to provide the defendant with the transporting officer's out-of-state address because the state, acting in the state's role as the prosecution, has no obligation to locate defense witnesses and the defendant failed to show that any alleged discovery violation caused the defendant harm. Lafavor v. State, 334 Ga. App. 125, 778 S.E.2d 377 (2015).

Deficient performance of counsel does not mandate finding of prejudice. — When defense counsel did not provide the prosecutor with timely notice of the defendant's expert witness or timely provide a copy of the witness's report, as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-4(b)(2), 17-16-7, and 17-16-8(a), and the witness was excluded, the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel; while counsel was deficient, it was not shown that the defendant was prejudiced as another expert testified to essentially the same facts and conclusions as the excluded witness, and referred to the excluded witness's findings, so the excluded witness's testimony would have been cumulative, and it was not shown that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have differed had counsel's performance not been deficient. Mann v. State, 276 Ga. App. 720, 624 S.E.2d 208 (2005).

Timeliness. — One month before trial, the state filed a notice of the state's intent to present nonstatutory aggravating circumstances involving several incidents that occurred while the defendant was in jail awaiting trial; this notice and the supplement to the witness list were not untimely. Brannan v. State, 275 Ga. 70, 561 S.E.2d 414, cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1021, 123 S. Ct. 541, 154 L. Ed. 2d 429 (2002).

With regard to a defendant's malice murder conviction arising from the suffocation death of the defendant's newborn daughter, the trial court did not err in excluding testimony from the defendant's proffered expert witness on police interrogation techniques and false confessions based on the state not being timely notified of that witness and because the area in which the expert would express an opinion had not reached a level of scientific reliability so as to allow the testimony. It was within the trial court's authority to exclude the expert's testimony for the defendant's failure to disclose the expert and there was no showing that the false confession theory and the interrogation method satisfied the evidentiary test in criminal cases set forth in case law. Wright v. State, 285 Ga. 428, 677 S.E.2d 82 (2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1123, 130 S. Ct. 1076, 175 L. Ed. 2d 903 (2010).

No prejudice from denial of continuance after untimely disclosure. — Even if the trial court assigned an incorrect reason for denying the defendant a continuance after the state untimely revealed a confidential informant's identity under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a), the defendant did not show prejudice; defense counsel interviewed the informant and cross-examined the informant extensively about the informant's criminal history. Ingram v. State, 286 Ga. App. 662, 650 S.E.2d 743 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Revelation of expert witnesses. — In a capital murder case in which the defendant was granted ex parte orders for mental health experts to examine the defendant, the trial court erred in revealing to the state the identities of the experts, the experts' areas of practice, and the bases for the examinations; remand was required to assess the likelihood of prejudice and take curative measures. Putnal v. State, 303 Ga. 569, 814 S.E.2d 307 (2018).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to allow an expert to testify that the defendant had post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) on the basis that the defendant did not disclose the expert as an expert witness in a timely fashion as the defendant did not make a proffer of the expert's testimony and, therefore, could not demonstrate prejudice; plus, the defendant testified at trial and informed the jury of the PTSD diagnosis. Keller v. State, 308 Ga. 492, 842 S.E.2d 22 (2020).

Witness excluded. — Trial court had the discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 to exclude witnesses provided by the defendant on the day of trial in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a); bad faith was satisfied because nothing in the record indicated that the defendant did not know of the witnesses, or did not intend to call the witnesses, until the day of the trial, and prejudice was established because the state had no notice of the witnesses until the day of trial and had no opportunity to investigate the witnesses or their testimony. Acey v. State, 281 Ga. App. 197, 635 S.E.2d 814 (2006).

Excluding a witness's testimony on the ground that the defendants did not comply with proper discovery procedures, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a), was harmless error, if error at all, in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendants' guilt. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71 (2009).

Failure to make proffer. — Claim that the trial court abused the court's discretion by excluding the testimony of the defendant's father provided no basis for reversal because the defendant failed to make an offer of proof as to the father's testimony. Clemens v. State, 318 Ga. App. 16, 733 S.E.2d 67 (2012).

Witnesses who never testified. — Although the defendant had sought a mistrial after the prosecutor announced on the fourth day of trial that one disclosed witness had told the prosecutor of additional incriminatory testimony and that a previously undisclosed witness, who had not yet been found, might testify, neither witness ever testified; thus, the denial of the motion for mistrial was moot. Moreover, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a), the trial court allowed the defendant to interview the disclosed witness. Lankford v. State, 295 Ga. App. 590, 672 S.E.2d 534 (2009).

In a case in which the defendant argued that the trial court abused the court's discretion when the court denied the defendant's motion for a mistrial, arguing that the state violated O.C.G.A. § 17-16-8(a) by failing to disclose identifying information concerning a witness, the state did not violate § 17-16-8 since the state could not locate the witness and did not call the witness at trial. Manaois v. State, 300 Ga. App. 176, 684 S.E.2d 315 (2009).

Issue waived. — Defendant waived the issue that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance and permitting the state's witnesses to testify because the defendant withdrew an objection when a substitute officer was called as a witness. Powers v. State, 314 Ga. App. 733, 725 S.E.2d 848 (2012).

17-16-9. Reimbursement for costs.

Any party providing documents or statements to another party under this article shall be reimbursed for the actual cost incurred in providing such documents. If the court has determined the defendant to be indigent, the court shall determine the means of reimbursement.

17-16-10. Material or information already furnished; who may be called as witness.

The defendant need not include in materials and information furnished to the prosecuting attorney under this article any material or information which the prosecuting attorney has already furnished to the defendant under this article. The prosecuting attorney need not include in materials and information furnished to the defendant under this article any material or information which that defendant has already furnished to the prosecuting attorney under this article. Either party may call as a witness any person listed on either the prosecuting attorney's or defendant's witness list.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-16-10, enacted by Ga. L. 1995, p. 1250, § 2.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Trial court erred in excluding a witness's testimony based solely on the fact that the witness was not listed on the defendant's witness list because the defendant was entitled to rely on the state's supplemental witness list as a document furnished to the defendant pursuant to the Criminal Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-10, and was not required to also list the witness on the defendant's own witness list in order to call the witness as a witness at trial; when the trial court excluded the testimony, it was not aware that the witness had been identified by the state on its supplemental witness list, but when ruling on the state's objection to the witness because of an alleged discovery violation on the part of the defense. The trial court did not require the state to make the requisite showing of prejudice and bad faith on the part of the defendant as required by the Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6, and the state could not have shown prejudice or bad faith on the part of the defendant because the state admitted that it had the witness's report and had researched the validity of the specific tests utilized by the witness, and the error was not harmless since it could not be said that the testimony would not have made a difference in the outcome of what the trial court described as a "very, very close case." Webb v. State, 300 Ga. App. 611, 685 S.E.2d 498 (2009).

MISDEMEANOR CASES

17-16-20. Applicability of article.

The provisions of this article shall apply only to misdemeanor cases or to felony cases docketed, indicted, or in which an accusation was returned prior to January 1, 1995, if the prosecuting attorney and the defendant do not agree in writing that the provisions of Article 1 of this chapter shall apply.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discovery applicable to misdemeanor cases. — Discovery provisions applicable to misdemeanor prosecutions are not the same as those applicable to felony prosecutions, and discovery requirements applicable to misdemeanors did not require the state to produce the items that the defendant claimed should have been produced, including police reports, copies of 9-1-1 recordings, crime scene photographs, the victim's criminal history, witness statements and repair records for the property the defendant damaged; the defendant admitted that the state provided the defendant with a copy of the accusation, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21, as well as the state's witness list and a copy of the defendant's criminal record, so under the circumstances, the state complied with the state's discovery obligations. Brooks v. State, 267 Ga. App. 663, 600 S.E.2d 737 (2004).

Witnesses' statements are not required to be made available by prosecutors for discovery by the defendant in a misdemeanor case. Brown v. State, 246 Ga. App. 517, 541 S.E.2d 112 (2000).

17-16-21. Right of the defendant to copy of indictment or accusation and list of witnesses.

Prior to arraignment, every person charged with a criminal offense shall be furnished with a copy of the indictment or accusation and, on demand, with a list of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against such person is founded. Without the consent of the defendant, no witness shall be permitted to testify for the state whose name does not appear on the list of witnesses as furnished to the defendant unless the prosecuting attorney shall state that the evidence sought to be presented is newly discovered evidence which the state was not aware of at the time of its furnishing the defendant with a list of the witnesses.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-16-21, enacted by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 4.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose. — Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21 is to avoid surprises. Mowery v. State, 234 Ga. App. 801, 507 S.E.2d 821 (1998).

Transcending purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21 was to ensure that an accused was not confronted at trial with testimony against the accused from witnesses whom the accused had not had the opportunity to interview prior to trial; the remedies available for a defendant were a continuance or a mistrial. Hill v. State, 258 Ga. App. 339, 574 S.E.2d 394 (2002).

Application of exclusionary rule. — Exclusionary rule of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21 applies only if the state fails altogether to furnish discovery material, and thus, if material is furnished late, the proper remedy may be, in the court's discretion, a continuance upon proper request by the accused. Mowery v. State, 234 Ga. App. 801, 507 S.E.2d 821 (1998).

Discovery applicable to misdemeanor cases. — Discovery provisions applicable to misdemeanor prosecutions are not the same as those applicable to felony prosecutions, and discovery requirements applicable to misdemeanors did not require the state to produce the items that the defendant claimed should have been produced, including police reports, copies of 9-1-1 recordings, crime scene photographs, the victim's criminal history, witness statements and repair records for the property the defendant damaged; the defendant admitted that the state provided the defendant with a copy of the accusation, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21, as well as the state's witness list and a copy of the defendant's criminal record, so under the circumstances, the state complied with the state's discovery obligations. Brooks v. State, 267 Ga. App. 663, 600 S.E.2d 737 (2004).

Dismissals due to failure to provide discovery. — Trial court's dismissal without prejudice as to 16 cases dismissed due to the failure of the state to provide discovery was affirmed because the statute of limitations had not expired on the date of the dismissals and the state could re-accuse those defendants. State v. Banks, 348 Ga. App. 876, 825 S.E.2d 399 (2019).

Witnesses could testify although names not on witness list. — Witnesses whose names were not on the accusation furnished to the defendant could testify because the record did not show that the defendant filed a demand for a list of witnesses prior to arraignment. Satterfield v. State, 228 Ga. App. 89, 491 S.E.2d 189 (1997); Lewis v. State, 246 Ga. App. 170, 539 S.E.2d 859 (2000).

Although the defendant objected to the testimony of a witness on the ground that the witness had not been identified on the list of witnesses supplied by the state, admission of the testimony was within the court's discretion based on the state's claim of surprise. Jackson v. State, 228 Ga. App. 877, 492 S.E.2d 897 (1997).

Since the state did not become aware that the witness had knowledge of the defendant's condition and conduct on the night of the defendant's arrest until after the trial began, there was no error in allowing the state to call the newly discovered witness. Brice v. State, 242 Ga. App. 163, 529 S.E.2d 178 (2000).

Proper identification of witness. — Witness was identified sufficiently to satisfy the requirement that the defendant's counsel be allowed to question the witness prior to trial since the witness's name was misspelled but the witness's correct address was provided. Dill v. State, 235 Ga. App. 265, 508 S.E.2d 739 (1998).

List of witnesses required. — Although O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21 obligates the state to provide the defendant with a list of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the defendant is founded, it does not obligate the state to list unanticipated impeachment witnesses. Brice v. State, 242 Ga. App. 163, 529 S.E.2d 178 (2000).

Failure to file demand for list of witnesses. — When a demand for a list of witnesses was not filed prior to arraignment, the trial court did not err in permitting an unlisted witness to testify over objection. Brown v. State, 246 Ga. App. 517, 541 S.E.2d 112 (2000).

Failure to request continuance when witness list not timely provided. — Defendant waived the defendant's right to assert error in the state's failure to timely provide an updated witness list by failing to seek a continuance; given defense counsel's conduct, the fact that the witness list had been furnished to the defendant, and the defendant's absolute refusal to ask for a continuance, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to exclude the testimony of the witnesses on the updated witness list. Ruff v. State, 266 Ga. App. 694, 598 S.E.2d 362 (2004).

Failure to request continuance after late delivery of transcript. — Defendant was obliged to request a continuance to cure any prejudice which may have resulted from the state's failure to comply with the requirements of the Reciprocal Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-21; any claim of denial of the right to self-representation because the state did not give the defendant a transcript of the probable cause hearing until the day before trial was waived by the defendant's announcement that the defendant was ready for trial. Clark v. State, 278 Ga. App. 412, 629 S.E.2d 103 (2006).

Failure to arraign. — Reversal was required because the state acknowledged that the state could not show that the defendant was formerly arraigned and aware of the charges, and that because the defendant objected to the lack of a formal arraignment, the trial court should have arraigned the defendant. Sapp v. State, 338 Ga. App. 628, 791 S.E.2d 201 (2016).

Cited in Phillips v. State, 289 Ga. App. 281, 656 S.E.2d 905 (2008).

17-16-22. Right of defendant to copy of statement given while in police custody; failure of prosecution to comply; evidence discovered after filing of request.

(a) At least ten days prior to the trial of the case, the defendant shall be entitled to have a copy of any statement given by the defendant while in police custody. The defendant may make such request for a copy of any such statement, in writing, within any reasonable period of time prior to trial.

(b) If the defendant's statement is oral or partially oral, the prosecution shall furnish, in writing, all relevant and material portions of the defendant's statement.

(c) Failure of the prosecution to comply with a defendant's timely written request for a copy of such defendant's statement, whether written or oral, shall result in such statement being excluded and suppressed from the prosecution's use in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal.

(d) If the defendant's statement is oral, no relevant and material, incriminating or inculpatory, portion of the statement of the defendant may be used against the defendant unless it has been previously furnished to the defendant, if a timely written request for a copy of the statement has been made by the defendant.

(e) This Code section shall not apply to evidence discovered after a request has been filed. If a request has been filed, such evidence shall be produced as soon as possible after it has been discovered.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose. — Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-22 is to avoid surprises. Mowery v. State, 234 Ga. App. 801, 507 S.E.2d 821 (1998).

Roadside questioning not custodial statements. — Statements that the defendant challenged were made during roadside questioning after a routine traffic stop before the defendant was formally arrested; therefore, the roadside statements were not custodial statements subject to the production requirements in O.C.G.A. § 17-16-22(a) and (b). Daugherty v. State, 248 Ga. App. 181, 546 S.E.2d 310 (2001).

Application of exclusionary rule. — Exclusionary rule of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-22 applies only if the state fails altogether to furnish discovery material, and thus, if material is furnished late, the proper remedy may be, in the court's discretion, a continuance upon proper request by the accused. Mowery v. State, 234 Ga. App. 801, 507 S.E.2d 821 (1998).

Evidence otherwise admitted without objection. — Even if the state failed to reply to a request for a copy of a uniform traffic citation showing the defendant's refusal to submit to a breath test, any error in admitting the uniform traffic citation into evidence was harmless as the arresting officer testified without objection that the defendant refused to submit to a breath test and the defendant admitted at trial that the defendant refused to take a breath test. Johnson v. State, 234 Ga. App. 58, 506 S.E.2d 212 (1998).

Cited in State v. Banks, 348 Ga. App. 876, 825 S.E.2d 399 (2019).

17-16-23. Right of defendant to copies of written scientific reports; failure to comply.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "written scientific reports" includes, but is not limited to, reports from the Division of Forensic Sciences of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation; an autopsy report by the coroner of a county or by a private pathologist; blood alcohol test results done by a law enforcement agency or a private physician; and similar types of reports that would be used as scientific evidence by the prosecution in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal against the defendant.

(b) In all criminal trials the defendant shall be entitled to have a complete copy of any written scientific reports in the possession of the prosecution which will be introduced in whole or in part against the defendant by the prosecution in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal. The request for a copy of any written scientific reports shall be made by the defendant in writing at arraignment or within any reasonable time prior to trial. If such written request is not made at arraignment, it shall be within the sound discretion of the trial judge to determine in each case what constitutes a reasonable time prior to trial. If the scientific report is in the possession of or available to the prosecuting attorney, the prosecuting attorney must comply with this Code section at least ten days prior to the trial of the case.

(c) Failure by the prosecution to furnish the defendant with a copy of any written scientific report, when a proper and timely written demand has been made by the defendant, shall result in such report being excluded and suppressed from evidence in the prosecution's case-in-chief or in rebuttal.

O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23(b) pertains only to written scientific reports and did not apply if test results were not reduced to writing and the medical examiner gave only oral testimony. Brown v. State, 268 Ga. 354, 490 S.E.2d 75 (1997).

Application of exclusionary rule. — Exclusionary rule of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23 applies only if the state fails altogether to furnish discovery material, and thus, if material is furnished late, the proper remedy may be, in the court's discretion, a continuance upon proper request by the accused. Mowery v. State, 234 Ga. App. 801, 507 S.E.2d 821 (1998).

Certificate of inspection of breath testing instruments. — Certificate of inspection of breath testing instruments required by O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(f) is not a written scientific report within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23. Harmon v. State, 224 Ga. App. 890, 482 S.E.2d 730 (1997); Fantasia v. State, 268 Ga. 512, 491 S.E.2d 318 (1997).

Certificate of Calibration. — Trial court did not err in allowing the state to enter into evidence and conduct direct examination regarding the Certificate of Calibration for the radar device used in the defendant's speeding case without first having provided that certificate to the defendant pursuant to the defendant's discovery request as that certificate was not a "written scientific report" subject to discovery because it did not involve a test generally carried out during the investigation of a crime, but, instead, reflected testing that was done to make sure the radar device was working properly. Putman v. State, 270 Ga. App. 45, 606 S.E.2d 50 (2004).

Source code for breath test machine. — In a DUI case, the defendant was not entitled to discovery of the "source code" used to program a breath test machine. The defendant did not show that the code was in the possession, custody, or control of the state as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-16-1(1) and 17-16-23(b). Hills v. State, 291 Ga. App. 873, 663 S.E.2d 265 (2008).

Breath test results, etc. were included within the terms of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23 and should have been provided to the defendant in a prosecution for driving under the influence. Harmon v. State, 224 Ga. App. 890, 482 S.E.2d 730 (1997); Fantasia v. State, 268 Ga. 512, 491 S.E.2d 318 (1997).

When there was uncontroverted evidence that the defendant was given a copy of breath test results at the time the test was administered, the defendant was not harmed by the failure of the state to provide the results by discovery. Vincent v. State, 228 Ga. App. 691, 492 S.E.2d 604 (1997).

In the absence of a sufficient record, the appellate court would assume that the defendant received all reports regarding blood-alcohol test results to which the defendant was entitled. Self v. State, 232 Ga. App. 735, 503 S.E.2d 625 (1998).

Trial court did not err in failing to exclude evidence of the defendant's breath test results because the state failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23(b), based on the conduct of defense counsel in moving to exclude the documents at trial, after having no objection to the documents at the suppression hearing, and failing to move for a continuance, as counsel's motion to exclude was made as part of a strategy to ambush or trap the state; hence, in view of this conduct and the earlier availability of the documents, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to exclude the test results. Braswell v. State, 281 Ga. App. 500, 636 S.E.2d 689 (2006).

Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to suppress a breath test slip from an intoxilyzer and all testimony about the intoxilyzer because the state was not required to produce the breath test slip to the defendant ten days before trial as a part of discovery since the breath test slip did not constitute a written scientific report within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23; no test or analysis was performed because the sample was insufficient, and the breath test slip did not show any test results but reflected only a measurement of breath volume. State v. Tan, 305 Ga. App. 55, 699 S.E.2d 74 (2010).

Printout reflecting an "insufficient sample," and thus no analysis and no result is not subject to discovery under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23 because if there is no test and no result, there is nothing to discover. State v. Tan, 305 Ga. App. 55, 699 S.E.2d 74 (2010).

State did not violate the state's discovery obligations because the discovery statute only required production of any reports in the possession of the prosecution, and the undisputed evidence in the case was that the intoxilyzer printouts were lost, without any evidence of intentional destruction or bad faith on the part of the state. Jones v. State, 345 Ga. App. 14, 812 S.E.2d 337 (2018).

Horizontal gaze nystagmus test. — Law required exclusion both of a written report and oral testimony regarding a horizontal gaze nystagmus test administered to the defendant since the defendant made a timely written demand for scientific reports and the state redacted the preprinted section of the police report in which the arresting officer hand wrote the results of the test. Rayburn v. State, 234 Ga. App. 482, 506 S.E.2d 876 (1998).

Gas chromatograph printout is not a scientific report. — Printout from a gas chromatograph is a graph or recordation of data and is not a scientific report; therefore, Rayburn v. State, 234 Ga. App. 482, 506 S.E.2d 876 (1998), along with other cases interpreting O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23, do not govern a discovery dispute regarding the printout. Birdsall v. State, 254 Ga. App. 555, 562 S.E.2d 841 (2002).

Admissibility of breath test slip. — Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to suppress a breath test slip from an intoxilyzer and all testimony about the intoxilyzer because no surprise occurred when the defendant's attorney had already been shown the breath test slip and cross-examined a police officer about the slip at the motion hearing, and the state agreed to provide the defendant a copy; although the better practice would have been to provide the defendant a copy of the slip before the trial date, the record demonstrated that the state provided a copy at the hearing on the pretrial motion. State v. Tan, 305 Ga. App. 55, 699 S.E.2d 74 (2010).

Receipt of breath test results from jail staff sufficient. — Court rejected a DUI the defendant's argument that the trial court erred in allowing the state to admit the results of the defendant's breathalyzer test because the state failed to provide a copy of the results to the defendant during discovery in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-23; the uncontroverted evidence indicated that the defendant received a copy of the test results from the jail staff immediately after the results were recorded. Jacobson v. State, 306 Ga. App. 815, 703 S.E.2d 376 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0498, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 582 (Ga. 2011).

Failure to produce independent chemical test of blood. — O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(a)(4), with regard to an independent chemical test of blood, specifies no deadline for requesting full information, no timetable for supplying the information, and no penalty for the state's failure to produce the information. State v. Thompson, 334 Ga. App. 692, 780 S.E.2d 67 (2015).

(2) Prompt notification of release from a county or municipal jail is effected by placing a telephone call to the telephone number provided by the victim and giving notice to the victim or any person answering the telephone who appears to be sui juris or by leaving an appropriate message on a telephone answering machine.

(3) Notification of release from the custody of the state or any county correctional facility shall be in the manner provided by law.

(f) If the court has granted a pretrial release or supersedeas bond, the victim shall have the right to file a written complaint with the prosecuting attorney asserting acts or threats of physical violence or intimidation by the accused or at the accused's direction against the victim or the victim's immediate family. Based on the victim's written complaint or other evidence, the prosecuting attorney may move the court that the bond or personal recognizance of an accused be revoked.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-17-7, enacted by Ga. L. 1995, p. 385, § 2; Ga. L. 2014, p. 866, § 17/SB 340.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Trial court's authority to revoke bond. — Even absent specific bail bond conditions prohibiting contact with a victim, a trial court would have authority under O.C.G.A. § 17-17-7 to revoke a defendant's bond. Clarke v. State, 228 Ga. App. 219, 491 S.E.2d 450 (1997).

17-17-8. Notification by prosecuting attorney of legal procedures and of victim's rights in relation thereto; victims seeking restitution.

(a) Upon initial contact with a victim, a prosecuting attorney shall give prompt notification to the victim of the following:

(1) The procedural steps in processing a criminal case including the right to restitution;

(2) The rights and procedures of victims under this chapter;

(3) Suggested procedures if the victim is subjected to threats or intimidation;

(4) The names and telephone numbers of contact persons at both the office of the custodial authority and in the prosecuting attorney's office; and

(5) The names and telephone numbers of contact persons at the office of the investigating agency where the victim may make application for the return of any of the victim's property that was taken during the course of the investigation, as provided by Code Section 17-5-50.

(b) If requested in writing by the victim and to the extent possible, the prosecuting attorney shall give prompt advance notification of any scheduled court proceedings and notice of any changes to that schedule. Court proceedings shall include, but not be limited to, pretrial commitment hearings, arraignment, motion hearings, trial, sentencing, restitution hearings, appellate review, and post-conviction relief. The prosecuting attorney shall notify all victims of the requirement to make such request in writing.

(c)(1) In the event the victim seeks restitution, the victim shall provide the prosecuting attorney with his or her legal name, address, phone number, social security number, date of birth, and, if the victim has an e-mail address, his or her e-mail address. The victim shall also provide such information, other than a social security number, to the prosecuting attorney for a secondary contact person in the event the victim cannot be reached after reasonable efforts are made to contact such victim. The prosecuting attorney shall advise the victim of any agency that will receive such information and advise the victim that he or she is responsible for updating such information with the prosecuting attorney while the case involving the victim is pending and that he or she should update the agency with such information after a restitution order has been entered.

(2) The prosecuting attorney shall transmit the information collected in paragraph (1) of this subsection to the Department of Corrections, Department of Community Supervision, Department of Juvenile Justice, or the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, as applicable, if an order of restitution is entered.

(3) The information collected pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be treated as confidential and shall not be disclosed to any person outside of the disclosure provided by this subsection; such information shall not be subject to Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, relating to open records, or subject to subpoena, discovery, or introduction into evidence in any civil or criminal proceeding.

17-17-8.1. Procedures for a victim to be interviewed by an accused or accused's attorney or agent; duties and conditions.

(a) A victim shall have the right to refuse to submit to an interview by the accused, the accused's attorney, or an agent of the accused. It shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney to advise a victim that he or she has the right to agree to such an interview or to refuse such an interview.

(b) If a victim agrees to be interviewed, such victim may set conditions for such interview as he or she desires. Conditions may include, but shall not be limited to, the time, date, and location of the interview, what other persons may be present during the interview, any security arrangements for the interview, and whether or not the interview may be recorded. If requested by a victim, the prosecuting attorney or his or her agent may attend the interview. A victim has the right to terminate the interview at any time or to refuse to answer any question during the interview.

(c) The accused, the accused's attorney, and any agent of the accused shall not contact a victim in an unreasonable manner; and if a victim has clearly expressed to any such party a desire not to be contacted, no contact shall be made. When making any permissible contact with the victim, the accused's attorney or an agent of the accused shall make a clear statement that he or she is contacting the victim on behalf of the accused.

(d) For the purposes of this Code section, a peace officer shall not be considered a victim if the act that would have made the officer a victim occurs while the peace officer is acting within the scope of the officer's official duties.

(e) Except as provided in this Code section, the prosecuting attorney shall not take any action to deny an accused's attorney access to a victim for the purpose of interviewing such victim.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-17-8.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2010, p. 214, § 11/HB 567.

17-17-9. Exclusion of testifying victim from criminal proceedings; separate victims' waiting areas.

(a) A victim has the right to be present at all criminal proceedings in which the accused has the right to be present. A victim or member of the immediate family of a victim shall not be excluded from any portion of any hearing, trial, or proceeding pertaining to the offense based solely on the fact that such person is subpoenaed to testify unless it is established that such victim or family member is a material and necessary witness to such hearing, trial, or proceeding and the court finds that there is a substantial probability that such person's presence would impair the conduct of a fair trial. The provisions of this Code section shall not be construed as impairing the authority of a judge to remove a person from a trial or hearing or any portion thereof for the same causes and in the same manner as the rules of court or law provides for the exclusion or removal of the accused. A motion to exclude a victim or family members from the courtroom for any reason other than misconduct shall be made and determined prior to jeopardy attaching.

(b) A victim of a criminal offense who has been or may be subpoenaed to testify at such hearing or trial shall be exempt from the provisions of Code Section 24-6-615 requiring sequestration; provided, however, that the court shall require that the victim be scheduled to testify as early as practical in the proceedings.

(c) If the victim is excluded from the courtroom, the victim shall have the right to wait in an area separate from the accused, from the family and friends of the accused, and from witnesses for the accused during any judicial proceeding involving the accused, provided that such separate area is available and its use in such a manner practical. If such a separate area is not available or practical, the court, upon request of the victim made through the prosecuting attorney, shall attempt to minimize the victim's contact with the accused, the accused's relatives and friends, and witnesses for the accused during any such judicial proceeding.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2010, "the" was inserted preceding "same manner" in the third sentence of subsection (a).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2011, p. 99, § 101/HB 24, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Act shall apply to any motion made or hearing or trial commenced on or after January 1, 2013.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Victim's right to be present at trial. — Trial court did not commit reversible error when the court permitted the state to bring the first victim into the courtroom because evidence of the first victim's condition was clearly relevant to the state's cruelty to children in the first and second degree charges, including that the defendant caused the first victim bodily harm by rendering the first victim's brain, a member of the first victim's body, useless by violently shaking the victim, causing permanent brain damage; the probative value of viewing the victim was not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice; and under the Crime Victims' Bill of Rights statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-17-1 et seq., the first victim had the right to be present at the trial. Freeman v. State, 333 Ga. App. 6, 775 S.E.2d 258 (2015).

Children of deceased victim exempt from sequestration. — Trial court properly excluded the victim's children from the rule of sequestration as either victims or as immediate family members of a victim under the Crime Victims' Bill of Rights, O.C.G.A. § 17-17-1 et seq.. Thompson v. State, 843 S.E.2d 794, No. S20A0245, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 369 (2020).

Victim could testify after being present during trial. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the victim to testify as a rebuttal witness after the defendant testified even though the victim had remained in the courtroom for the entire trial. Percell v. State, 346 Ga. App. 219, 816 S.E.2d 344 (2018).

17-17-9.1. Communications between victim assistance personnel and victims privileged.

Communications between a victim, other than a peace officer, and victim assistance personnel appointed by a prosecuting attorney and any notes, memoranda, or other records made by such victim assistance personnel of such communication shall be considered attorney work product of the prosecuting attorney and not subject to disclosure except where such disclosure is required by law. Such work product shall be subject to other exceptions that apply to attorney work product generally.

17-17-10. Requirement by court that defense counsel not disclose victim information to accused.

As a condition of permitting a response to an inquiry as to the victim's current address, telephone number, or place of employment, the court may require counsel or any other officer of the court, including but not limited to counsel for the defendant, not to transmit or permit transmission to the defendant of the victim's current address, telephone number, or place of employment by the counsel or officer of the court or any employee, agent, or other representative of the counsel or officer of the court.

The prosecuting attorney shall offer the victim the opportunity to express the victim's opinion on the disposition of an accused's case, including the views of the victim regarding:

(1) Plea or sentence negotiations; and

(2) Participation in pretrial or post-conviction diversion programs.

This provision shall not limit any other right created pursuant to state law.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-17-11, enacted by Ga. L. 1995, p. 385, § 2.

17-17-12. Notification to victim of accused's motion for new trial or appeal, release on bail or recognizance, appellate proceedings, and outcome of appeal; notifications regarding death penalty cases; victim's rights retained at new trial or on appeal.

(a) Upon the written request of the victim, the prosecuting attorney shall notify the victim of the following:

(1) That the accused has filed a motion for new trial, an appeal of his or her conviction, or an extraordinary motion for new trial;

(2) Whether the accused has been released on bail or other recognizance pending the disposition of the motion or appeal;

(3) The time and place of any appellate court proceedings relating to the motion or appeal and any changes in the time or place of those proceedings; and

(4) The result of the motion or appeal.

(b) The Attorney General shall notify the prosecuting attorney of the filing of collateral attacks on convictions of this state which are being defended by the Attorney General.

(b.1) In cases in which the accused is convicted of a capital offense and receives the death penalty, the Attorney General shall:

(1) Notify the prosecuting attorney and upon the written request of the victim notify the victim of the filing and disposition of all collateral attacks on such conviction which are being defended by the Attorney General, including, but not limited to, petitions for a writ of habeas corpus, and the time and place of any such proceedings and any changes in the time or place of those proceedings; and

(2) Provide the prosecuting attorney and upon the written request of the victim provide the victim with a report on the status of all pending appeals, collateral attacks, and other litigation concerning such conviction which is being defended by the Attorney General at least every six months until the accused dies or the sentence or conviction is overturned or commuted or otherwise reduced to a sentence other than the death penalty.

(c) In the event the accused is granted a new trial or the conviction is reversed or remanded and the case is returned to the trial court for further proceedings, the victim shall be entitled to request the rights and privileges provided by this chapter.

17-17-12.1. Requests to prevent an accused from sending any form of written, text, or electronic communication to the victim's family, or the victim.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "mail" means any form of written communication, including, but not limited to, letters, cards, postcards, packages, parcels, and e-mail as defined by Code Section 16-9-100, text messaging, and any other form of electronic communication which is knowingly intended to be delivered to or received by a victim, any member of the victim's family, or any member of the victim's household.

(b)(1) A victim shall have the right to request not to receive mail from an inmate who was convicted of committing a criminal offense against such victim or was adjudicated by the juvenile court of having committed a delinquent act or designed felony against such victim.

(2) A victim's right to request not to receive mail from such inmate shall extend to any member of such victim's family or any member of such victim's household during the term of the sentence imposed or dispositional order for such offense.

(3) As soon as practical following a conviction or adjudication, a victim shall be provided with the instructions for requesting that inmate mail be blocked as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section. If the conviction is from a state or superior court, it shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney to provide a victim with such instructions. If the adjudication is from the juvenile court, such instructions shall be provided by the juvenile court.

(c) The Department of Corrections and the Department of Juvenile Justice shall develop and provide to the prosecuting attorneys and juvenile courts, respectively, the procedures a victim shall follow in order to block inmate mail. Such procedures may include secure electronic means provided that an alternate, nonelectronic procedure is available for victims without access to a computer. Such departments shall also develop and implement appropriate administrative sanctions which shall be imposed against an inmate violating the provisions of this Code section.

(d) If a victim submits a request to block inmate mail, the Department of Corrections, in the case of an adult, or the Department of Juvenile Justice, in the case of a juvenile, shall:

(1) Notify any other custodial authority having actual custody of the inmate of the names and addresses of such victim and the family or household members denoted by such victim;

(2) Notify the inmate of the request to have mail blocked and advise the inmate that sending mail directly or through any third party to such victim or the family or household members denoted by such victim is prohibited and will result in appropriate sanctions and review of all outgoing mail; and

(3) Institute such procedures to ensure that the inmate cannot send mail directly or through any third party to such victim or the family or household members denoted by such victim.

(e) Any custodial authority having actual custody of an inmate with mail restrictions shall not knowingly forward mail addressed to any person who requests not to receive mail pursuant to this Code section.

(f) The imposition of sanctions by a custodial authority pursuant to this Code section shall not preclude the imposition of any other remedies provided by law, nor shall such sanctions bar prosecution of the inmate for any criminal offense which may have been committed in sending such mail.

(g) Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, information concerning the names and addresses of a victim, and the family or household members denoted by such victim, who requests that inmate mail be blocked shall not be open to inspection by or made available to the public and shall not be subject to discovery in any civil or criminal case or administrative proceeding unless the court, after notice and a hearing, makes a finding of fact that such information is material and relevant to the case and that such information is not available from any other source.

17-17-13. Notification to victim of impending parole, release for period exceeding 60 days, or pardon; notice of hearing on request to commute death sentence.

The State Board of Pardons and Paroles shall give 20 days' advance notification to a victim whenever it considers making a final decision to grant parole, release a defendant for a period exceeding 60 days, or grant a pardon; and the board shall provide the victim with an opportunity to file a written objection to such action. Within 72 hours of receiving a request to commute a death sentence, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles shall provide notification to a victim of the date set for hearing such request and provide such victim an opportunity to file a written response to such request. No notification to the victim need be given unless the victim has expressed a desire for such notification and has provided the State Board of Pardons and Paroles with a current mailing or e-mail address and telephone number. Failure of the victim to inform the board of a change of address or telephone number shall not void a decision of the board.

17-17-14. Victim required to provide current address and phone number to notifying parties.

(a) It is the right and responsibility of the victim who desires notification under this chapter or under any other notification statute to keep the following informed of the victim's current address and phone number:

(1) The investigating law enforcement agency;

(2) The prosecuting attorney, until final disposition or completion of the appellate and post-conviction process, whichever occurs later;

(3) As directed by the prosecuting attorney, the sheriff if the accused is in the sheriff's custody for pretrial, trial, or post-conviction proceedings; the Department of Corrections if the accused is in the custody of the state; or any county correctional facility if the defendant is sentenced to serve time in a facility which is not a state facility;

(4) The Department of Community Supervision; and

(5) The State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

(b) Current addresses and telephone numbers of victims and their names provided for the purposes of notification pursuant to this chapter or any other notification statute shall be confidential and used solely for

17-17-15. Failure to provide notice not rendering responsible person liable or comprising basis for error; chapter not conferring standing upon victim to participate as party in criminal proceeding; existing rights not affected; waiver of rights by victim.

(a) Failure to provide or to timely provide any of the information or notifications required by this chapter shall not subject the person responsible for such notification or that person's employer to any liability for damages.

(b) Failure to provide a victim with any of the rights required by law shall not give an accused a basis for error in either an appellate action or a post-conviction writ of habeas corpus.

(c)(1) Except as provided in this subsection, this chapter shall not confer upon a victim any standing to participate as a party in a criminal proceeding or to contest the disposition of any charge.

(2)(A) When a victim has made a written request to the prosecuting attorney to be notified of all proceedings and has provided contact information to the prosecuting attorney, and such victim asserts that he or she was not provided notification of a proceeding, he or she may file a motion requesting to be heard on such matter. When a victim has made a written request to the prosecuting attorney to be heard according to this chapter in a criminal proceeding and alleges that he or she was not given such opportunity by the prosecuting attorney or court, such victim may file a motion requesting to be heard on such matter. When a victim alleges that any other provision of this chapter has not been complied with, such victim may file a motion alleging such deficiency and requesting to be heard on such matter.

(B) Such motion shall be filed as soon as possible, but not later than 20 days after the claimed denial. Such motion shall be filed in the criminal case, and the victim shall provide a copy of the motion and hearing notice to the prosecuting attorney and the defendant.

(3) The court may set the victim's motion for a hearing or issue an order disposing of the motion. If the court conducts a hearing, the prosecuting attorney and the defendant shall have a right to be present at such hearing.

(4) The court's decision on all issues of fact and law raised in a motion under this subsection shall be final and shall not be subject to appeal.

(5) A motion filed pursuant to this subsection shall be the only means of raising or enforcing the rights provided under this chapter or Article I, Section I, Paragraph XXX of the Constitution of Georgia.

(6) When the victim's motion alleges potential failure by the prosecuting attorney, the prosecuting attorney may recuse in accordance with Code Section 15-18-5 or 15-18-65, as applicable. When the victim's motion alleges potential failure by the court, the judge may recuse in accordance with Code Section 15-1-8.

(d) The enumeration of these rights shall not be construed to deny or diminish other notification rights granted by state law.

(e) The victim may waive any of the information or notification or other rights provided for by this chapter.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-17-15, enacted by Ga. L. 1995, p. 385, § 2; Ga. L. 2018, p. 920, § 1/SB 127.

The 2018 amendment, effective January 1, 2019, rewrote the provisions of subsection (c), which formerly read: "This chapter does not confer upon a victim any standing to participate as a party in a criminal proceeding or to contest the disposition of any charge."

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2018, p. 920, § 2/SB 127, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that the changes to subsection (c) of this Code section become effective January 1, 2019, upon the ratification of the question presented to the voters at the November 6, 2018 election. The constitutional amendment was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 2018.

17-17-16. Temporary restraining and protective orders.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Course of conduct" spans a series of acts over a period of time, however short, indicating a continuity of purpose.

(2) "Harassment" means a course of conduct directed at a specific person that causes substantial emotional distress in such person.

(b)(1) A superior court, upon application of a prosecuting attorney, shall issue a temporary restraining order prohibiting harassment of a victim or witness in a criminal case if the court finds from specific facts shown by affidavit or by verified complaint that there are reasonable grounds to believe that harassment of an identified victim or witness in a criminal case exists or that such order is necessary to prevent and restrain an offense under Code Section 16-10-32 or 16-10-93.

(2)(A) A temporary restraining order may be issued under this Code section without written or oral notice to the adverse party or such party's attorney in a civil action under this Code section if the court finds, upon written certification of facts by the prosecuting attorney, that such notice should not be required and that there is a reasonable probability that the state will prevail on the merits.

(B) A temporary restraining order issued without notice under this Code section shall be endorsed with the date and hour of issuance and be filed forthwith in the office of the clerk of the court issuing the order.

(C) A temporary restraining order issued under this Code section shall expire at such time, not to exceed ten days from issuance, as the court directs. The court, for good cause shown before expiration of such order, may extend the expiration date of the order for up to ten days or for such longer period agreed to by the adverse party.

(D) When a temporary restraining order is issued without notice, the motion for a protective order shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and takes precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character; and at the hearing, if the prosecuting attorney does not proceed with the application for a protective order, the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order.

(E) If on two days' notice to the prosecuting attorney or on such shorter notice as the court may prescribe, the adverse party appears and moves to dissolve or modify the temporary restraining order, the court shall proceed to hear and determine such motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice require.

(F) A temporary restraining order shall set forth the reasons for the issuance of such order, be specific in terms, and describe in reasonable detail and not by reference to the complaint or other document the act or acts being restrained.

(c)(1) A superior court, upon motion of the prosecuting attorney, shall issue a protective order prohibiting harassment of a victim or witness in a criminal case if the court, after a hearing, finds by a preponderance of the evidence that harassment of an identified victim or witness in a criminal case exists or that such order is necessary to prevent and restrain an offense under Code Section 16-10-32 or 16-10-93.

(2) At the hearing referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection, any adverse party named in the complaint shall have the right to present evidence and cross-examine witnesses.

(3) A protective order shall set forth the reasons for the issuance of such order, be specific in terms, and describe in reasonable detail and not by reference to the complaint or other document the act or acts being restrained.

(4) The court shall set the duration of effect of the protective order for such period as the court determines necessary to prevent harassment of the victim or witness but in no case for a period in excess of three years from the date of such order's issuance. The prosecuting attorney may, at any time within 90 days before the expiration of such order, apply for a new protective order under this Code section.

(d) Article 5 of Chapter 11 of Title 9, relating to depositions and discovery, shall not apply to actions brought pursuant to this Code section.

If you are the victim of rape or forcible sodomy, you have certain rights under the law.

Rape or forcible sodomy by a stranger or a person known to you, including rape or forcible sodomy by a person married to you, is a crime. You can ask the government's lawyer to prosecute a person who has committed a crime. The government pays the cost of prosecuting for crimes.

If you are the victim of rape or forcible sodomy, you should contact a local police department or other law enforcement agency immediately. A police officer will come to take a report and collect evidence. You should keep any clothing you were wearing at the time of the crime as well as any other evidence such as bed sheets. Officers will take you to the hospital for a medical examination. You should not shower or douche before the examination. The law requires that the Georgia Crime Victims Emergency Fund pay for the medical examination to the extent of the cost for the collection of evidence of the crime."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Newspaper photograph was not identification procedure. — To the extent the defendant's motion for mistrial was based on the state's failure to disclose any identification procedure to the defense before trial, the defendant did not show a violation of the state's reciprocal discovery obligations as a witness's viewing of a photograph in a newspaper was not an identification procedure employed by law enforcement. Curry v. State, 305 Ga. 73, 823 S.E.2d 758 (2019).

Allegedly suggestive pretrial encounter must result from police or prosecution action. — Allegedly suggestive pretrial encounter must be the result of either police or prosecution action to have effect on admissibility of subsequent in-court identification. Curry v. State, 305 Ga. 73, 823 S.E.2d 758 (2019).

17-20-2. Written policies for live lineups, photo lineups, and showups.

(a) Not later than July 1, 2016, any law enforcement agency that conducts live lineups, photo lineups, or showups shall adopt written policies for using such procedures for the purpose of determining whether a witness identifies someone as the perpetrator of an alleged crime.

(b) Live lineup, photo lineup, and showup policies shall include the following:

(1) With respect to a live lineup, having an individual who does not know the identity of the suspect conduct the live procedure;

(2) With respect to a photo lineup, having an individual:

(A) Who does not know the identity of the suspect conduct the photo lineup; or

(B) Who knows the identity of the suspect use a procedure in which photographs are placed in folders, randomly shuffled, and then presented to the witness so that the individual conducting such procedure cannot physically see which photograph is being viewed by the witness until the procedure is complete;

(3) Providing the witness with instruction that the perpetrator of the alleged crime may or may not be present in the live lineup or photo lineup;

(4) Composing a live lineup or photo lineup so that the fillers generally resemble the witness's description of the perpetrator of the alleged crime;

(5) Using a minimum of four fillers in a live lineup and a minimum of five fillers in a photo lineup; and

(6) Having the individual conducting a live lineup, photo lineup, or showup seek and document, at the time that an identification of an individual or photograph is made, and in the witness's own words without necessarily referencing a numeric or percentage standard, a clear statement from the witness as to the witness's confidence level that the individual or photograph identified is the individual or photograph of the individual who committed the alleged crime.

(c) All law enforcement agency written policies adopted pursuant to this Code section shall be subject to public disclosure and inspection notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-20-2, enacted by Ga. L. 2015, p. 1046, § 4/SB 94.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Noncompliance. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to move to suppress a photo identification made by one of the victims because noncompliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-20-2 would not result in the automatic exclusion of the identification, and none of the circumstances, including the prosecutor's failure to read an admonition form to the victim prior to handing the victim the phone, amounted to an unduly suggestive lineup procedure. Roseboro v. State, 308 Ga. 428, 841 S.E.2d 706 (2020).

17-20-3. Effect of failure to comply with requirements of this chapter.

The court may consider the failure to comply with the requirements of this chapter with respect to any challenge to an identification; provided, however, that such failure shall not mandate the exclusion of identification evidence.
